Trial date is set for Alzheimer's Care Center

By Jane Lane
Mariner staff

A trial on the town's petition to create the South Shore's first Alzheimer's Care Center on the former George E. Curtis estate is scheduled for 10 a.m. Monday, Jan. 9 in Plymouth County Probate Court.

At that time, members of the Curtis Estate Action Committee will present their plan to build a daycare facility for 18 to 24 Alzheimer's victims in the Jerusalem Road home now owned by the trustees of the Curtis' estate.

According to statistics provided by the Alzheimer's Support Group of the South Shore, Inc., Alzheimer's is a progressive, degenerative disease that attacks the brains of older adults. At this time, there is no cure.

There are more than 45,000 victims of Alzheimer's in this state who slowly deteriorate so they can no longer care for themselves. The Curtis Estate project would provide supervised care for the patients, along with 24-hour supervised weekend care for up to four patients.

In 1931, Curtis died, leaving a will that stated his 53-acre summer estate should be used as a "home and refuge for feeble, deformed or invalid women." Since that time, the property has been occupied by a variety of trustees, their families and others who have rented the main house at 600 Jerusalem Road, an adjacent barn, and homes at 15 and 17 Black Rock Road.

The trustees are now hoping to break the terms of Curtis' will by petitioning the probabte court for a Cy Pres, in order to sell the property, and add it to the $1.2 million they hold in liquid assets. They

New group works for needs of the elderly

By Alison Cohen
Mariner correspondent

You could call it the graying of Cohasset. Almost one-quarter of the residents are senior citizens, and a rapidly increasing percentage of them are over 75. Meeting their needs will be more important as time goes by.

It will also be more expensive. And as the state and federal government continue to cut local aid, it will become harder for the town to make up the difference. Luckily for Cohasset's older citizens, some neighbors won't let those needs go unmet.

In the tradition of Friends of the Library and the Parent School Organization, a private non-profit group has sprung up to fill the gap for the Council on Aging and other organizations working with the over-60 set.

The group formed informally a little more than a year ago to try to raise money to purchase a new shuttle van that would be handicap accessible. The group couldn't overcome some of the technical and insurance problems, but one defeat didn't deter the nucleus of the group.

They started with only two people and some big ideas, but by June of the past year they had grown to the present contingent of 30. President Karen Corcoran intends to have more than 100 members before the new year is out.

The group is officially known as Friends of the Council on Aging, Inc. Like the library's Friends and the PSO, they are separate and independent of the Council. Their charitable endeavors are also available to other organizations that exist in order to "advance the interests, well-being, and enjoyment of the citizens of Cohasset who are 60 years of age and over."

"We exist to supplement and increase the services available, not to take over the town's responsibilities," cautioned Corcoran.

Current officers and committee chairs include, Corcoran, Jill O'Donnell, Marge Murphy, Margaret Smart, Peter Logan, Paul Donovan, Chartis Langmaid, Cornelia O'Malley, and Alice Daunt.

The fledgling group has already made a difference.

"Thanks to some very generous donations, we've been able to help," said Corcoran. "As soon as we

Cohasset's week

17 town posts open

Beginning January 8, nomination papers for 17 town offices will be available at the town clerk's office at town hall.

The town election will be held April 14. The last day for candidates to obtain nomination papers will be Wednesday, Feb. 21.

The positions available for nomination include the following: Selectmen - two positions for three years each, Burtram Pratt and Martha Gjesteby; Moderator, one position for three years, William Weeks; Town Clerk, one position for three years, Frances Marks; Assessors, one position for three years, James Lagrotteria; Treasurer-Collector, one position for three years, Elizabeth Ripley; Highway Surveyor, one position for three years, Harold Litchfield.

School Committee, one position for three years, Nancy Sandell; Trustees of Paul Pratt Memorial Library, three positions for three years each, Edward Atkinson, Sheila Evans, and Dorothy McNulty; Board of Health, one position for three years, William Baird; Planning Board, one position for five years, John O'Toole; Water Commissioners, one position for three years, William Montuouri; Sewer Commissioners, one position for five years, Edward Guild; Recreation Commission, one position for five years, Stephen Endris; Cohasset Housing Authority, one position for five years, Stephen Wigmore.

Fifty signatures are necessary to have a candidate's name placed on the ballot. Campaign forms, available at the town clerk's office, must also be completed.

The census is here

Town Census forms are in the mail.

Return the forms immediately to the Town Clerk's office. Compliance with this state requirement provides proof of residence to protect voting rights, veteran's bonus, housing for the elderly and related benefits as well as providing information for selection of jurors.

For your convenience, the dog forms are enclosed. Dog licenses are due Jan. 1, 1990 and will be valid through Dec. 31, 1990. Note the price change — $8 for dogs spayed or neutered and $15 for female and male dogs. Fill out and return the form with fee and rabies certificate. If paying by check, make check payable to the Town of Cohasset.

If any resident has not received a form or has any questions, call the Town Clerk's office for assistance at 383-9900, ext. 106 or 107.

Abatement requests reviewed

At their meeting December 21, the Board of Assessors were able to review abatement applications for the first time.

Chairman Jim Lagrotteria, divided the first 275 applications among the three assessors. More than 600 were submitted to the office. Although 15 days had expired since the deadline date for filing, the assessors were unable to view applications until they were duly stamped, recorded and verified as to whether or not the first half tax payment had been made.

The 600 include all Statutory and Real Estate applications received by the assessors. There were in addition nine applications which were submitted after the deadline, and were ruled ineligible.

It was agreed that all applications will be reviewed in the order in which they were received and logged, ie: 1 first, 2 second etc. Since the assessors, by state statute have only 90 days in which to act, it is possible that they will not have sufficient time to review each application individually. The process has been impeded because many home owners did not state clearly the reason for the filing of the application and therefore, the assessors have no written basis from which to review the application.

The board agreed that they would continue to meet weekly, rather than bi-monthly, in order to expedite the process and act on as many abatements as possible. Their review will be in strict accordance with Chapter 59 of the State Statutes allowing for sales information in the years of 1986, 87 and 88 only. And further, since certification by the State was received on land values, no exception will be made to the approved land schedules, according to chairman James Lagrotteria.

In the event a resident's application is denied, the homeowner has the right to file an appeal with the State Appelate Tax Board. The assessors have prepared an information sheet, available at their office, which outlines the procedure for filing such an appeal.

Three named to committees

Three committee appointments were made by selectmen this week.

They voted to accept the resignation of Peter Whittemore from the water resources subcommittee of the South Shore Coalition. Deborah Shad was named to replace the former member.

Selectmen accepted the resignation of Herbert Crehan from the Milliken/Lillard renovation committee. Larry Shultz will replace him on that committee.

Selectmen also voted to upgrade zoning board of appeals associate member Mark DeGiacomo to a regular member of that board. They have yet to name an associate member to replace DeGiacomo.

Selectmen commend Leonard

Selectmen will write a letter of commendation to plumbing inspector Robert Leonard for work he accomplished at the site of an Atlantic Avenue house fire last month.

According to a letter written by building inspector Bob Egan, Leonard worked for two hours in sub-zero temperatures, checking the mercury levels in the pipes at a home which was seriously damaged by a second-story fire. For all his careful work, Leonard charged the standard inspection fee of $13, according to Egan.

Selectmen commended the longtime town employee, and said they would forward a letter of commendation for his deeds.

ATTENTION: ARE YOU 50+ POUNDS OVERWEIGHT AND READY TO LEARN ABOUT...

The OPTIFAST® Program

Affiliated With South Shore Hospital

1. Is there a difference in the dieting needs of the obese compared to those who just want to lose a few pounds? Yes. It is desirable for the obese to lose weight quickly to gain a sense of accomplishment, a key activating element. Traditional reducing diets, on which 1-1/2 to 2-1/2 pounds per week are lost may work for those slightly overweight. However, obese people are likely to lose motivation before they lose weight on such diets.

2. With the odds seemingly against the obese, is there really any effective treatment? Yes. Most researchers agree that sensible treatment should involve a multidisciplinary approach that decreases calorie intake, increases energy output through exercise and teaches behavior modification to maintain weight loss permanently. The Optifast® Program, combines a medically supervised, supplemented fast on which patients safely lose 2-5 pounds per week, with behavior modification, nutrition education and exercise education. The program, developed by Sandoz Nutrition, is available solely through hospitals and multi-specialty clinics. To be accepted into the program, individuals must be highly motivated and free of contraindicating health problems. This program, although an unprecedented medical success, may not be the program for you at this time in your life. This is not a "pay your membership", or "sign up" approach for every 50 pounds or more overweight person. The Optifast® Program is a highly structured, 26 week program of supplemented fasting, refeeding and stabilization. The program provides a unique combination of medical monitoring by a physician and a registered nurse, group sessions coordinated by a licensed psychologist and education by registered dieticians. The candidate for the program must be ready to make a commitment of time, money, and lifestyle change.

3. Why is behavior modification so important? Behavior modification helps the obese change the habits that make them overweight. It contributes to effective weight reduction and, perhaps more important, weight maintenance. The ultimate goal for all patients is to learn how to achieve dietary self-control by understanding and manipulating the factors interfering with adherence to their low-fat eating plan.

4. What is the role of exercise in weight reduction? Overeating and inactivity are partners in obesity. Incorporating regular, moderate exercise into one's lifestyle may contribute to weight loss in several ways. It burns calories, burning fat and building muscle. It also speeds up the rate at which those calories are burned, helping counteract the slowing of metabolism the body initiates when the obese person goes on a diet. Physical activity also helps people feel better about themselves, and encourages them to adhere to a weight loss program. Experts note that neither dieting, nor exercise alone are as effective in weight reduction as a combination of both.

5. How does the cycle of weight loss and gain so many dieters experience affect obesity? Studies show that repeat dieters have a tougher time losing and keeping off weight than those who have not dieted in the past. In a University of Pennsylvania Obesity Research Group study, laboratory rats on a weight loss diet took 21 days to lose a specific amount of weight and 46 days to regain it. When subjected to a second round of dieting, they took 40 days to lose the same amount of weight but gained it back in only 14 days. In dieting, they lost both fat and muscle. However, they gained back proportionately more fat than they had lost. Scientists think this may be due to physiological changes that prompt the body to slow the rate at which it burns calories to maintain vital processes.

6. What is the benefit of a modified fast? Research has shown that fasting is one of the most effective methods of losing weight. But prolonged fasting can result in many complications, including demineralization of bone, muscle wasting, protein losses, fatigue and loss of a sense of well being. With a "modified" fast, however, the patient gets the benefits of a rapid weight loss, diminished appetite and increased energy, with few, reversible, and mild complications.

7. What other benefits can patients expect? Blood pressure levels improve in the majority of patients. The vast majority also experience an improvement in blood sugar level, and quite often Type II diabetics achieve an acceptable blood sugar level without medication. In addition, most patients report an improved feeling of well-being marked by reduction in shortness of breath, relief of back and joint pain, and an increase in endurance and agility.

8. How does a patient begin the program? The first step is to attend a Free, no Obligation, Orientation at South Shore Hospital. During the orientation all aspects of the program are presented in depth by the Program Director, David P. McQuaid, Medical Director, Dr. Susan Page and Dr. Jed Mehegan, behavioral psychologist.

9. Then what? Then, it's ABC.

A. The Supplemented Fasting Phase last for 12 weeks.

During this phase you will be put on a very low calorie diet that will consist solely of the Optifast® formulation. The formulation comes in a variety of flavors, is nutritionally balanced, and contains 100% of the daily recommended requirements of protein, vitamins and minerals. There will be weekly consultations to monitor your safety and progress. In addition, at your weekly sessions, you will participate in a behavior modification group.

B. The Refeeding and Stabilization Phase lasts for 13 weeks. During refeeding you will be gradually reintroduced to regular food and withdrawn from the Optifast® formulation. Weekly medical consultations and group behavior modification sessions will continue. Most patients continue to lose weight during this period. Once solid foods have been completely reintroduced into your diet, you will move into stabilization. Relapse prevention techniques are stressed during this period as you gain confidence necessary to maintain your weight loss.

C. Maintenance: An Additional Support.

Following stabilization, the additional support by weight maintenance sessions will be provided. Statistics show that people who do so experience continued success.

Town wins in land court

The town will be getting a much-needed windfall in the next fiscal year.

Town Counsel Richard Henderson explained that the town recently won two tax title cases in Norfolk County land court. The settlement amounts to $258,000, he said, which cannot be used until the next fiscal year.

The first settlement will require the delinquent taxpayer to pay the town $4,000 each month. The second settlement, for $128,000, must be paid to the town by February 2.

Level funding not possible

Level funding the town counsel's budget for next year is not realistic, according to attorney Richard Henderson.

There are two major pieces of unresolved litigation, Henderson warned selectmen. And if they come to trial this year, it would require financing for special legal counsel.

The litigation involves the town's lawsuit against the state to develop an alternative sewer system, and the board of health's dispute against the commercial landfill known as Cohasset Heights Ltd. Because a sewer system has yet to be built, there is a danger that this litigation could be activated, he said.

Henderson also warned that the health board's longstanding dispute with the commercial landfill could require special counsel since it is also unresolved.

Town counsel's proposed budget for next year is the same for the current year, which excludes any payments for special counsel.

In addition, there are 600 tax abatement requests filed with the assessors office. If only ten percent reach the appellate court level, that means 60 additional court cases for town counsel, he explained.

Henderson suggested that the health board and sewer commission write to selectmen, outlining their anticipated legal needs for the next year. He will talk to the boards about the status of their future legal needs.

Selectmen refuse fire budget

Selectmen refused this week to review a proposed FY91 budget submitted by Fire Chief Daniel Brock.

"This is not in the proper form, and the advisory committee will not accept it," said chairman Burt Pratt. Selectmen must review that budget before it is submitted to the advisory committee for a final review and recommendation.

"It's a waste of time to go through the first half of this budget - it's out of space. I won't consider it," he added.

Pratt noted that in an effort to level-fund next year's budget as required by the advisory committee, the chief had simply reduced the department's rental of fire hydrants. The department was warned last year that the rental amount could not be reduced, Pratt noted. The selectman said the remainder of the budget was not completed as required by the advisory committee.

"This budget is dealing with apples and oranges," Selectman Martha Gjesteby said, noting that appropriations for FY90 are not included so comparisons between the current budget and next year's requests cannot be made.

Selectmen voted not to consider the entire budget proposal until it is submitted by Chief Brock in the proper form. Chief Brock argued that the form was the same given to him by the advisory committee. Selectman Rocco Laugelle voted against the delay, saying the board could review parts of the budget, while delaying those sections that are not clear.

Candidates' corner . . .

Hussey endorsed

State Senate candidate Don Hussey recently attended the Region five district conference regarding the February senatorial delegate selection process.

Also discussed was the upcoming statewide Republican Convention to be held in March, 1990.

Candidate Hussey recently completed a program sponsored by the Foundation for Economic Research which promotes fiscal responsibility in state government.

Hussey was endorsed by the Massachusetts Taxpayers Committee at their meeting last week.

"We are now beginning to organize volunteer committees from each of the seven towns in this Senate District which includes the towns of Weymouth, Scituate, Marshfield, Duxbury, Hull, Hingham, and Cohasset," said Hussey.

Anyone wishing to join the 'Citizens for Hussey,' call 749-5117.

Ambler files tuition bill

Rep. Robert B. Ambler (D-Weymouth) filed legislation which would establish the Massachusetts Prepaid College Program. The program would allow parents and relatives to prepay the cost of public university tuition at today's rates for a child's future post secondary education, he said.

The program includes a number of different payment plans which will allow parents to choose a method of payment most comfortable to them. The monies paid into the program will be invested in a fund set up exclusively for those enrolled in the program.

"We all recognize the growing importance of a college education," Rep. Ambler commented. "The purpose of this program is to make the attainment of a university degree more of a reality."

have indicated their intent to donate the money to various charities.

Rather than allowing the land to be sold to developers, the Curtis Estate Action Committee has proposed developing the Alzheimer's facility at 600 Jerusalem Road. The two homes along Black Rock Road would be renovated and rented as a single-family and two-family dwellings.

In addition, about 40 acres of unbuildable land, appraised at about $5,000 per acre, could be sold to the Cohasset Conservation Trust for passive recreational use.

According to action committee member Joseph McElroy, the plans could be completed using the $1.2 million in liquid assets, along with financial support from the Visiting Nurse Association, and with various fundraising methods, including a cable television telethon.

"It's a do-able plan," McElroy told selectmen Tuesday night. At this point, the committee and its supporters are "guardedly optimistic" about their chances for breaking

The Alzheimer's project will be jointly operated by the Alzheimer's Disease Support Group of the South Shore, Inc. along with the Sherrill House, an affiliate of the Deaconness Hospital of Boston.

The plan has been endorsed by several local officials, including the board of selectmen, conservation commission, and the fair housing committee. The state attorney general is in support of the action committee's proposal, along with Philip Johnston, secretary for state Human Services.

McElroy told selectmen the attorney general's support is surprising, considering a preliminary decision two years ago which indicated his endorsement of the trustee's petition to break the Curtis will. "He now believes the Alzheimer's care facility has a greater association with Mr. Curtis' will," McElroy said.

Richard Allen, from the state attorney general's office for public charities, will present the town's petition to the court next week.

All indications are that Judge James Lawton will render a decision following Monday's trial, McElroy said, explaining that the trustees have asked for a resolution to this two-year impasse.

"I expect it will result in the first Alzheimer's care facility on the South Shore," he said.

McElroy explained that the renovations will be completed to the three homes by using the $1.2 million in liquid assets, in addition to an estimated $100,000 to $200,000 from the sale of the conservation land. Foundation grants and fundraising should net an additional $250,000, the committee estimates.

A new addition would be added to the original main house on the estate, to provide for the 18 to 24-person daycare program. A four-person weekend respite program for Alzheimer's victims would also be included in the home at 600 Jerusalem Road.

The second floor of the house would be used for a community resource center with office and meeting rooms for the Alzheimer's Support Group of the South Shore, Inc.

Using a grant the town of Cohasset obtained from the state Executive Office of Communities and Development, an extensive study of the property's soil conditions was undertaken. Based on those tests, it was determined that no new septic systems could be constructed, and therefore the committee's plans would have to center on the property's three existing structures.

"We all appreciate the enormous amount of work that Joe (McElroy) and his committee has done over the past two years," Selectman Ned Tebbetts noted.

And Selectman Diana Kornet noted that although the committee was sanctioned by the town, it operates as an independent group. The work they have accomplished thus far, she said, "is purely out of the good of their heart and the land."

McElroy urged anyone who is interested in attending the Jan. 9 trial, should contact him for transportation to the Plymouth courthouse.

we get some money in, it goes out."

The programs and services that the Friends have supported are varied.

They help with the mailing costs of the newsletter that goes to every senior in Cohasset.

"This is probably the most important communication link for seniors," said Corcoran.

They also provided funding for an answering service for the senior center's telephone.

The Friends donated money to the South Shore Coalition for Transportation's Project Outbound.

Project Outbound provides recreational transportation for handicapped or frail elderly who are homebound. Through the donation that the Friends made, nine wheelchair-bound elderly got to go to a party sponsored by the senior center.

"A couple of the people [that Project Outbound served] had not been out in two years," said Corcoran. "The senior shuttle van is not handicap accessible."

Corcoran wishes that more people in Cohasset were aware that even the affluent elderly can be isolated and lonely.

"They move here to be with their family," she said, "but then it's hard for them to make friends."

"There are a lot of handicapped, a lot of frail elderly," she continued. "There are two nursing homes in Cohasset."

Corcoran believes that the senior center is essential for meeting the needs of the senior citizens of Cohasset. Unfortunately, the limited space that the center rents at the community center is not able to meet the needs of the people who are currently using it, and that doesn't begin to approach the number of residents who are eligible to participate in the activities.

"There's not enough space. There's one large function room and two offices," Corcoran said of the space. "We're lucky to have the churches letting [the seniors] use their halls and recreation rooms."

Corcoran and the Friends are gearing up for the day when Cohasset has a separate center for the seniors. They believe that there is a need for space for general socializing, for classes and lectures, and for the senior luncheons.

A new center won't be a reality for a while, but the fundraising group will be ready when senior citizens are.

Karen Corcoran

"It's down the road," said Corcoran. "It's going to take a lot of money. This is what will make our group much more important."

In the meantime, the group is trying to pull in more members and money for some smaller projects and needs.

The next public meeting of the group is slated for Saturday, Jan. 13 at 10:00 a.m. The major focus will be fundraising.

"We're planning for a large spring fundraiser," Corcoran said. The group is toying with a few ideas, but is anxious to draw in new members with suggestions.

Becoming a member is easy and painless.

"The dues are only five dollars a year, and the general membership only meets four times," said Corcoran. The fundraising committee is hungry for new members.

"Sometimes it's not even money," said Corcoran. "Sometimes there are people out there with things to donate."

Right now the group is looking for the following things for the senior center:

- a piano for parties, sing-a-longs, and lessons;
- a cabinet for the television and VCR;
- a microphone with an amplifier and a lectern;
- a 100 cup coffee urn; and
- a 9 x 12 rug.

If you have something to donate or want to get involved, call Karen Corcoran at 383-6767 for more information.

One to One fitness

"One-to-One" is a personal fitness center located at 9 Depot Court, and managed by Thomas Munro.

The concept behind "One-to-One" is to offer its clients the privacy and attention of a personal trainer along with state-of-the-art training equipment. Unlike personal trainers who come to your home with a few weights, "One-to-One" is a complete facility with modern equipment for individual use.

"One-to-One" tailors a program to fit the clients' needs whether it is weight-loss, strengthening, body shaping or toning. "One-to-One" operates by appointment only from 8 a.m. to 8 p.m. Monday through Saturday. Call 383-6465 for an appointment.

"One-to-One" also offers massage therapy with Eric Watkins, a certified muscular therapist. Watkins specializes in deep tissue work for chronic pain due to contracted muscle tissue. Sports massage is the perfect complement to your training program.

Gourmet-Decorators to meet

The Scituate Gourmet — Decorator Guild will meet Tuesday, Jan. 9, 1990 at the First Trinitarian Congregational Church, at 8 p.m., on Country Way in Scituate.

The meeting is entitled "Stop and Shop Tour" and will feature Cohasset nutritionist Patricia Messing who will speak on cutting calories and dieting with special emphasis on low cholesterol cooking.

Dessert will be served and information about future members will be available. Guests are welcome for a fee of $5 payable at the door.

Art courses for January

The South Shore Art Center, 119 Ripley Road, is holding workshops and demonstrations during January.

Watercolor Workshop taught by Ted Minchin will meet for three days January 16 to 18 from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m. Through Minchin's planned approach to watercolor, students learn to focus on spontaneous, confident paintings. Learn, also to break "painter's block" and return to original inspiration.

Deep Oval Flower Basket taught by Dianne Stanton will meet Friday, Jan. 19 from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. This large basket starts with a round spoked base which is 'kicked up' in the center. It is completed by molding and weaving the sides in a twill pattern with dyed weavers.

In January, there will be two demonstrations which complement the current exhibition: Connecting-Hillier, Nason, Peters in the Bancroft Gallery from Jan. 5 through Feb. 16. Watercolor Landscape Demonstration with Murray Wentworth will meet at 2:30 p.m. Sunday, Jan. 14. Wentworth, an area artist, will demonstrate his style of painting. There will be ample time for discussion and the completed landscape will be raffled at the end of the time.

Portraiture in Oils Demonstration with Clement Micarelli will meet at 2:30 p.m. Sunday, Jan. 21. Micarelli will lead the audience through the fascinating process of painting a portrait in oils. A model will be chosen by lots from the audience and will receive the original portrait, donated by the artist.

Pre-registration is required for all courses, workshops and demonstrations. To register, to receive a brochure or for more information, call the art center weekdays from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. at 383-9548.

Birth and Beyond classes

Birth and Beyond announces the winter session of perinatal educational and support programs. Birth and Beyond offers a comprehensive program that addresses the unique needs and concerns that emerge during the childbearing year. Classes are offered in childbirth, lactation, and parenting.

Breastfeeding Basics is a 3 hour prenatal workshop. Breastfeeding success strategies are discussed and will include information on preparation, nutrition, realistic expectations, expression and storage of milk. Unlimited telephone consultation following birth is included in workshop fee.

Baby Talk I is a class for new mothers and their baby. This class will provide information that will enhance parent-infant relationships and will help Mom develop realistic expectations of the newborn. Topics to be presented include baby's behavior such as crying and sleeping, infant care activities such as feeding, bathing, infant growth and development , and coping with fatigue and tiredness. Baby age group will be 2 weeks to 6 months.

Are You Ready? A 2 hour workshop that focuses on concerns of first time parents preparing to bring a newborn into their home. Topics for discussion: newborn appearance, behavior, abilities and needs, layette equipment, feeding choices, parenting transition and more. For more information or to register call Rebecca A. Fay, RN, ACCE, IBCLC at 545-7020.

Auditions for 'Baby'

That New Theatre of Norwell would like to give a final reminder that auditions for the musical-comedy "Baby" will take place on Thursday, Jan. 4 from 6:30-9:30 p.m. at the First Trinitarian Congregational Church on Country Way in Scituate.

The group is looking for three males and three females (each to portray characters in their early 20's, mid-30's and mid-late 40's), and a small chorus/dance section to present the David Shire/Richard Maltby, Jr. musical .

Auditioners should bring a prepared song and scripts will be provided. "Baby" will be TNT's fourth offering of their second season, and will be presented four evenings beginning Feb. 22, just a month after their next musical, "The Rink" is presented. Rehearsals for "Baby" begin Jan. 22, and will be on weeknights.

The production is being directed by Donald S. Capen and Michele Pecoraro, with musical direction by Margo Euler.

❑More baby news! Kathy (Andrews) and Scott Muir gave birth to a baby boy on December 16 in Hawaii! Scott is in the service, stationed at the Schofield Barracks. Anyway Timothy Armstrong Muir weighed 6 lbs. 10 ozs. and is the grandson of Joe and Edwina Migliaccio of Ripley Road, and Bob and Marge Muir, formerly of Reservoir Road, now living in Florida. Now the Migliaccios will have to go, both to get warm and to see their grandson!

❑There's a very special man around town, whom everyone adores and it is time to wish him a happy birthday! Happy 30th to Bobby Magner, have a wonderful year!

❑A new shop is opening in Scituate Harbor this month, and it is being readied right now "for your amazement and pleasure." It will be called the Scituate Harbor Exchange, located at 157 Front Street and they want you to turn your closets into cash! As they say "why not convert your unwanted gifts, the bric-a-brac your Aunt Mary Margaret gave you 5 years ago and clothing that no longer fits into hard cash?" More good news, you don't even have to leave your home to do it, they will come and get it! More information will follow, but you can give them a call at 545-3860.

❑Congratulations go to Irirangi Bloomfield, a self-employed researcher and writer, who was elected a member of the New England Baptist Health Care Corporation.

❑We got the nicest Christmas Card from Frank and Judy Neer, it was a photograph of them as bride and groom coming down the steps of St. Stephen's Church looking tanned, happy and WARM! Best of luck to the newlyweds, hope you had a joyous first Christmas together as man and wife!!!

❑Speaking of weddings, it's hard to believe that "little Karen" Ekberg is getting married!! Seems as if it was yesterday she was practicing gymnastics in my livingroom getting ready for her routine...we certainly wish you the best of luck on your up-coming marriage, Karen.

Jake Wallace, of Minot, plays around in the snow at Cohasset Common before the rains came and washed it all away.

❑Wonder who won that wonderful Raggedy Ann doll that Regina Dunlap made for the Council on Aging Raffle?! Whoever did was a lucky person indeed, it was beautiful! Such a lot of work to create, and what a good way to hold a fundraiser. You do beautiful work, Mrs. Dunlap!!

❑Congratulations to Mr. and Mrs. Ron Beal! Ron and Florence (Doyle) were married a few weeks ago, and we wish them health and happiness.

❑Meredith Hansen and Robin Haynes were selected to the Senior District Music Festival recently and we salute them.

❑Charlotte Begley, Brian Shultz, Melissa Christoffel, Julliana Chittick, Zach Hochkeppell and Jim Long were the high scorers from Cohasset in the Advanced Placement Calculus competition. We all know they will excel again when the next contest takes place in February.

❑Don't forget to keep saving your pink register tapes from Stop and Shop, the program to earn computers goes through March. The Cohasset schools have been presented with nine computers and software, something that everyone who contributed should be aware and proud of. So, keep those tapes and present them to any member of the PSO or send them to any of the schools.

❑ Mark A. Mercurio son of Mr. and Mrs. Mercurio of 3 Cedar Acres Dr., received high honors for the first term at Boston College High School.

❑We'll bet that Keeley Dwyer and Meredith Equi have mixed feelings now that the holidays are over. They were Cohasset's own prima ballerinas in the Boston Ballet stage production of the "Nutcracker." Such fun, but such hard work too! Think of the memories they will have!! Well, back to school and reality girls but keep dancing!!!

Finally, even if you have already made your new year's resolution, here's one more that is a must!! Separate your trash into the appropriate bags!! Bottles in one, trash in one and newspapers in one. It is important, and our town voted to do it!

That's the news from here, please don't forget to call me with your latest event.

CHS Skippers warm up for competitive season

Last week was up and down for the Cohasset High varsity basketabll team.

Coach Arnie Reppucci's team travelled to Scituate High School last week for the annual Christmas tournament. They came back to Cohasset with one loss and and one win under their belt.

Cohasset won their first competition against Snowden High School of Boston, 59 to 47. Cohasset's leading scorer was senior Linc Marsac with 22 points.

Reppucci was pleased to point out the tremendous contribution of Tad Kasperowicz. His 18 point for Cohasset was, Reppucci said, " a nice surprise."

Noah Hill was another top scorer with ten points.

"It was a big game for us - a step forward as far as I'm concerned," the coach said. "Everybody played well and there was lots of enthusiasm. We had a lot good offense. I was so impressed with their play - the new things we are trying are really starting to jell."

The Skippers were not so cohesive in their second tournament as they went down to defeat against tourney host, Scituate High.

Reppucci admitted his players were "very cold" in the first half, but they warmed up by the beginning of the second half. It was not enough, however, as Cohasset was defeated, 49-37.

By the end of the first half, Cohasset was down by 11 points. By the beginning of the third quarter, Cohasset was down by 18 points.

The boys were playing well at that point, according to their coach, but it was a few questionable calls that helped to keep Cohasset off the scoreboard.

One Cohasset player received a technical for a shooting foul, which resulted in an eight-point play for Scituate.

"From there, we scrapped our way back into the game," the coach, as the Skippers scrambled to within six points of Scituate.

"We were really cold the first half," Reppucci said. "We couldn't get anything in the hoop - we were just flat. But once we got going, they really worked well."

Marsac was leading scorer for Cohasset with 18 points, and Noah Hill scored 13 during the tournament competition.

This week the real league competition begins for Cohasset. Coach Reppucci said after the tournament warm-up, he is "cautiously optimistic" about the Skippers' chances this season.

"If we keep improving, I think we'll surprise a few people," he said. "Right now, I think we can finish competitively."

Reppucci's optimism is also based on the welcomed return of tri-captain Sean McCarthy. The senior is back on the court after being sidelined with injuries sustained during the football season. "We'll be getting more minutes from him beginning this week," according to the coach.

The first league game will be played against Hanover on their home court. Friday, the Skippers will see action at Carver.

"Once we're back home, I hope the home cooking will improve things for us. The first eight games are away. I think the boys will be really eager to play back at home," Reppucci said.

Girls' gymnastics ready for success in '90

For the past three years, the Cohasset High Gymnastics team has been working hard to build itself to the top.

This may be their year. Because of inexperience, injuries, illnesses, immaturity, the girls had a hard time conquering the other South Shore teams.

But Coach Ruthann Sargent believes this year they are taking a 360 degree turn. Last year's record was 4-8. Only two weeks into the season the gymnastics team is now 2-1. (Sargent strongly believes their record would have been 3-0 had it not been for one strong gymnast out on injury).

The team consists of five seniors, three of whom have been with the team at least four years), two juniors, three sophomores, two freshmen, and three eighth graders.

Dec. 13, Cohasset traveled to Duxbury and unfortuntely lost by a very small margin, 108.5 to 104.8. Top three scorers for Cohasset on bars Michelle Hartley 7.7, Laura Andrews 5.8, Liz Buckley 5.6, balance beam, Michelle Hartley 8.1, Carrie Ripley 6.0, Liz Buckley 5.6, vaulting, Michelle Hartley 8.5, Liz Buckley 7.4, Laura Andrews 7.2, floor exercise, Michelle Hartley 8.5, Liz Buckley and Melissa Rousseau, 6.0.

Dec. 18, Hanover came to Cohasset and Cohasset had its first victory of the season. Cohasset 113.8 to Hanover 104.2. Top three scorers on each of the events for Cohasset are listed below. Uneven bars, Michelle Hartley 8.2, Tara Gallagher 7.4, Carrie Ripley 6.0, balance beam, Michelle Hartley 8.2, Tara Gallagher 6.45, Liz Buckley 5.85, vaulting, Michelle Hartley 8.55, Tara Gallagher 8.05, Liz Buckley 7.75, floor exercise, Michelle Hartley 8.45, Tara Gallagher 7.5, and Marnie DeMichele, 6.6.

Dec. 20, Norwell arrived at Cohasset High School and had the meet of their life, with Cohasset again taking a victory, 111.7 to Norwell, 107.95. Top scorers listed below for each event. Bars, Michelle Hartley 7.95, Tara Gallagher 6.65, Carrie Ripley 5.55, balance beam, Michelle Hartley 8.45, Tara Gallagher 6.45, Liz Buckley 6.15. vaulting, Michelle Hartley 8.35, Tara Gallagher 7.45, and Marnie DeMichele 6.6.

Outstanding efforts have also been accomplished by Hilary Proodian, Justin Muir, Corey Desantis, Lisa Coates, Erin Sutherland, Nicole Haefner, Aime Mitchell, and Courtney Schultz.

Sargent believes if Cohasset stays strong and does not slip, the gymnastic team has great potential to play second in the league.

Cohasset high's gymnastic team will be traveling to Scituate Wednesday Jan. 3. (Scituate stands first in the league).

Wednesday, Jan. 1, Cohasset will be traveling to Randolph. Keep your eyes open for Thursday, Jan. 18 at 7 p.m. Carver will be at Cohasset and the team will give it their best shot.

The turnaround

What difference a year makes!

In January 1989, the governor of the commonwealth called the voices of financial doom "gutless wonders."

Twelve months later, it seems that Nero has been fiddling while Rome burned. In this case, "Nero" is not just an individual, it's an entire body of political leadership.

Twelve months later, we're faced with the eventuality of a third major tax increase in less than two years — all because the state attempted to be all things to all people, while at the same time, the political "family" tried to take care of its own. Democrats should know better; it was President Johnson who found out that, despite a powerful economy, one can't have guns and butter at the same time.

Twelve months later, we have the lowest bond rating of any state. How low is it? Why, it's not even investment grade anymore. It's lower than that of Louisiana, which has been suffering with flat oil and gas revenues for 3 1/2 years and has many more unemployed workers than we do.

Twelve months later, despite talk of cuts to the bone and nerve, we know that nobody with a high-paying, low-hours job has been laid off, while those who do the actual work — corrections officers, social workers, clerks, state troopers, environmental and health inspectors, university professors and too many others — have borne the brunt of what politicians have called the "fiscal crisis."

Twelve months later, we know that last term is yet another convenient dodge. We know the state budget was still growing at a healthy clip during fiscal 1989. What the political leadership is incapable of understanding is that, with $12.9 billion to spend, there's certainly enough money on hand to guard the roads, help the homeless and the welfare mothers, pave the streets, fix the bridges and protect the environment, among other things.

In similar fashion as with the long-oppressed people of Central Europe, 1989 was the year in which we discovered that our government was simply lying to us. Like them, we have learned a bitter lesson in the last 12 months: that one-party rule cannot be tolerated indefinitely. A basic tenet of political science holds that political parties — Democrats, Republicans, Socialists, Communists, whomever — exist only to gain and consolidate power. Their role as custodians of a certain body of thought is secondary to that purpose. Their rhetoric about protecting people or guaranteeing their rights is a way of gaining that power. Thus, whatever party holds near-absolute power, no matter what it says publicly, is going to look out for its own self interest before it even considers the needs of those who chose it to lead.

Though many would deny this, savvy politicans know deeply that Democrats need Republicans, and vice versa, to be effective organizations and to represent the will of the people best. In America, it just doesn't work any other way.

We have paid dearly to learn this lesson. We are paying a high tuition bill to the school of hard knocks, each and every one of us. Let us hope that, in 1990, we can begin to apply what we have learned. Then, and only then, will we begin to see a state government that truly has answers to the needs of its people.

Happy New Year!

Recycling news...

(This week's column was written by Jennifer Longley of the recycling committee. Ed.)

There is a valuable resource in our garbage cans and backyards that is probably going untapped. Our waste is going to waste. Composting at home or in the landfill usually isn't immediately thought of as recycling, but indeed it is—in its most fundamental and efficient way. It's a way of returning to the soil nutrients found in yard, food, and other organic wastes-using them again as valuable, nutrient-rich fertilizer for gardens and lawns.

Composting is a process of decomposition, or biodegradation, of organic material by micoorganisms such as fungi and bacteria. The end product is a rich, biologically active humus containing varying amounts of carbon, nitrogen, phosphorus, and potash. All organic material contains both carbon and nitrogen which are used by microorganisms in the compost heap for energy and growth. Controlling the amounts of these two elements will affect the rate of decomposition of the waste matter, making it possible to influence the efficiency of your compost heap. Lists of carbon to nitrogen ratios and content are available. Regulating carbon: nitrogen ratios is an interesting aspect of composting, but composting need not be so complicated. It is really very simple.

Composting is a particularly healthy practice now because it is difficult to buy fertilizer that does not contain toxic chemicals. Because the decomposed material will be used to enrich the soil, will be eaten by rabbits and other small creatures, or otherwise reintroduced into the environment, it is important to avoid using toxic pesticides on lawns, gardens, and trees whose clippings will end up in the compost heap. (It's important not to use toxic pesticides anyway). Help keep toxic pesticides out of the ecosystem and the food chain! Non-toxic pesticides exist.

Aside from unnecessarily taking up space in the solid waste stream, organic wastes reduce the efficiency of incinerators because of their high moisture content, and they also increase sulphur dioxide emissions. Do we really want to pay $60 per ton to have a usable, valuable resource carted away?

Anyone can recycle by composting. Locations can be as simple as a heap in a shady area of the backyard, a chicken wire enclosure, or other more sophisticated, well-ventilated structures. Toss in almost any organic waste, even wood ash from the fireplace, or sawdust. Items best to keep out include meat, bones, fatty foods like cheese, and pet litter. It is helpful to periodically layer your heap with fresh soil, and because the organisms doing the biodegrading need an ample supply of oxygen, and some water, your heap should be turned, or mixed-up every so often, and kept moist. Composting works best when there is a variety of materials included, but it still works fine when there is not.

Take full advantage of harvesting your yard and food wastes-It makes sense economically and environmentally. Maintain your own compost heap or bring your clippings (not food) to the Cohasset landfill where we compost grass, leaves, horse manure, and small twigs (no brush yet). Bring your Christmas tree but remember, no ornaments, nails, tinsel, or plastic webbing.

Trouble shooting at the landfill

When recycling in Cohasset please remember:

l) Christmas trees-see above paragraph.

2) cardboard-only corrugated cardboard- and boxes must be flattened.

3) Jars must have tops removed and wine bottles must have lead or other type of collar removed.

4) Remember to bring your non-recyclable trash to the blue house, do not throw your trash into the recycle bins.

FUEL ASSISTANCE PROGRAM — The Massachusetts Executive Office of Communities and Development (EOCD) administers low income energy assistance program (LIHEAP) FUNDS.

Locally, the program is administered by South Shore Community Action Council. Income guidelines are used to decide eligibility for funds.

Crisis assistance is also available for heating emergencies defined as follows: no heat for any reason, including heating system failure: imminent loss of heat due to less than three days' supply of fuel; possession of final notice of utility termination scheduled to occur between Nov. 1, and April 30, 1990; threatened eviction within 72 hours for renter whose rent includes heat.

An emergency would also include the aftermath of fire or other "acts of God" that may force relocation or other circumstances which EOCD deems to be "household-energy related emergencies." This may consist of payment of a security deposit to secure housing, a deposit required to connect utility service and payment toward a pre-heating season rental arrangement if heat is included in the rent and the tenant is documented to be facing eviction.

Emergency applicants who do not document their eligibility at the time of application may receive a one-time provisional service which may consist of 100 gallons of fuel, payment of up to $100 for other delivered fuel such as wood or coal, payment of up to $100 to buy utility company supplying primary heat, payment of up to $100 to the utility company supplying secondary source energy which triggers circulates heat, or payment of $100 toward rent, where heat is included in the rent.

Emergency applications for crisis assistance are given priority at all intake and processing steps. The local administrative agency in the area is South Shore Community Action Council Inc., 17 Court Street, Plymouth, #1-508-746-6707. This agency is required to provide for emergency service within 18 hours of the household application or request.

The fuel assistance agency must issue a decision and notify all applicants of their rights to appeal. Appeals must be made to the local fuel assistance agency within 20 working days of receipt of any notice of eligibility or ineligibility 40 days from the date of application if no notice was sent.

The local fuel assistance agency will hold an informal face-to-face hearing within 20 working days of receiving an appeal.

Within 10 days of a hearing, the local fuel assistance agency shall notify the applicant of the final decision in writing, along with the notice of the applicant's right to appeal in writing to EOCD within 20 working days of the local fuel assistance agency's final decision.

The appeals office of EOCD will review the applicant's file and information pertinent to the appeal and will notify the applicant and fuel assistance agency of the decision within 20 working days of the receipt of appeal.

If you apply for energy assistance funds and are not timely notified and/or are denied, contact So. Shore Community Action Council, Inc., 17 Court Street, Plymouth, Ma. 02361. Phone # (508) 746-6707 or 837-1618. Ask for Lisa Spencer in Fuel Assistance. THANK YOU!! The Council on Aging would like to extend its appreciation to KIMBALL'S-BY-THE-SEA and Mr. Dan Leahy for once again providing a most enjoyable festive VOLUNTEER LUNCHEON on Dec. 15, and . . . THANK YOU to Mrs. Karen Kissane wonderful Brownie troop for the lovely Christmas trees and place mats provided to the Tuesday Lunch Program. SPECIAL THANKS TO: ALL THE GREAT HARD WORKING LADIES & GENTLEMEN WHO HELPED MAKE THIS YEAR'S CHRISTMAS PARTY A GREAT BIG-BIG SUCCESS. "OUR SPECIAL THANKS TO ALL & HAPPY NEW YEAR!"

Obituary

Ruby Whitehouse

Funeral services were held Thursday, Dec. 28 in Quincy for Ruby Carolyn (Dobson) Whitehouse of Cohasset.

Mrs. Whitehouse, 88, died Monday, Dec. 25 at the South Shore Hospital. Burial was in Blue Hill Cemetery in Braintree.

Mrs. Whitehouse was a former office manager for Allison Bag Co., where she worked for ten years before her retirement 18 years ago. She formerly worked as an executive secretary.

She received an associate's degree with honors from Quincy Junior College when she was 75 years old.

Mrs. Whitehouse was a member of the National Geographic Society, the Penelope Club of Wollaston, and the Houghs Neck Congregational Church.

Wife of the late Raymond Charles Whitehouse, she leaves three sons, Robert T. Marques of Weymouth, Richard D. Marques of Hingham, and Raymond C. Whitehouse II of Cohasset; a sister, Susan Dobson of Middleboro; eight grandchildren and five great-grandchildren.

Funeral arrangements were completed by the Deware Funeral Home, 576 Hancock St. in Quincy.

Karen M. Murphy

Murphy/Falcone

Mr. John D. Murphy of Scituate and Mrs. Margaret M. Murphy of Cohasset announce the engagement of their daughter, Karen Margaret Murphy of Cohasset, to Andrew James Falcone of Hampton, N.H.

Mr. Falcone is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Bernard Falcone of Hampton. N.H.

A June 16th wedding is planned.

Miss Murphy is a graduate of Cohasset High School and Providence College. She is currently employed as territory director for Bay State Junior College in Boston.

Mr. Falcone is a graduate of St. Thomas Aquinas High School and Dover College. He is employed as a sales representative for Gould-Shawmut Inc. in Newburyport.

Winter art workshops are open

The Scituate Arts Association, Inc., has scheduled classes for the Winter Term to begin during the week of January 22, 1990. The classes will include instructed classes, open workshops and weekend seminars. The classes are:

Portrait Workshop, no instructor. This is an ongoing workshop for artists interested in developing their skills in portraiture. Class members are asked to share the responsibility of providing models. Begins Monday, January 22; $5 per session; 9:30 a.m. to noon.

Portraiture, Robert Cormier. Bob Cormier is a noted Boston portrait artist who teaches this class for students at all levels of ability. He emphasizes accuracy of drawing and correct color relationships. Posing the model and composition are stressed. Demonstrations and discussions of the "masters" are also important aspects of this class. Begins Tuesday, January 23; 6 weeks, $85.00, model fee $20; 9:30 to noon.

Beginning Watercolor, Robert Nason. This is a class for those who want to get started in watercolor or who would like a refresher course. Fundamentals of drawing will be stressed as well as color mixing, brush handling, controlling paint, the effective use of light and shadow and composition. Begins Wednesday, January 24, 6 weeks, $65; 9:30 a.m. to noon.

Basic Drawing, Esther Maschio. This class is based on the Betty Edwards book "Drawing on the Right Side of the Brain." These lessons will sensitize your "look" and your "line" so that you will be able to approach and draw any subject that you wish. Begins Wednesday January 24, 6 weeks, $65; 7:30 to 9:30 p.m.

Life Drawing Workshop, no instructor. An ongoing workshop with model provided for practice in figure drawing. Artists use whatever medium they prefer. Begins January 24, $5 per session; 7:30 to 9:30 p.m.

Life Studies Workshop, no instructor. This workshop provides an opportunity for artists to get together for sustained work in painting and drawing the figure. Begins Thursday, January 25, $5 per session; 9:30 a.m. to 3:30 p.m.

Advanced Watercolor Workshop, no instructor. This is a class for experienced watercolorists who enjoy getting together for a day of still-life painting. Begins Friday, January 26, $5 per session; 9:30 a.m. to 3:30 p.m.

Week-end Workshops:

The Interaction of Color—Patricia Michaelson. This is an introductory two-day color workshop, and is designed to enhance your ability to achieve desired color effects. The phenomenon of how colors continually influence and change each other is very important for the painter to know. January 27 & 28, Members, $50; non-members $60, 9:30 a.m. to 3:30 p.m.

Watercolor Workshop—Marshall Joyce. This is a rare opportunity to spend a weekend learning about watercolor techniques from one of our foremost painters. The basic ingredients of a good painting will be stressed, with plenty of attention given to individual and collective problems. February 3 & 4, Members $55, non-members, $60; 9:30 a.m. to 3:30 p.m.

Watercolor Workshop—Carlton Plummer. This weekend workshop will not only give students the opportunity to work with another prominent artist, but will also include a slide show and demonstrations. The students will be taught an emotional and spontaneous

Pack 38 Cub Scouts news

Thank you to all the Cub Scouts who participated in the Cohasset Village Fair on December 2.

Alexis Mincolla earned his Bobcat badge. Kevin Devito and Andrew Sorrentino of Den 1 have earned their Bear Badges. Congratulations to you for your hard work and efforts!

Den 1 has had a very pre-merry Christmas in real style. They all went via limo to dinner at Pier 44 in Scituate. Bonnie Devito and Karen Laguelle are very special Den "Santas".

Den 2,4, and Webelos supplied our Christmas Party goodies. We thank you.

DATES TO REMEMBER:

January 28 - Pack 38 Committee Meeting at Parish House 7 to 8 p.m.

January 31 - Pack Meeting 7-8 p.m. at Deer Hill School. Bowl-A-Rama prizes will be in and given out. Money for Blue and Gold Dinner due.

February 11 - "Martigras" Blue and Gold Dinner at Cohasset High Cafeteria. It will be a catered spaghetti dinner at the cost of $2.75 per person. Each Den will collect money by January Pack Meeting.

The dinner will begin at 5 p.m. sharp, as awards will be promptly given out first. Please arrive by 4:45 p.m.

After the dinner the Scouts will be meeting some new "Furry" friends. Bring your cameras.

The Blue and Gold will end about 8 p.m.

Mike Christoffel, from the Webelo Eagle Patrol, helps to clean up after the recent Cub Scouts' Christmas Party at Deer Hill School.

Joseph Nicynski of Den 4 enjoys a brownie after polishing off a bowl of ice cream.

Science Center programs for the new year

Make a New Year's resolution to learn more about the world around you by visiting the South Shore Natural Science Center Norwell.

FIRST QUARTER MOON

Join Rolf Egon, past president of the South Shore Astronomical Society, Friday, Jan. 5, 8 - 10 p.m., for a viewing of the night skies. Members/$3.50. Non-members/$4.50. This special program focuses on our moon, which will be in its first quarter. Following a captivating video of the Apollo 17 mission to the moon, we'll view the skies through the Astronomical Society's telescope.

A WOODLANDS WINTER

The children will enjoy the New England winter wonderland with a Science Center naturalist, Saturday, Jan. 6, 9:30 - 11:30 a.m. For children ages 5 to 7. Members/$6. Non-members/$8. They will take a guided walk through Science Center trails and enjoy activities that will be fun (and educational!). As they observe the snow-bound forest and signs of animals and birds, they will develop an appreciation for the remarkable ways by which plants and animals survive the winter's cold. Children should dress for the outdoors. Snack provided.

ARCHAEOLOGICAL SOCIETY

Join the members of the South Shore Chapter of the Massachusetts Archaeological Society, Monday, Jan. 4, 7:30 - 9:30 p.m., for their regular monthly meeting (meets every other month at the Science Center). Free admission. Each month a different speaker focuses on an aspect of historical archaeology. All are invited. To preregister, call the Science Center at (617) 659-2559.

CONSERVATION IN THE HOME

Before you reach for that electric can opener, learn more about conservation in the home, Tuesday, Jan. 9, 6:30 - 8:30 p.m. Members/$4 Non-members/$5. Join us for this special presentation and discussion by Eastern Edison Company and discover just how much electricity your appliances use. You will learn some helpful tips on how you can conserve energy in your own home.

WEDNESDAY NATURE WALK

Join a Science Center naturalist for a very interesting walk from North Scituate to Egypt, via the railroad track bed, Wednesday, Jan. 10, 9:30 - noon. Members/free. Nonmembers/$4. We'll be on the lookout for wintering birds and animal tracks, and stop to identify some winter plants along the way. These informal walks are perfect for all ages. Please call the Science Center (617) 659-2559 to preregister.

South Shore Natural Science Center is on Jacobs Lane, Norwell, just off Route 123 and less than one mile from the Route 3 interchange. Hours: 9 a.m. - 4 p.m., Monday through Saturday; closed Sundays until further notice. Closed Christmas Day and New Year's Day.

All programs require prepaid registration. Please register by 2 p.m., two days prior to program date unless deadline is otherwise noted.

Due to a recent fire, all indoor exhibits, the nature library, and nature gift shop are temporarily closed. Nature trails are open. Call (617) 659-2559 or drop by the trailer on the Science Center's grounds for a complete winter schedule of activities.

Winter art workshops

approach to interiors, figures, seascapes and landscapes. March 3 & 4, Members $65, non-members $75; 9:30 a.m. to 3:30 p.m.

Classes will be held at the Ellis Art Center, 709 Country Way, North Scituate, MA. Class size is limited, early registration is advised. Class fees must be paid in advance. New students are required to pay a $25 membership fee in order to attend classes, with the exception of the weekend seminars, where membership is optional. Make checks payable to The Scituate Arts Association Weekend Workshops. Mail to The Scituate Arts Association, Inc., P.O. Box 214, Scituate, MA 02066. You may call 545-6150 or 545-0449 for further information.

Counsel says abatements may hike legal fees

Town Counsel Richard Henderson said a heap of new tax abatement applications could result in a hike in legal expenses for the town.

More than 600 tax abatement applications were submitted to the assessors' office before the deadline, Henderson told selectmen Tuesday night.

The assessors, who will be meeting every week to review the requests, believe they will be unable to handle each request within the statutory time limit of 90 days. If that is the case, those applications that have not been reviewed will be administratively denied.

Any resident who has filed for an abatement also has the right to file for an appeal with the state appellate tax board. Information about the appeal process is available at the assessor's office.

That is when the town counsel will become involved in the process, Henderson said.

In a busy tax year, Henderson said 20 to 25 appeals will reach the appellate court. With 600 abatements filed, the number of appeals could be significantly higher, he warned selectmen.

But Henderson also noted that if an application is denied and the resident has filed for an appeal, there may still be a resolution before the matter goes to court.

Henderson said selectmen should be apprised of the matter, since this year constitites an "abnormal situation" regarding legal expenses because of the high number of abatements, and the possibility that dormant lawsuits involving the sewer project and Cohasset Heights Ltd. could erupt next year.

Town counsel does not get involved in the initial abatement hearings with the assessors. But once an appeal is filed with the Boston tax board, Henderson must prepare the case for trial.

"I wonder," said Selectman Rocco Laugelle, "if it would be worthwhile for the town of Cohasset to have the people who did the assessing here six to eight hours a day to listen (to residents who have filed for abatements) - someone who was involved with the actual assessing. The assessors aren't fulltime employees. They don't have the time to review 600 abatements."

Town counsel said he'll be meeting with the assessors this week, and perhaps a more efficient method of handling the abatement requests could be developed.

"The taxpayer should receive every consideration if they feel they are overtaxed," Laugelle said.

Chamber announces nominees for King Award

Nominees for this year's Cohasset Chamber of Commerce's Forrest E. King Award have been announced.

The award, named for Forrest E. King, longtime owner of King Jewelers in Cushing Plaza, is presented annually to the Chamber members who has demonstrated during the year the highest standards of business ethics, management, employee relations and civic responsibility consistent with the goals of the Chamber of Commerce; and whose actions have reflected favorably upon the membership and to the credit of the member, their business organization and the Cohasset community.

This year's nominees are:

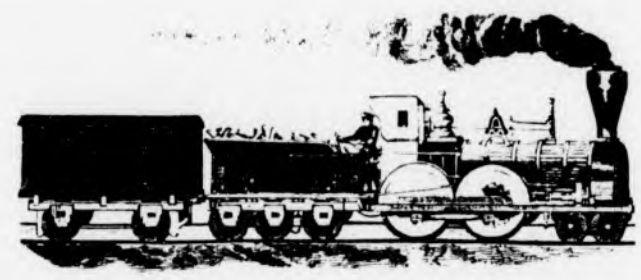
Charles G. Fink - a longtime Cohasset resident, is currently president of the Cohasset Historical Society, and a trustee of the Cohasset Conservation Trust. Mr. Fink, a retired engineer with the Raytheon Corp., lives in Cohasset with his wife Jean. They have six children.

James F. Kearney - C.P.A. for thirty years, has operated his own business in Cohasset for the past 16 years. He has been a member of the Chamber since its inception, and was Treasurer until 1986. He is a past president of the Rotary Club, a former Red Cross Treasurer and Little League Treasurer and Coach. He and his wife Maureen live in Cohasset and have three children.

Robert Martin - owns and operates the Goodale Insurance Company on South Main Street in Cohasset Village, and is currently serving on the Cohasset Chamber Board of Directors as Calendar Chairman. He was the chairman and main force behind the "Little Piece of Home" care packages sent by the Chamber to all 1989 CHS graduates, and is well known on the South Shore for his work in behalf of the Glastonbury Monestary. Bob and his wife Debbie live in Cohasset with their two sons.

The award will be presented February 14, 1990, at the Annual King Award Banquet held at Kimball's By The Sea. For more information, please call the Chamber of Commerce at 383-1010.

Sox pitcher at Chamber



Red Sox reliever Dennis Lamp, will be the guest speaker at The Cohasset Chamber of Commerce's January meeting.

Lamp who recently signed a two-year contract with the BoSox, lives in Cohasset with his family. He will address the Chamber and its guests on January 10, 1990, at Rotary Hall on Elm Street. The Chamber has also invited his wife, Janet, to speak that evening on what the life of a professional athlete is like for his family.

The program will begin at 6:45 p.m., and is open to the public, free of charge. All Red Sox fans are invited to attend.

For further information call the Cohasset Chamber of Commerce at 383-1010.

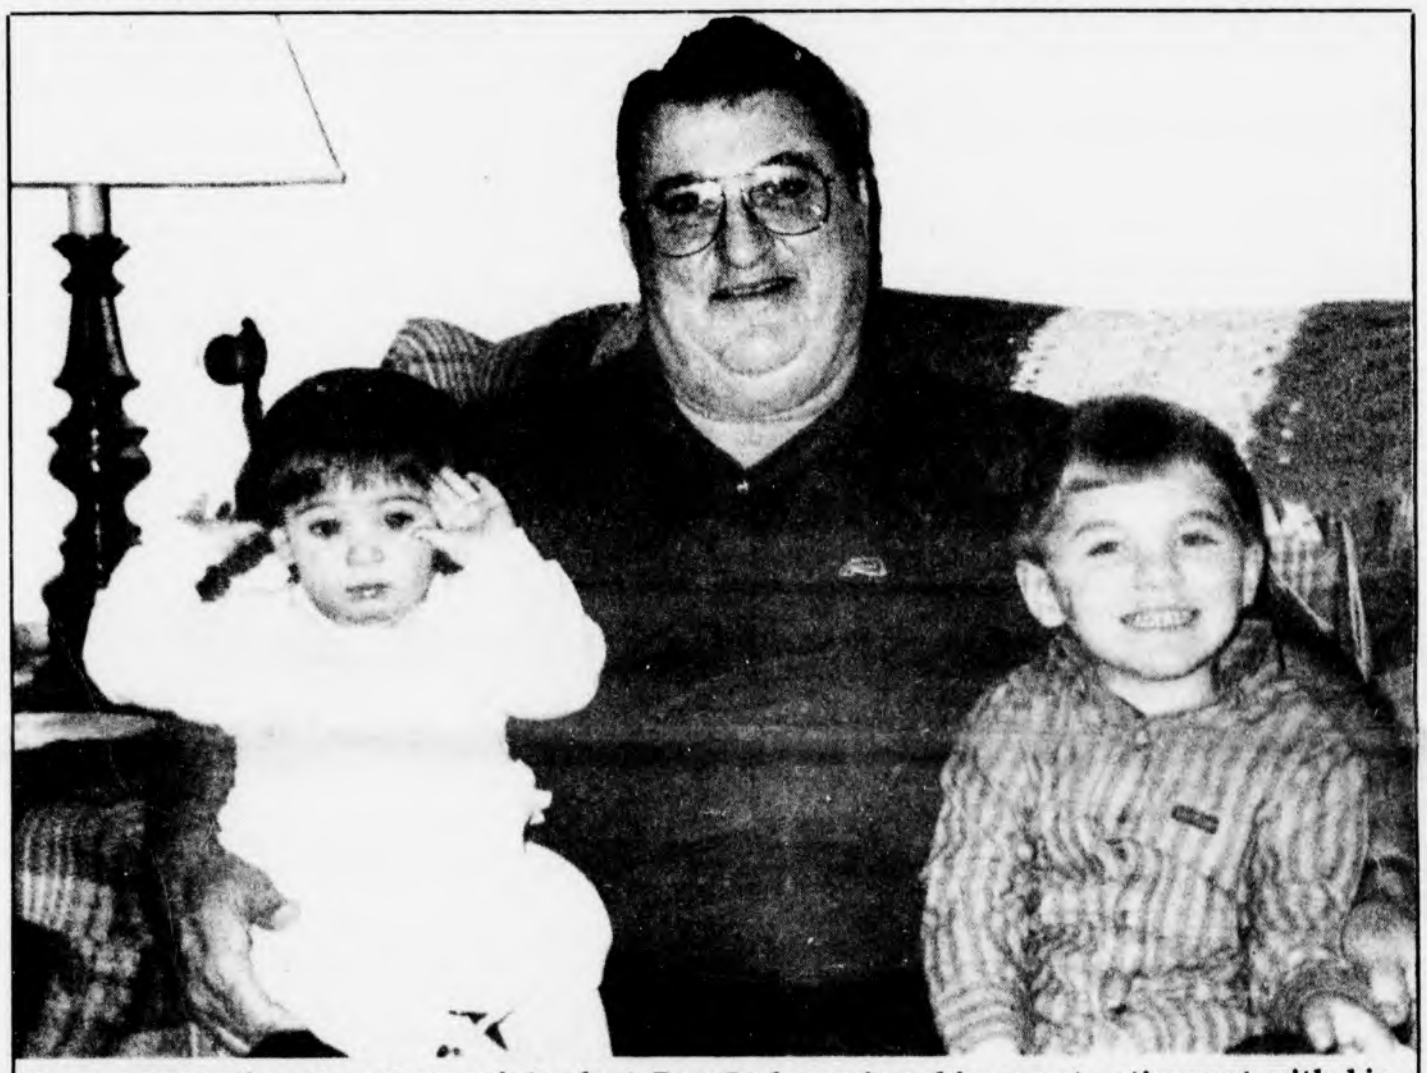
School committee will fight for budget override

By Jane Lane
Mariner staff

The school committee will not support a "worse-case scenario" budget presented to them this week - a budget that reduces teachers and programs, and increases elementary class sizes.

Instead, members indicated they would fight for some level of Proposition 2 1/2 override in order to maintain the same educational services for next year.



Supt. Stephen Hart presented a level-funded budget as requested by the advisory committee. Level-funded means there is no dollar increase from last year's total of $5,294,783, although it includes money for negotiated salary increases. Consequently, there are reductions throughout the level-funded budget presented Monday night by the superintendent.

"This is a worse-case scenario, but it certainly could happen," Supt. Hart explained. "But it would have a serious impact on the initiatives we started this year and the type of education we offer at the high school."

The high school would suffer the brunt of the cuts in the level-funded proposal. Among the proposed cuts would be an English teacher, a foreign language teacher, a reduction in a business education teacher, and reductions in home economics and an industrial arts teacher. It would mean a reduction in the entire program, Supt. Hart said, and would therefore endanger the comprehensive nature of the secondary school.

At the Osgood School, a special needs aide would be cut, along with the curriculum coordinator who is shared among the schools, an adjustment counselor shared with the Deer Hill School, and a classroom teacher. With the elimination of that

Changing times for Ben Curley

By Alison Cohen
Mariner staff

For 22 years and eight months, Ben Curley was been the man to call when something went awry with Cohasset's water. That all changed at the end of December when Ben retired as superintendent of the water department.

Curley first came to the water department when the radar company he was working for pulled up stakes and moved to California. Born and bred in Cohasset, Curley had no intentions of going west.

"I'm a very, very staunch native," said Curley. "My grandchildren are fifth generation on both sides."

Curley earned his promotions at the water department the hard way, from the bottom. He became superintendent in January 1981.

"I worked up from the ditch," he said. "I think I started at $1.95 an hour."

"You have to like the job," he said, remembering all the winter nights he was called out in the wee hours to repair broken water mains. Usually the mains that broke were those that went through the swampland off Gammons Road. The breaks were no surprise-- a vast number of Cohasset's water mains are more than 100 years old.

"It meant all hand digging because you couldn't get machinery into the swamp," he recalled.

Curley took the responsibility seriously.

"You have the whole town of Cohasset in your hands," he said. "They rely on you for safe drinking water."

Curley always vowed that if he became superintendent he'd do something about the decrepit condition and poor location of the mains.

Without fanfare, new man at helm

It's been a time of quiet transition at the water department.

Without fanfare, a man of great experience retired. And in his place is a bright young man - someone who is willing to tackle the increasingly technical aspects of running the water business.

Joe Hamilton has been with the Cohasset Water Department for the past eight years. Before his promotion which began last month, Hamilton was lab director/plant operator for the facility which sits along Lily Pond.

For eight years he attended Stonehill College at night and earned a bachelor's degree in public administration. Studying at home and on-the-job training allowed Hamilton to attain the highest certification level for a water department operator. He is now a grade four certified operator of drinking water facilities - a high standard he set for himself when he came to the local department.

"I guess when I get involved in something, I try to pursue it all the way and to become accomplished in it. I try to be aware of all the opportunities," he explained.

When he was looking for a job back in 1981, the market was not flooded with jobs for public administrators. There was a part-time opening at the water department, and Hamilton jumped at the Attorney general's office made decision with 'sadness'

Asst. Attorney General Richard Allen said it was "with sadness" that he switched position on a proposal to locate an Alzheimer's Care Center on the former George Curtis estate.

In his original filing with the Probate Court last October, Allen, assistant attorney general for public charities, sided with the Curtis Estate Action Committee, saying the proposed Alzheimer's facility would be an accepted use of the 53-acre property, in accordance with Curtis' will.

Since that time, after meeting with the Alzheimer's Support Group and other health care experts, Allen reluctantly decided that such a facility "would be too risky" on the Jerusalem Road.

The physical characteristics of the property are limiting, he said. Ledge outcrops are found throughout the property, restricting the number of septic systems which could be constructed on the site.

In addition, after discussing the proposal with health care experts and the state social service agencies which fund such facilities, Allen determined that the cost of the project would be prohibitive.

"It wasn't a complete surprise to anyone on the support group. We had discussed the proposal together," Allen said. "They worked long and hard on this. But in the end, I had to decide against it."

Although Allen issued a statement opposing a facility on the Curtis Estate, he is supportive of establishing a center on an alternative site.

Joseph McElroy, a member of the local Curtis Estate Action Committee, is "very disappointed" with the attorney general's ruling. But he remains hopeful that an alternative site will be found for a Alzheimer's facility known as the Curtis Home.

Allen's decision last week paved the way for the trustees of the Curtis Estate to sell the property. The trustees, Evan Crosby and James DeGiacomo, intend to combine the proceeds of the property sale

Deadline for facility permit

The new $52 recycling/transfer facility permit must be displayed on the front, passenger-side, bumper by January 15.

Permits can be purchased at the Board of Health office at Town Hall, Monday through Wednesday, 8:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m.; Thursday, 8:30 a.m. to 7 p.m.; and Friday, 8:30 a.m. to 1 p.m.

The stickers will also be sold at the transfer facility on Saturday, Jan. 13 and Sunday, Jan. 14 from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m.

Recyclers are reminded that only empty corrugated cardboard is recyclable. Corrugated cardboard is almost always brown on the inside and has small ridges. Do not put shoe or pizza boxes, gift or cereal boxes in the cardboard bin. All cardboard, other than corrugated, goes into the trash bin. Keep all plastic and styrofoam, especially the "peanuts," out of the newspaper and cardboard bins.

Sandell will run

School committee member Nancy Sandell will run for a second term.

Sandell announced Monday night that after spending three years on the committee, she is committed to continuing for a second term.

"I think it's been a privilege to work with such good people like Superintendent Hart and the school committee," she said at the start of Monday's meeting. "They have had such a positive influence on our school system. I would like to continue my contributions to these efforts. We are in the middle of a five-year plan that I would like to see continue."

With three children in each of the schools, Sandell said she has a vested interest in preserving a quality educational system in Cohasset.

The biggest challenges facing the committee in the next three years will be to establish priorities and maintaining excellence in the face of annual budget cuts. She also intends to continue the educational process with the community so people will realize "how education affects us all.

"We need to look outside Cohasset," she said, "to the global impact the educational crisis will have. There's a broader picture than this community."

Sandell said she views a second term as an "opportunity to make a difference."

School projects reviewed

The school committee has reserved three spaces on the town meeting warrant. They all deal with capital projects at the Osgood School.

The first article will request $30,000 to repair the septic system at the school.

The second article will request $75,000 to repair the heating system at the school, and the third article will request $40,000 to renovate the bathrooms at the elementary school.

Supt. Stephen Hart noted that alternatives to repairing the septic system will be investigated, and perhaps other town departments could help to complete the work.

And the final cost of repairing the heating system has not been determined by the architect, he noted.

At this time, it is not known how these items would be funded if they are approved by town meeting. "At this point, maybe everything will be an override this year," said Chairman Barbara Bliss.

Republican delegates meet

The Cohasset Republican Town Committee will be electing nine delegates to the Republican State Convention on Tuesday, Jan. 16.

The meeting will be held at the home of Lee Jenkins, 198 Jerusalem Road at 7:45 p.m. The State Convention will be held on March 10 at the World Trade Center in Boston. Any voter registered as a Republican by December 15, 1989, is eligible to be a candidate. The candidates will be voted on by members of the Town Committee.

In addition to the nine delegates, Chairman Julie Guild, State Committeeman Polly Logan, and Republican Representative Mary Jeanette Murray are automatically delegates. Any elected registered Republican Selectmen, moderator, school committee members, town clerk and treasurer are also eligible to be delegates ex officio with the rights and duties of duly chosen delegates including the right to vote.

Any person interested in becoming a delegate is welcome to attend the meeting.

For further information, call Julie Guild, Chairman, at 383-6443.

Stamps at Stop and Shop

For the convenience of Cohasset residents, postage stamps are now available at the Stop and Shop, 400 Chief Justice Cushing Highway.

This service is a joint venture between local businesses and the post office under the U.S. Postal Service's Stamps on Consignment program.

M. L. King Day Monday

Next Monday, Jan., 15, is Dr. Martin Luther King, Jr. Day.

Most business will be open, but government offices and schools will close and there will be no mail delivery.

Here's what's open and closed, according to the Greater Boston Chamber of Commerce:

Manufacturing: open
Retail stores: open
Supermarkets: open
Liquor stores: open
Taverns & bars: open
Banks: Optional, but most are expected to be closed
Stock markets: closed
Federal, state, county, municipal offices: closed
Schools: closed
Libraries: closed

Parking still a problem at Dwyer's

By Alison Cohen
Mariner staff

In a continuing drama that has more perils than Pauline, Dwyer's Cleaning Spot met with the appeals board on it's parking and rental woes only to be told to come back with more information next month.

The Route 3A business is operating under a cloud because it does not have enough parking spaces and those it does have do not meet local by-laws.

Town Counsel Richard Henderson has also said that the business may have to apply for a special permit to expand a non-conforming use in order to legally rent space to additional tenants.

Dwyer's problems started when the original building burned down in August 1988. The company was led to believe that they did not need to submit an application for site plan review by the planning board because they were rebuilding on the original foundation line.

When the planning board later raised objections, a judge ruled that they had effectively waived their right to review the project. However, the final building was sufficiently different to require a greater number of parking spaces.

Building Inspector Robert Egan brought all these issues to a head when he issued a cease and desist order to the two tenants, Nutri/System Weight Loss Center and Janet's Shoppe, on Dec.12. The orders are not being enforced pending a decision by the appeals board.

According to Egan's calculations, Dwyer's must have 66 parking spaces of regulation dimensions. Under the most ambitious of the three plans drawn up by Richard Kehoe, the company would only be able to accommodate 49 spaces. All 49 would be as much as six inches too narrow and three feet too short to meet the standards.

Dwyer's contends that they should only be required to provide a maximum of 49 spaces. The dispute centers around whether storage space, stairwells, and closets should be included in the calculations.

Even if Dwyer's was able to prevail on the numbers issue, it would still be unable to comply with the dimensions regulation.

Dwyer's attorney, Jay Monaco, argued that his clients should only have to obtain a special permit rather than a variance because the parking lot has always been non-conforming . A variance is harder to obtain.

"I think he's starting a whole new ball game," said board member Barbara Power. "I don't think you can say I'm going to add two new businesses and change my parking and still keep my non-conformity."

Board members Mark DeGiacomo and Edward Lubitz took a more conciliatory tone.

After reviewing the assortment of hand-drawn color-coded plans that were not drawn to scale that had been prepared by Dwyer's, DeGiacomo expressed concern about access by fire trucks. He asked the company to prepare a single engineered plan that the board could review prior to the next regular meeting.

"What we need instead of doors number one, two, and three is a plan saying, 'this is what we would like to do, period," he said. "We will accept, reject or modify it. Give us your best shot."

DeGiacomo also suggested that they have the plan reviewed by the fire department before submitting it.

"If the fire department has a big problem with it, then we have a big problem," he said. "That's the way this board has always worked."

Dwyer's will also defend it's right to lease space at the continued hearing. Monaco had been under the impression, based on a letter from the town counsel, that the appeals board had already resolved this particular issue in Dwyer's favor.

According to DeGiacomo, no formal decision has been made by the board on this issue.

Monaco indicated that his argument hinges on a contention that no special permit is required in order to lease out the space because both businesses are allowed uses in the highway district.

Chairman Al Moore of the planning board told the appeals board that his board feels very strongly that Dwyer's should not be granted any relief.

"What they're trying to do is a real affront to everyone who has tried to develop property on Route 3A," he said. Moore expressed concern about the extent of blacktopping and a fear about what the site would look like ten years down the road.

Lubitz tried to diffuse the debate and called on Dwyer's to seek some creative solutions to the parking situation and consider deed restrictions to offset fears that the storage space would be turned into additional rental offices.

Planning board member Robert Sturdy was not appeased.

Sturdy said the board shouldn't be swayed by Dwyer's inability to meet the zoning standards.

"The law says if you create the hardship, it's not a hardship," he said.

He asked the appeals board to be very careful in making the decision, because once the precedent was set, it would have to apply to anybody.

The hearing is set to continue at the regular meeting scheduled for Feb. 1 at 8 p.m.

Without fanfare Hamilton heads water dept.

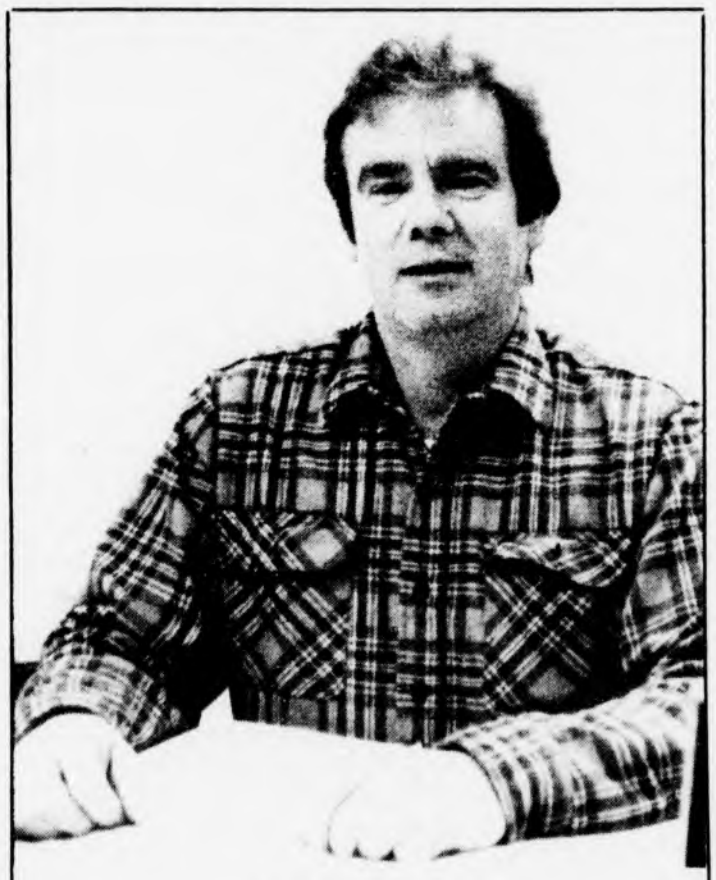
"I've been very content since," he said, recalling that he eventually opted for a full-time position.

Don't expect many changes in the way the department operates, the 42- year-old superintendent warned. The number one concern will always be maintaining the quality of Cohasset's water supply - and that is something Hamilton staunchly defends.

If anyone criticizes the taste or purity of the local drinking water, Hamilton will rush to argue his case. There is a detectable taste and coloration in the water from the chlorine which is state-mandated. But if anyone says the taste is inferior to bottled spring water, Hamilton offers the following test.

"I tell people to put their water in a container and refrigerate it - just like they do to their Poland Springs water," he said. "When you drink water from the tap, it's not cold like the bottled water you refrigerate. But if you place it in the refrigerator, I'll bet you can't tell the difference between the two."

As water department superintendent, Hamilton hopes to continually update and improve the water distribution system throughout the town. Some of the underground pipes that lead from house to hydrant are more than 100 years old, Hamilton explained. Leaks and breaks could occur, he said, and it is an expensive procedure to systematically replace them.



"It's going to take years," he said, "and it takes a lot of money. But we really should get back on a schedule of replacement, because it's something that has to be done. And it's not going to get any cheaper."

New water pipes means an increased volume of flow. In order to accommodate that increased flow, Hamilton envisions the need for a larger storage tank. That is something he would like to begin this decade, if financial considerations are resolved.

A new storage facility will cost about a million dollars. The pipe replacement program cost is unknown at this time, Hamilton explained. The entire length of the pipe system would have to be determined in order to reveal an accurate cost projection, he added.

Another concern for the new superintendent is the on-going protection of the town's reservoir, Lily Pond. As superintendent, Hamilton is called on to regularly inspect the surrounding watershed area - property that is protected by town bylaw against development.

In that respect, the water department has gained further ground, Hamilton explained. At last week's meeting, the water commissioners voted to ask town meeting to purchase 37 acres of watershed land from Edward Britt, a developer who once planned to construct 11 homes on the property abutting Lily Pond.

Joseph Hamilton

"It would be nice to have that land reserved for open space - rather than thinking about potential problems," he stated.

"It's an opportunity we have now, rather than looking back 20 years from now and saying, 'I wish we would have saved that land.' "

In these times of fiscal uncertainty, Hamilton understands that his budget must reflect limited spending and tight control. The water department budget is realistic, he said, and when someone leaves a position, he is often not replaced.

There are only two water department employees "on the road" now, he explained, where once there were three. The size of the town department will not grow, according to the superintendent.

"I just want to be able to pay the bills," Hamilton said regarding the King Street department. Water rates will rise with inflation, he predicted, although residents should not be fearful about sudden astronomical hikes in their water bills.

Since he took over the superintendent's office last month, Hamilton often puts in longer hours, but he enjoys the work. "There's plenty to do, that's for sure," he said. "Whatever I think I've done for today, there's a lot to finish tomorrow."

The transition has been without incident, as far as he can recall. The staff of nine has been "most cooperative" since the new boss arrived.

They are a stable work force down on King Street, he said, with men such as William McAuliffe with over 30 years on the job. Betty Maree, the department's secretary, has been there since 1959 and Lee Andrews has been with the department for 21 years.

"I think the town should feel good about the crew we have here," Hamilton said. "It's a good, knowledgeable force here - an excellent attitude - and they do a professional job."

When Hamilton is away from the office, he enjoys being at home with his wife, Jane, and three children, Edward 12, Andrew, 10, and Joanna, 2. He enjoys his new job, but looks forward to time away from the office.

During those hours, Hamilton likes to relax with a sketch pad and pencil. "I didn't say I was any good - I just said I like to draw," he protested.

Cohasset library story hour

The winter series of story hours for children three and a-half to five years, will begin Thursday, Feb. 1 and Friday, Feb. 2 in the children's room of the Paul Pratt Memorial Library.

Each of the programs will consist of several picture book stories, a simple fingerplay, song or craft, and will last approximately 45 minutes.

Children may register now for either the Thursday or Friday session, both of which will run for six weeks, ending March 15 and 16. There will be no story hours on Feb. 22 and 23, due to school vacation. Children must be three and a half in order to attend.

For more information or to register, contact the children's librarian at 383-1348.

Times have changed for Ben Curley

"I'd say, 'If I ever have anything to say about this, I'm going to move all the water mains out of the swamp and up into the roads."

It didn't take Superintendent Curley long to make good on his vow. He's proud of the work he did. Curley spent a total of $1.5 million, split 50/50 with the state, upgrading the water system.

"Knock on wood, we haven't had one leak or call-out," he said of his improved lines.

To save the town money, Curley had the mains along Jerusalem Road cleaned and relined rather than replaced. Debris had become so incrusted within the eight inch pipes that the opening was only four inches in diameter.

"I was leery, but the company reassured me," he said. Opting for the cleaning and relining saved Cohasset more than $300,000.

The gamble paid off. In the five years since the work was done, there's been "not one dirty water complaint since."

The years have brought many technical advances and new concerns about water supplies.

According to Curley, Cohasset is particularly vulnerable to water pollution. "Unlike Scituate and Hingham, Cohasset is 99 9/10ths surface water supply," he noted. Surface water must be carefully monitored and treated to maintain safety.

Cohasset's main reservoir, Lily Pond, is located in an area that has become highly developed. The pond has already suffered one oil spill, and Curley says he and highway superintendent Harold Litchfield worry that some oil delivery truck will loose control going across the culvert area and go into the pond.

Pollution from highway salt and septic system overflows in the area is another constant source of concern.

Curley credits his fellow water department employees for his longevity.

"They're dedicated people," he said. "I've been very fortunate in my co-workers."

Curley makes the point that the fortune is Cohasset's, since nobody gets rich working for the town. Job applicants are frequently dismayed to learn how low the starting salary is.

"I've had people tell me they could get paid more at McDonald's and get a free lunch, too," he said. He points out that water department workers are on call 24 hours a day, 365 days a year.

Occasionally, townspeople ask why the water department can't close on the weekends to save money.

"People drink water on Saturday and Sunday, too," was Curley's standard retort.

So much of his life was spent in the water department that Curley finds it impossible to talk about it in the past tense.

"I already miss it," he says.

Sitting around isn't his style, either.

"I worked all my life," he said. "I don't plan to completely retire."

He doesn't know what the future will hold, although his wife, Anne, suggests that he could put up some shelves. And he has two adorable grandchildren who love to spend time with him.

Whatever Curley does, he will certainly be doing it in Cohasset. Uncle Sam sent him around the world twice and he's vacationed in Florida, and that was far enough.

For Ben Curley, "There's no place like Cohasset."

Laugelle retains disposal permit with conditions

The board of health will not revoke commercial trash hauler Joseph Laugelle's disposal privileges at the transfer facility.

Citing three occasions when Laugelle violated the town's mandatory recycling bylaw, the board of health will require Laugelle to submit a compliance plan.

Laugelle, who serves as the landfill supervisor and director of the town's recycling operation, is also a commercial trash hauler. But according to health board records, on three recent occasions an inspection of Laugelle's trash revealed materials that should be recycled, and not placed into the transfer facility.

Laugelle admitted his error, but asked the board not to revoke his disposal privileges at the town's recycling/transfer facility.

"Recycling is a good thing for the town," he said. But because of the mandatory recycling and the higher price he must charge for residential trash collection, Laugelle said he has lost one-third of his customers.

The hauler said when he discovers violations of the recycling bylaw by his customers, he sends them a notice. He has also dropped three customers because they failed to comply with the new regulations.

"I want you to know I am doing the best I can," he told the board.

The health board held a "show-cause" hearing on the matter Tuesday night to determine whether Laugelle's disposal privileges should be revoked.

Atty. Charles Humphreys, representing Laugelle, charged that the board did not have the right to "take away his business." He said under the current local bylaw, the board is limited to issuing a fine of up to $500 per violation.

Humphreys also noted that because the local bylaw has not been filed with the state Department of Environmental Protection, that regulation is not in compliance with the state's public health law.

Town Counsel Richard Henderson, who was not at the public hearing, disagreed that the health board was limited to issuing fines for violations. Under the state public health law, the board is given the right to seek legal action against anyone who violates the law, Henderson told the board later that night.

Humphreys also argued that board members have publicly commented that Laugelle's position as landfill supervisor might be a conflict of interest with his private trash hauling business.

South Main Street resident Tanna Kasperowicz told the board that in a previous conversation with chairman William Baird, he expressed that concern.

Baird denied the statement, saying that in his conversation with Kasperowicz, he said the town must be careful to avoid the appearance of a conflict of interest, and that therefore "everyone must be treated equally."

Humphreys said there should be a way for the town to monitor the type of trash being disposed by the commercial haulers, without making them solely responsible for the content which is brought to the landfill in sealed bags.

"You should require the hauler to audit the trash, and if they have violations, then you should warn them. And if their customers do not comply, then they should discontinue the customer," Humphreys suggested.

Health Agent Joseph Godzik said he regularly inspects the trash disposed by the commercial haulers at the transfer station. It was during three of these inspections that Godzik found glass and newspapers in the trash that Laugelle was preparing to dump. Frequently, because an envelope containing an address is included with the trash, the identity of the violator is easily detected, he said.

Summer Street resident Mary Reppucci admitted it was her trash that Laugelle brought to the landfill which contained recyclable materials. She told the health board that she generally complys with the recycling bylaw, but when her college-aged children were home for vacation, they failed to separate the recycled items. On other occasions, she said, Laugelle has picked up a bag, heard the sound of glass in the sealed container, and refused to take it to the transfer station.

Reppucci told the board that the only way recycling is going to succeed is if "individuals are aware of the part they play." She said if a resident violates the bylaw, they should be fined, rather than the commercial hauler who collects the trash.

Ron Goodwin of Pond Street told the board that he found it "slightly hypocritical" that the health board takes the time to inspect a trash hauler's collection at the town's landfill, "when you don't look at what goes into the commercial landfill (Cohasset Heights Ltd.) which is disposing 300,000 tons a day."

Board chairman Baird noted that, "he (Laugelle) probably tries harder than everyone else to make recycling work."

"He doesn't want to be at odds with you," Humphreys replied. "But he does not want the reputation that he is not supporting recycling."

The board agreed with Humphreys' suggestion to require Laugelle to submit a plan to monitor the trash he collects. They also voted unanimously not to revoke his disposal privileges.

Four take out papers for selectman

The race has begun. A total of four candidates have taken out nomination papers for the April 14 town election.

Deadline for obtaining the nomination papers at the town clerk's office is Feb. 21.

Two incumbent selectmen have taken out their nomination papers this week. Selectman Burt Pratt and Selectman Martha Gjesteby will be running for re-election.

They will have competition from Jane Goedecke, who has also declared her candidacy for a seat on the board of selectmen.

Both terms are for three years.

School committee member Nancy Sandell has also taken out nomination papers and announced her intention to run for re-election. She has held that seat for the past three years.

There are 17 town offices up for election on April 14. Nomination papers, which must be returned with 50 signatures, are available at the town clerk's office.

ATTENTION: ARE YOU 50+ POUNDS OVERWEIGHT AND READY TO LEARN ABOUT...

The OPTIFAST Program

Affiliated With South Shore Hospital

1. Is there a difference in the dieting needs of the obese compared to those who just want to lose a few pounds? Yes. It is desirable for the obese to lose weight quickly to gain a sense of accomplishment, a key activating element. Traditional reducing diets, on which 1-1/2 to 2-1/2 pounds per week are lost may work for those slightly overweight. However, obese people are likely to lose motivation before they lose weight on such diets.

2. With the odds seemingly against the obese, is there really any effective treatment? Yes. Most researchers agree that sensible treatment should involve a multidisciplinary approach that decreases calorie intake, increases energy output through exercise and teaches behavior modification to maintain weight loss permanently. The Optifast® Program, combines a medically supervised, supplemented fast on which patients safely lose 2-5 pounds per week, with behavior modification, nutrition education and exercise education. The program, developed by Sandoz Nutrition, is available solely through hospitals and multi-specialty clinics. To be accepted into the program, individuals must be highly motivated and free of contraindicating health problems. This program, although an unprecedented medical success, may not be the program for you at this time in your life. This is not a "pay your membership", or "sign up" approach for every 50 pounds or more overweight person. The Optifast® Program is a highly structured, 26 week program of supplemented fasting, refeeding and stabilization. The program provides a unique combination of medical monitoring by a physician and a registered nurse, group sessions coordinated by a licensed psychologist and education by registered dieticians. The candidate for the program must be ready to make a commitment of time, money, and lifestyle change.

3. Why is behavior modification so important? Behavior modification helps the obese change the habits that make them overweight. It contributes to effective weight reduction and, perhaps more important, weight maintenance. The ultimate goal for all patients is to learn how to achieve dietary self-control by understanding and manipulating the factors interfering with adherence to their low-fat eating plan.

4. What is the role of exercise in weight reduction? Overeating and inactivity are partners in obesity. Incorporating regular, moderate exercise into one's lifestyle may contribute to weight loss in several ways. It burns calories, burning fat and building muscle. It also speeds up the rate at which those calories are burned, helping counteract the slowing of metabolism the body initiates when the obese person goes on a diet. Physical activity also helps people feel better about themselves, and encourages them to adhere to a weight loss program. Experts note that neither dieting, nor exercise alone are as effective in weight reduction as a combination of both.

5. How does the cycle of weight loss and gain so many dieters experience affect obesity? Studies show that repeat dieters have a tougher time losing and keeping off weight than those who have not dieted in the past. In a University of Pennsylvania Obesity Research Group study, laboratory rats on a weight loss diet took 21 days to lose a specific amount of weight and 46 days to regain it. When subjected to a second round of dieting, they took 40 days to lose the same amount of weight but gained it back in only 14 days. In dieting, they lost both fat and muscle. However, they gained back proportionately more fat than they had lost. Scientists think this may be due to physiological changes that prompt the body to slow the rate at which it burns calories to maintain vital processes.

6. What is the benefit of a modified fast? Research has shown that fasting is one of the most effective methods of losing weight. But prolonged fasting can result in many complications, including demineralization of bone, muscle wasting, protein losses, fatigue and loss of a sense of well being. With a "modified" fast, however, the patient gets the benefits of a rapid weight loss, diminished appetite and increased energy, with few, reversible, and mild complications.

7. What other benefits can patients expect? Blood pressure levels improve in the majority of patients. The vast majority also experience an improvement in blood sugar level, and quite often Type II diabetics achieve an acceptable blood sugar level without medication. In addition, most patients report an improved feeling of well-being marked by reduction in shortness of breath, relief of back and joint pain, and an increase in endurance and agility.

8. How does a patient begin the program? The first step is to attend a Free, no Obligation, Orientation at South Shore Hospital. During the orientation all aspects of the program are presented in depth by the Program Director, David P. McQuaid, Medical Director, Dr. Susan Page and Dr. Jed Mehegan, behavioral psychologist.

9. Then what? Then, it's ABC.

   A. The Supplemented Fasting Phase last for 12 weeks.
   During this phase you will be put on a very low calorie diet that will consist solely of the Optifast® formulation. The formulation comes in a variety of flavors, is nutritionally balanced, and contains 100% of the daily recommended requirements of protein, vitamins and minerals. There will be weekly consultations to monitor your safety and progress. In addition, at your weekly sessions, you will participate in a behavior modification group.

   B. The Refeeding and Stabilization Phase lasts for 13 weeks. During refeeding you will be gradually reintroduced to regular food and withdrawn from the Optifast® formulation. Weekly medical consultations and group behavior modification sessions will continue. Most patients continue to lose weight during this period. Once solid foods have been completely reintroduced into your diet, you will move into stabilization. Relapse prevention techniques are stressed during this period as you gain confidence necessary to maintain your weight loss.

   C. Maintenance: An Additional Support.
   Following stabilization, the additional support by weight maintenance sessions will be provided. Statistics show that people who do so experience continued success.

Call 340-OPTI or 340-8800

For information or to make a reservation for the next Free Optifast® Orientation Program, call David McQuaid, Program Director, at 340-OPTI or 340-8800 Monday through Friday between 9am and 5pm. As each caller may require 10 minutes of one-on-one attention, there is an answering machine so we can return your call if necessary.

The Optifast® professional staff is a dedicated and caring group whose every effort is to give you personal attention. ❑ Congratulations to Sandy and Anne Rose on the birth of their son! May you all be healthy and happy!

❑ We sure hope that Herm Fictner is feeling lots better as he reads this! Just remember Herm, you can't keep a good man down and you are the best!

❑ Nomination papers are available for 17 town offices, that is a lot! Surely there is a spot that you would like to run for, give it a try! All that is needed are fifty signatures to have your name placed on the ballot, and a lot of work after that! Be a good citizen, take part in local politics!

❑ Congratulations to Robert Leonard for earning a letter of commendation after all of his hard work at the site of a house fire last month. Working for two hours in sub zero weather is no easy task, even if you are a plumbing inspector!

❑ Here's hoping that Jack Creamer, the principal at the Osgood School is feeling better after his recent surgery. Hurry and get well, Jack, the students all miss you! If anyone wishes to send a card the address is Mass. General Hospital, Room 1140, Fruit St., Boston MA 02114.

❑ Joel Reidy, a student at Cohasset High School, was named player of the year of the 1989 Boston Globe All-Scholastic Boys' Soccer Team.

The third Reidy family member to make the team, this student council president joined with an impressive 13-shutout performance. The All-American and All-New England netminder lead Cohasset to its fourth straight South Sectional title and third state title appearance in four years by allowing only 13 goals and notching eight consecutive shutouts at one point. He has compiled an outstanding 73-12-8 mark with a career goals-against average of 0.67.

❑ The Community Center is sponsoring the annual Frosty Frolic Dance on January 20 at 8 p.m. Tickets are $15 per person, and are available at the center, or by calling Karen Hettstrom at 383-6584.

BONES IN CONTENTION

The backbone does not fit in with the common notion of a bone. Instead of being a single solid piece, the spine is composed of a series of twenty-four separate bones. This unique structure allows great strength and flexibility, and poses some risks as well. Not only does each spinal bone (vertebra) stack like a cylindrical lock, but each possesses bony projections. These serve as points of attachment for ligaments and tendons. They may also pivot against one another and function as facet joints. It is not hard to see how overly contracted muscalature can pull a vertebra from its proper position. Adding to the complexity is the fact that each vertebra encircles a portion of the spinal cord, with nerves branching out through vertebral gaps. With this architecture, one can see how a pulled neck muscle can result in numbness elsewhere in the body.

This body structure is complex, to say the least. Interruption along the spinal network can produce unfavorable results in most any extremity or organ. SCITUATE HARBOR CHIROPRACTIC offers the chiropractic applications that address such points of interference upon the nerve network, thus allowing the resumption of a natural flow of energy. For attention to your needs, please call us today. Located at 80 Front St., Scituate Harbor. Tel. 545-7388. By. appt. Early morning and late evening appts. Goedecke declares candidacy

Jane Goedecke of Nichols Road has declared her candidacy for selectman.

The chairman of the advisory committee said her experience on that board has given her a first-hand knowledge of the functions of town government.

She intends to resign from the committee next week to devote herself to a fulltime campaign.

Goedecke, a graduate of Wellesley College with a degree in political science, has served on the advisory committee for the past five years. For the past two-and-a-half years she has served as chairman.

"I think I have had a tremendous education these past five years on the advisory committee. My work as chairman was satisifying in many ways. It has given me a first-hand knowledge of how the town works as a whole and how all the pieces - particularly financial - fit together. I want to use this experience to help position Cohasset strongly for the future," she said.

A 14-year resident of Cohasset, Goedecke represented the advisory committee on the long range planning committee for Cohasset schools. She served on the Friends of the Paul Pratt Library Committee for five years, three of them as chairman. She is also a member of the Cohasset Community Center.

Married and the mother of two children, Goedecke founded the Cohasset Chapter of the AFS International Student Exchange, and served as its chairman for two years. She has also served on the religious education committee of the Unitarian Universalist Church and worked as member of the high school's foreign language curriculum review committee.

Editorial

Fair warning

This is the time of year when talk turns to budgets, overrides, cost-cutting and politics.

Yes, it's election season once again. Candidates for 17 offices are gearing up for campaigns that will continue until the April 14 election.

Already, incumbents are gearing up for a busy campaign, while new names have declared their candidacy for elected office. It should be a busy season.

We probably placed our collective head in a noose, but last spring we announced a new policy for The Mariner. We decided not to hide behind our editorial shroud, but to come out and face the voters. This year, as we promised, we will be endorsing candidates.

Some people may look upon this revelation as slightly more important than publishing the schedule for cable channel 3. But to us, it's a significant step forward in communicating with our readers.

As we said last year, most people are too busy to pay close attention to the local campaigns. They may vote for a neighbor, a longtime friend, or a relative. But they may not be as aware of the issues and how the candidates feel about the issues as their community newspaper.

Behind the editorials, the articles and the headlines are the reporters who cover the activities of the town hall. They are the ones who will be interviewing the candidates, and based upon their knowledge of the candidates, they can hopefully make some intelligent decision about the choice facing Cohasset voters.

We will be endorsing candidates the week of the April 14 election. By that time, we will have completed our interviews, and discussed the candidates with our executive editor and publisher. Based on a collective choice, we will publish the list of endorsements.

Certainly our endorsement will not be the death knell nor the push to the finish line for our local politicians. It is simply one informed voice within the community expressing the reasons why one candidate may be superior to another.

We wish to assure all present and future candidates that our endorsements are not predetermined. At this point, we have no idea who will join the races, and we have only begun to formulate our thoughts on the candidates.

We realize that many people will be personally offended by our choices. But that is the consequence we will accept, regretfully. We will not endorse any candidate because of a personal friendship, a previous friendship, a working relationship, or a perceived relationship.

Our decisions will be based purely on the issues, how the candidate perceives those issues, the qualifications of the candidate, and, in the case of the incumbent, his or her track record on important town issues.

As for our readers, they can do what they will with the endorsements. Perhaps some will read them and use the information to help formulate their vote. Others will simply discard it. That is your option.

Our only option is to present a complete newspaper to this community. Our thoughts about an important local election are vital to that responsibility.

Believe us, it would be easier to go along as we have - ignoring the function of candidate endorsements. But like all good community newspapers throughout the country, we must take an active part in the functions of the town. We may not win a lot of friends, but perhaps we will influence a few. Winning friends is not our responsibility. Informing and enlightening our readers is the reason we exist.

Good luck to us all.

The Advisory Committee urges that Cohasset attempt to address the 1990 financial stranglehold on town services by creative problem solving. One such solution would be consolidation of some town services.

National dilemma, national solution

Letters

To the Editor:

Recently, congress voted to repeal the Catastrophic Care Act. Many were dissatisfied with the bill, in part, because of its limited coverage for nursing home care and expensive surtax.

Many elders said that the price was too high for something that would not provide them with the coverage they might need. Elders also resented being the only group taxed for the Act's benefits, arguing that such a restriction would have set a dangerous precedent. Next, would we only tax working families to fund education?

In the heat of debate, however, one thing is clear. We desperately need a national long term care plan in this country. No one is satisfied with how we pay for nursing home care. In Massachusetts, we spent nearly $1 billion last year for long term care expenditures alone.

Long term care is the largest single item in our state budget. What makes this more alarming is that elders have to become poor to qualify for the Medicaid program. That means that long term care is bankrupting elders and costing the state millions.

While there are some private long term care insurance plans, they are expensive and restrictive. Many elders don't qualify.

There must be a national solution to this national dilemma. Currently, several states are working on options to test long term care insurance strategies with the support of the Robert Wood Johnson Foundation.

Massachusetts is one of these states. The experience gained from these pilot programs will prove invaluable as we work hard to craft a national approach to long term care.

The Massachusetts plan involves a partnership among elders, the state and private insurers. The proposal is complex, but the benefit to elders will be protection of their life savings and the benefit to the state will be greater predictability in our Medicaid budget and potential savings in the long run. Moreover, the plan will not cost any additional state dollars.

I urge families to consider what options they have to pay for long term care. Don't wait and be devastated. I also ask Massachusetts citizens to continue to work for a national long term care plan for elders and their families. We can't afford not to.

Sincerely,
Paul J. Lanzikos, Secretary
Executive Office of Elder Affairs

Recycling news...

Tip of the week:

Clean off all plastics of your recyclable material as you prepare it at home; specifically on your cardboard. If there are plastic windows on the corrugated cardboard boxes — take them off before you flatten the box.

An Educators' conference on trash will be held on Jan. 20, 1990 from 8:30 a.m. to 3:30 p.m. at the Gutman Library in Harvard Square, Cambridge, Mass. This conference will tackle many aspects of education including: storytelling, teaching, comedy, and discussion. As we all know from our Mandatory Recycling Program here in Cohasset, education is one of the most important elements of a healthy recycling program. It is ongoing and must be pervasive if it is to reach everyone. How about learning to make handmade paper with your very own hands? Doing it yourself will certainly help teach what a precious resource paper is and how relatively simple it is to recycle paper. How about taking a workshop in "Trash Education for Grades K-3," "Source Reduction," "Recycling in the Schools," or "Responsible Management of Hazardous Wastes in the High Schools"? A total of 16 workshops are being offered, and you are invited to participate. Sharon Becker will be going and has some extra registration forms. Teachers and parents are urged to attend. The cost of the conference is only $16. You can call her at 383-1971 for more information.

(Anyone working on Earthday plans in the schools and town — this is the conference for you).

Trouble Shooting at the RTF

Corrugated Cardboard: yes, it's in the news again. We have had a great deal of difficulty keeping the bin clean of contaminating material like plastic and styrofoam, and cardboard gift boxes. The bin has started to look like Santa's sleigh without the toys. Corrugated cardboard is only layered cardboard. If you examine the layers, it looks as though there are waves in it. As with all the recycling materials at the RTF, corrugated cardboard is a COMMODITY. . We sell the cardboard and it is in turn made into more boxes. If the cardboard is contaminated, we pay for it by having someone clean out the contaminants and by getting a lower price for it in the marketplace. Please tell your friends and neighbors that it is not a trash bin but a bin for CORRUGATED CARDBOARD ONLY which includes primarily: shipping boxes, produce and liquor boxes. Look for the wave in the layers if you are not sure. This commodity accounts for 33 percent of our waste by volume aaccording to RTF Supervisor, Joe Laguelle. Thank you again for another week of cooperation!

A look at the week in CHS sports

By Jane Lane
Mariner staff

It was an up and down week for the girls' basketball team last week. But Coach Debbie Bostwick believes that by the end of this week, they could return to the homecourt with a winning record.

Following last week's games, their record stood at 3-4.

Bostwick, in her first year as varsity coach, believes she has a team loaded with talent. Their only setbacks, she says, is their (lack of) size and inexperience. There are no seniors on this year's squad, but in one way that's good news, according to Bostwick. At least they'll be back next year.

"We have four juniors, four sophomores, and three freshmen this year," Bostwick says, although one sophomore, Maria Kierce, is out for the year with an injury.

The 1990 squad is centered around a nucleus of three starters from last year. Now it's a matter of fine tuning the others around them. Cohasset boasts a good bench team.

But their biggest drawback, she admits, is their lack of height. They are, she believes, the shortest team in the league.

"We're aggressive, but we need to watch our fouls. We could also use a tall one next year. But all in all, this is a very coachable team. I think we can do all right this season."

In last week's first game against Hanover, Cohasset limped away with a 49-43 loss. High scorers for that game were point guard Barb Lagrotteria with 11 points; guard Alison Ludlow with 9, Keri Murphy, a forward, with 8, forward Tanya Petersen with 7, center Heather Bass with four, and Moe and Kay Long, with two each.

Although unhappy at the prospect of a loss against the mighty Hanover team, Bostwick was thrilled with the man-to-man coverage by Cohasset that limited Hanover's Chrissy Smith to 25 points. The superstar usually scores at least 40, according to the coach, but the close guarding of Moe Long and Heather Bass held her down to almost half that amount.

The game was hardly one-sided, Bostwick says. They were losing by four after the first half, but by the third quarter, they were ahead by five points.

"We lost by six because we fouled more than Hanover," she says. "We played extremely well, but we sent them to the foul line 24 times." Fortunately, Hanover managed to shoot only 29 percent at the foul line, while Cohasset took advantage and scored sixty percent of their four shots.

Strangely, Cohasset did not well as well against Carver last Friday, but they managed to salvage a win, 41-35.

"Probably because they are a weaker team, the momentum we had in Hanover just wasn't there," the coach explains. Their fouling problem was alleviated Friday night, but the offense couldn't click, accordng to the coach. "Our defense was sloppy too, but somehow we managed to win that one," she says.

High scorer for Cohasset once again was Barb Lagrotteria. Alison Ludow threw in 12 for Cohasset. Bostwick credited some sparkling defense to

Hockey

The hockey team lost to Abington, 6-1 and then lost a second game to Duxbury, 4-0.

In the Abington game, freshman Michael Reynolds scored Cohasset's only goal of the night. But Coach Dennis Walsh said it was a closer game than the score indicated.

"It was 3 to 1 most of the game, then Abington scored three goals very quickly at the end," he says.

At the end of last week, Cohasset stood at the bottom of the league with a 0-5 record. "It's transition year," Walsh explains, noting that his team includes two eighth graders, and three starting ninth graders. Five seniors graduated last year, while Brian Pompeo, an outstanding wing and defenseman on last year's team, has transferred to a private high school.

On the positive side, senior soccer sensation Joel Reidy is in goal once again - this time on the ice. Walsh says Reidy has really improved since he joined the team last year.

Although admittedly one-sided, the Duxbury match was as overwhelming as it appears on paper, according to Coach Walsh.

Duxbury, a genuine hockey powerhouse, has been beating team ten to nothing, according to Walsh. And although Cohasset had some good shots, they couldn't get them by Duxbury's outstanding goalie, he says.

Duxbury concluded their vistory with 36 shots on goal, compared to Cohasset's 17 attempts.

This week, Cohasset faces off against Scituate High and then Rockland High.

"We should be in pretty good shape against Scituate," Walsh says. "We're looking forward to our first win."

The 22 skaters on the Skippers squad may be inexperienced, but they're getting some good skating time under their belts. "It's a learning year for them. I just want them to enjoy the experience," Walsh adds.

Boys' basketball

Coach Arnie Reppucci says his team is playing better now, despite two losses last week. The first game against Hanover ended in a 58-47 score.

But Friday's game against Carver was " a real rocker," according to coach. His team came back from a 12-point deficit at the beginning of the fourth quarter, to come within two points when the final buzzer sounded.

Last week's match against Hanover saw Linc Marsac score 19 points for Cohasset. He was joined by another tri-captain, Mike Ellinger, who scored 10 points for the Skippers.

"We played well," Reppucci said, recalling that Cohasset was down only by one point by the end of the first quarter. By the half they were in the hole by seven.

And that brought Reppucci back to a familiar complaint - the lack of regulation basketball facilities in the town where young kids can practice.

"It's really starting to show," he says. "It's starting to rear its ugly head - very few of our kids are playing basketball during the off-season. There is not one public basketball court in this town."

Another factor is that many Cohasset athletes play more than one sport, and everyone on the basketball team except two players are members of fall teams. Conversely, a team like Sandwich has no football and many of their players are on summer, fall and spring basketball leagues.

"I can see it now. The kids are inexperienced and it's starting to show. They don't have the mental discipline," Reppucci says.

But the coach believes that situation can be remedied as the season continues.

The game against Carver was their best of the young season, according to the coach. "This is what high school basketball is all about," Reppucci said. Fans from both schools packed the Carver gym - and Reppucci is grateful for the local fans who made the long drive to Carver.

"Without the fans there, I don't think we couldn't have done as well. It was crowded, noisy and really fun," he said.

The score, meanwhile, was up and down against Carver, with Cohasset down by eight at the half. They were down by 12 at the start of the fourth quarter. Big baskets by Ellinger, Marsac, and Noah Hill gave Cohasset the lead by three during the last quarter.

Unfortunately, four Cohasset players fouled out of the game (once again showing their inexperience) and the big shooters were gone from the court.

The game's leading scorer was Marsac with 27 points - a season high. Hill claimed 20 points and Ellinger had his best game of the year with 15 points.

A tough week is facing Cohasset, with a game against East Bridgewater and away match against Norwell on Friday.

"We're going to make some changes, and hopefully with those changes and more awareness of things they're doing wrong, we can start improving. Hopefully, the kids are starting to realize what they're doing wrong.

"I'm still optimistic that we can start to change things around," Reppucci says. "We're playing better now."

At the conclusion of last week, Cohasset claimed a 1-5 record.

Social Security - SSI Program

People in financial need who are 65 or older or people of any age who are blind or disabled (including children) may be eligible for monthly cash payments from the Federal Government. The payments are called supplemental security income (SSI).

People may be eligible for SSI payments if they have little or no regular cash income and do not own much in the way of resources that can be turned into cash. To be eligible, a person must be a U.S. citizen or an alien lawfully admitted for permanent residence, or an alien living in the U.S. under color of law. A person must live in the U.S. or the Northern Mariana Islands. And, a person must apply for any other money benefits for which he or she may be eligible. Even though the Social Security Administration runs the program, SSI is not the same as Social Security. Money for SSI payments comes from the general fund of the U.S. Treasury. The State of Massachusetts adds money to the Federal payment. For the convenience of SSI recipients, the State of Massachusetts and the Federal Government have agreed to include the State share of the payments in the Federal check. As a result, an SSI recipient receives one U.S. Government check during the first week of each month, with Federal and State money included. The back of this factsheet has a table showing the 1989 maximum monthly payment amounts for SSI recipients in different living arrangements.

MEDICAL ASSISTANCE

If a person receives SSI payments, he or she gets medical assistance (Medicaid) automatically. A separate Medicaid application is not necessary. Anyone who has questions concerning Medicaid should contact his or her local department of public welfare.

FOOD STAMPS

People receiving SSI may be eligible for food stamps. Food stamps enable people to buy more food without spending more money. The Social Security Administration does not determine food stamp eligibility. However, if you live in a household in which everyone is applying for or receiving SSI, you may apply for food stamps at your Social Security office.

OTHER SOCIAL SERVICES

Additional social services are available to SSI recipients through their local department of public welfare. These services include:

Information, referral, and follow-up services
Homemaker and chore services
Community placement services
Rehabilitation services

For more detailed information on these and other social services, contact Pay Ryan, 383-9112.

WINTER CLASS SCHEDULE

All classes start Jan. 8 to 12: Exercise class with Karen — Monday, 9 a.m. - 10 weeks.

A sad decision from attorney general to liquid assets they now control, and to make grants available to charities for the elderly.

Probate Court Judge James Lawton, who was present at last week's pre-trial conference between the assistant attonry general and the trustees, will probably schedule a trial sometime in April. The issue that remains unresolved is whether the trustees may establish the grant-issuing trust as they intend, or whether the proceeds should be used to establish an Alzheimer's care center.

Allen said he still favors the Alzheimer's proposal, but at an alternative site.

When Curtis died in 1931, he left a will that stipulated that his property in Cohasset be used as housing for "feeble, deformed or invalid women."

"I was very sad to have to come to this conclusion," Allen explained. "There was a priority to do something on the site, and if we couldn't, to come as close as possible to what Mr. Curtis wrote in his will.

"But that site would limit the number of septic systems, the number of participants (in an Alzheimer's Care Center) and it would therefore limit the funding. Hopefully, another site will be found for such the center," he said.

The intent of Curtis' will should be followed as closely as possible, Allen said. "Because our contention is that Mr. Curtis intended to have a facility on the property. The next best thing to on-site would be for the town to look at establishing an alternative site.

The April trial will determined whether the trustees must look for that alternative site for an Alzheimer's facility.

"The Curtis will deserves to have this facility," Allen said.

"We've spent an extensive amount of hours working on this to keep the facility on site. That's the way the will was written. But unfortunately, I had to make the sad decision that it would simply be too risky to have a facility such as the Alzheimer's center on that particular site."

Gymnastics registration

The Cohasset Community Center is taking registration for gymnastic classes for three to sixteen year-olds.

There are openings in the following classes:

Preschool Girls — Tuesdays, 2 to 3 p.m.; Wednesday, 2:30 to 3:30 p.m.; Thursday, 1 to 2 p.m.; Friday, 2 to 3 p.m. Three to four-year-old boys; Monday mornings, 11:15 to 12 p.m. and 12 to 12:45 p.m.; 4 to 5 year-old boys — Wednesday, 1:30 to 2:30 p.m.; Beginner Boys 5, 6, 7 — Tuesday, 4 to 5 p.m.; Friday, 3 to 4 p.m.; Beginner Intermediate Girls 6 to 9 years-old — Tuesday, 3 to 4 p.m.; Wednesday, 3:30 to 4:30 p.m.; Beginner Intermediate Girls 9 to 13 year-olds — Thursday, 3 to 4 p.m.; Junior High and High School Girls — Wednesday, 5:30 to 6:30 p.m.

Sign up now to ensure yourself a spot. Classes are taught by Ruthann Sargent, Liz Buckley, Pamela Maynard and Barbara Goggin. Call the center today at 383-0088. Classes run until May and cost $20 per month.

Free lead screening

The Board of Health of Cohasset and the Social Service League will sponsor a lead poison screening clinic for children between the ages of 18 months and five years, Thursday, January 18, from 11 a.m. to 1 p.m. at the Cohasset Community Center, 3 North Main Street.

This screening consists of a painless prick and a small amount of blood withdrawn from the finger for analysis. Since most children have no symptoms, a blood screening test is the only detection method for lead poisoning.

Lead poisoning is caused by eating, chewing or sucking on lead painted objects such as window sills, railings, toys, jewelry or printed material. Other sources include — contaminated soil or dust and fumes created by home renovation and sand blasting. The risk of lead poisoning is increased by hand to mouth activity in young children. With so many antique houses in Cohasset, lead paint poisoning may be a real risk.

For further information, call the Social Service League office between 8:30 a.m. and 3 p.m. at 383-0771 or 383-0821.

Amateur gardeners meet

The amateur gardeners of Cohasset will meet at 1 p.m. Tuesday, Jan. 16, at the Stop and Shop Conference Room at Cohasset Plaza.

The program, "Monarch Butterflies Slide Show," will be presented.

Obituaries

Frank Massa

A funeral Mass was celebrated January 4 in St. Anthony's Church for Frank Massa. Mr. Massa, 83, founder and chairman of Massa Products Corp. in Hingham, died January 2 in South Shore Hospital. Burial was in Woodside Cemetery.

Mr. Massa was credited by the Secretary of the Navy in the 1950's with being largely responsible for the Allied victory in World War II due to his development of sonar equipment for the Navy.

That equipment was used during the war for detecting underwater submarines and enemy missiles. He provided the Navy with accurate sonar needed to stop German "Wolf Pack" submarines that were destroying American ships carrying war material to England.

The son of Italian immigrants, he spoke no English when he started the first grade. But he later contributed to the first American textbook on acoustical engineering.

He graduated from Revere High School and the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, receiving a bachelor of science degree in electrical engineering in 1927. He also won the Swope Fellowship, enabling him to continue his studies and earn a master's degree the following year.

During World War II, he was director of acoustical engineering for Brush Development Co. in Ohio, and designed underwater equipment for mines, torpedoes, sonar and hydrophones.

In 1945, Mr. Massa and his wife, the late Georgiana (Galbraith) Massa founded Massa Laboratories in Cleveland, Ohio where high-precision microphones, accelerometers and underwater calibration devices were manufactured.

They moved the company to Hingham in 1950, and began to manufacture transducers for air and underwater use in the larger corporate headquarters.

Mr. Massa worked alongside MIT, the University of Hawaii, and the National Geographic Society to develop methods to track whales. He worked frequently in association with the Office of Naval Research on such matters.

He remained active as chairman of the company until his death.

Mr. Massa enjoyed the opera and liked to watch Italian operatic productions on television.

Born in Boston, he grew up in Revere and lived in Cleveland for ten years before moving to Braintree. In 1952, he moved to Cohasset.

A member of the American Insititute of Physics, he was a life fellow of the Institute of Electrical and Electronics Engineers. He was also a member of the IEEE Professional Group on Sonic and Ultrasonic Engineering.

During World War II, he served on scientific committees for the U.S. Navy.

He leaves two sons, Donald Massa of Cohasset and Robert Massa of Scituate; a daughter, Georgiana Massa of Cohasset; a brother, Ernest Massa of Florida; four sisters, Aida Thomas of Florida, Olga Dellogano and Grace Staus, both of Cohasset; and Gilda Anderson of Braintree; and two grandchildren. He was the father of the late Frank Massa Jr. and Constance Massa.

Funeral arrangements were completed by the McNamara-Sparrell Funeral Home, 1 Summer Street in Cohasset.

Jessie S. Wilson

Private funeral services were held last week for Jessie S. (Macdonald) Wilson. Mrs. Wilson, whose 100th birthday was celebrated December 27, died January 1 at home.

Born in Lynn, she attended high school in Swampscott and Lynn. She attended Burdette College for a year and the Sargeant School in Cambridge, which later became the Sargeant School for Allied Health at Boston University.

Wife of the late Everett B. Wilson, she leaves a son, Stuart Wilson of Sarasota, Fla.; two daughters, Jane M. Wilson of Boca Baton, Fla. and Elizabeth Van Slyck of Hingham; five grandchildren and six great-grandchildren.

Funeral services were completed by the Downing Cottage Funeral Chapel in Hingham.

Time for Mentors submissions —

Now that the post-holiday calm is upon us, please take a moment to recall a person in your life who has guided or influenced you, or find a poem or piece of prose that expresses your feelings about a Mentor in your life. The Music and Worship Committee will meet on Sunday, Jan. 14, and would like to begin editing their 1990 Lenten Manual, Mentors. Please leave your contribution at the office.

The Outreach Committee — will meet on Tuesday, Jan. 16 in the Parish House.

Women's Book Group —

The Women's Book Group will meet on Tues., Jan. 30 at 7:30 p.m. at the home of Nancy Robertson, to discuss the book Breathing Lessons, by Ann Tyler. All are welcome!

The Ministerial Relations Committee — exists to address, on a confidential basis, the concerns of members relating to the minister (and those of the minister as he seeks to serve the congregation). Anyone having such a concern should feel no hesitation in speaking with one or more of the committee members: currently, Ruth Wilcox, Cliff Mitman and Iri Bloomfield. The committee will meet next on February 8, 1990.

South Shore Cluster Dinner: Jan 18

The upcoming Cluster dinner, Thurs. Jan. 18 at the First Parish in Scituate, will feature the UUSC Philippines Program Associate in Human Rights Education, Dellia Leyve, who will bring us up to date on this newest UUSC Human Rights initiative and on the human rights situation in the Philippines itself.

Social hour at 6:30 p.m., dinner at 7 p.m., program at 8p.m. Cost (roast beef dinner): $5. Call the office by Jan. 16 to make reservations.

PSO to present Judith Black

The Cohasset PSO Curriculum Enrichment Committee is sponsoring workshops featuring Judith Black, one of New England's foremost storytellers.

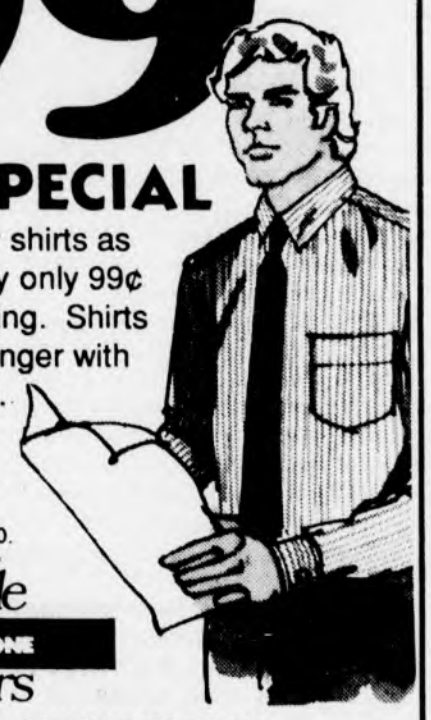
Black recently received the Gold Medal Family Entertainment award from Boston Parent's Paper. Her radio and television credits include "The Spider's Web" for Nation Public Radio, "Evening Magazine" and "Folk Heritage" for WGBH-TV. She has been commissioned to create original stories for National Public Radio, the Artists Foundation and the U.S.S. Constitution Museum.

Black will be at the Osgood School with two workshops, one for Kindergarteners and first graders, and the other for second and third graders; and at the Deer Hill for all grades on February 6.

After school program

The Cohasset Afterschool Program is in full swing and is accepting registrations for the second half of the year.

The program is for children grades K-6 and is held at the Joseph Osgood school. It runs from the end of the school day until 6 p.m. every day that school is in session. Activities include bowling, trips to the library, cooking projects, art projects, organized games and more. Children may attend one to five days a week. If you have any questions stop by and speak to Melissa Walker, the Afterschool Director or call Marnie Carter at 383-6104 to register.



Tapes for computers

Please keep those Stop & Shop tapes coming. The computer give away program runs through March 10 which means we have two more months to go. We can get several more computers if everyone continues this overwhelming support. Thank you!

Morning Kindergarten hours are from 8:55 a.m. to 11:30 a.m. while the afternoon session meets from 12:15 p.m. to 2:55 p.m.

P.S.O. budget reminder

The School Committee budget discussions have started. The next meeting is Tuesday, Jan. 16 at 8 p.m. in the high school home economics room. In light of the economic conditions in this state, these discussions are crucial to the quality of our children's education. You are encouraged to attend.

Volunteer at library

A cure for the January doldrums — come volunteer at Osgood School Library. If you have an hour (or more) a week, you can give to help, please call Mrs. Williams in the library— Help is needed to shelve, "card," and repair books.

Health education meeting

Parents interested in serving on this year's Community Health Education Advisory Committee should make an attempt to attend the meeting which will be held in room 206 at Cohasset High School on Thursday Jan. 11, at 7 p.m.

The committee, which has been active for more than ten years, is always willing to welcome new members interested in the development, implementation, and advancement of formal health education programs in the Cohasset Schools.

This meeting will begin at 7 p.m. sharp, and will provide a forum for discussion about the year's activities and programs. The meeting will end at 8 p.m. and will be immediately followed by an orientation meeting for junior high parents. The purpose of this meeting will be to familiarize parents with the junior high AIDS education program. This meeting will allow for parents to review and inquire about media materials and curriculum content.

If you are interested in serving on the Committee, but are unable to attend this meeting, contact Mike Gill at 383-6107, 6100.

Kindergarten readiness

The Carriage House Nursery School is sponsoring a discussion featuring Dr. Joanne Benn, an expert in Child Development and Family Studies. She will discuss "Kindergarten Readiness Can Be Child's Play."

The sessions will be held Wednesday, Jan. 17 and Tuesday, Jan. 23, at 7:30 p.m. at the Parish House, 23 North Main Street.

With kindergarten registration approaching, many parents are thinking about their child's readiness for that next step.

Parents will be able to examine their concerns related to the development of four and five-year-olds at the two programs led by Dr. Benn. Each session will include a presentation by Dr. Benn, with informal contributions from local preschool teachers, and parent interaction.

Dr. Benn is a consultant who specializes in issues related to child development and early childhood education. She has a PhD from Pennsylvania State University in Child Development and The Transition to Parenthood. Her Masters in Education is from Columbia University in Early Childhood and Parent Education. Dr. Benn is currently on the faculty of Curry College in Milton, Ma. Prior to that she was an Assistant Professor and coordinator of the graduate studies program at Wheelock College in Early Childhood Education and Child Development. She has served as lecturer and visiting professor at several colleges and universities, and has published numerous articles on related subjects.

Participants should come prepared to ask questions, share concerns, and explore materials and ideas.

For additional information call nursery school director Sally Atkinson at 383-9785.

Winter courses at center

Cohasset Community Center is sponsoring the following courses:

Speed Reading: with Sanborn Associates. Meets Tuesday 7 to 9 p.m. for four weeks starting January 16. Students, teachers, and professionals can learn to double or triple reading speed. Equal emphasis is placed on speed and comprehension. Call 383-0088 to register.

Tai Chi: with Jimmy Morris. Beginners meet Wednesday 7:45 to 8:45 p.m.; Intermediates meet Wednesday 6:45 to 7:45 p.m. for 10 weeks beginning late in January. This ancient Chinese system of exercise promotes health, balance and relaxation. Instructor Jimmy Morris is a Master of the form. Call 383-0088 to register.

Contract Bridge: with David Leopold. Beginners meet Thursday 8 to 10 p.m. for eight weeks starting January 25; Intermediates and continuing students meet Monday 8 to 10 p.m. for eight weeks starting January 22. Learn this exciting, competitive game of skill or brush up and improve your game. Instructor David Leopold is a leading tournament player and Life Master. Call 383-0088.

Workshop: Mental Aerobics: with Jean Hillson. Cohasset Community Center is offering a unique one-day workshop entitled "Mental Aerobics: Seeing Opportunities and Creating Alternatives," on Saturday, January 20, from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m. This is training to foster ingenious thinking, creativity and problem-solving.

For further information call 383-0088.

School committee will support override teaching position, Hart said, all three grades at the school would have four teachers. With projected increased enrollment, it is estimated that every class size will then increase to 30 students or more, he added.

At the Deer Hill School, a half of the curriculum coordinator salary would be cut, along with a reduction of an instrumental music teacher to half-time. The school librarian position would also be eliminated, although it could possibly be filled by a para-professional, Supt. Hart suggested.

"This highlights the problems facing Cohasset," Supt. Hart said. "And it's frightening to look forward to what will happen in the next five years unless there are some fundamental changes in the way school systems are financed."

A second budget proposal presented by the superintendent would increase next year's total by 5.5 percent to $5,590,746. The superintendent called this the "level-service" budget, meaning that all services provided by the school system would be restored next year, although it will cost more.

A final version of the FY91 budget presented to the school committee was called a "growth" budget. Although there were no substantial increases reflected in this proposal, level services in addition to minor increases amounted to $5,773,381, or a nine percent increase over this year's total.

Supt. Hart presented the level-funded budget because he was required to do so by the advisory committee. But level-funding, he explained, will be a detrimental impact to the school system.

There were some areas that could not survive further cuts over last year's reductions, he noted. Teachers and administrators indicated that after cutting supplies by ten percent this year, there is no room for further reductions next year.

"We can't do that on a yearly basis. We're at a plateau unless we make devastating cuts. We could possibly recommend cutting all athletics - but even that will only account for $84,000," Supt. Hart said.

The superintendent also presented what he called a restoration budget, which included level services, plus a few "growth" items for next year. Within that budget, money for teaching positions slated for reduction would be restored, along with some monies for new texts and maintenance projects at each of the schools.

School committee members noted that they have not yet endorsed any one budget presented by the superintendent. But as member Ralph Kidder noted, "from the point of view of the school committee, there will be the necessity to present an override."

During the next few weeks, the committee will decide whether to cut teachers, principals, athletics, and other programs. But before they begin, "the hacking," Kidder suggested that everyone recognize the financial difficulties at the state level. State politicians have left cities and towns "in a quagmire," he said.

"So we have to exhibit our political will and leadership. We have to present a budget we believe in, that is responsible and in the best interest of the future of the students in this school system."

To seriously consider a level-funded budget for next year would be irresponsible, he suggested.

"We need to make cuts where cuts can be made economically. But the end budget should clearly establish the needs of the school system - not some arbitrary bottom line," he said.

Kidder said presenting a level-funded budget with no monetary increases was an exercise accomplished at the request of the advisory committee. But it is one he will not support.

Chairman Barbara Bliss agreed. "The school committee has no intention of not fighting for an override," she said.

But figuring an override amount will not be the school committee's decision alone. "We have to face that reality. We do not have the total say on what the override will be," she added.

"Mental Aerobics"

Cohasset Community Center is offering a one-day workshop entitled "Mental Aerobics: Seeing Opportunities and Creating Alternatives," Saturday, Jan. 20 from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m. with Jeanne Hillson.

The workshop's premise is that a mind permitted to run free will discover new territory. It is experiential in nature, offering practical tools that enable participants to perceive and create new opportunities and alternatives.

"Mental Aerobics" participants work (and play) with a variety of proven creative problem-solving approaches that help them to gain insight into the creative process.

WARNING:

WINTER MAY BE HAZARDOUS TO YOUR CAR.

The facts are hard and cold.

Many motor oils just don't perform in winter weather. And that can lead to friction. Extreme engine wear. Or even extensive damage, or a breakdown that leaves you and your family stranded.

That's why it's so important to take your car or truck to Jiffy Lube now for our famous 14-Point, 10-Minute Oil Change. We'll ensure that your oil is the right weight for your car and the weather. And we'll install a new FRAM or Purolator oil filter, check and fill six essential fluids, lube the chassis, and much more.

Be sure to protect your car and your wallet against cold-weather calamities — by visiting Jiffy Lube today.

Town to vote on user fee for harbor boaters

By Jane Lane
Mariner staff

The harbor committee believes that boat owners should be charged an annual harbor user fee.

The proposal, if passed by the April 7 town meeting, would affect all mooring holders and those boaters who rent space at private docks in Cohasset Harbor.

In effect, boat owners would be paying a user fee for services provided by the local harbormaster.

The harbor committee has not voted on the final proposal, but there is a space reserved in the April 7 town meeting warrant calling for a change in the town bylaw.

The proposal is in the preliminary stages, according to harbor committee chairman Fritz Pfaffmann. The committee has not yet voted on the bylaw change, although Pfaffmann appeared before selectmen Tuesday night asking them to reserve space within the town meeting warrant.

A portion of the bylaw change will require every boat owner in the harbor, whether they are renting private or public facilities, to pay the harbormaster an annual user fee.

In addition to setting the mooring fee, selectmen will now have the additional responsibility of deciding what to charge for this annual harbor fee. The user fee rate would not be determined until the proposal is approved by town meeting.

In addition to the harbor user fee, the proposed bylaw change would also include some clarifications. According to Town Counsel Richard Henderson, there are three significant changes in the proposed bylaw.

As the harbor committee previously discussed last year, the new bylaw will allow mooring permits to be held only by individuals and not by organizations, clubs, or business enterprises. But if the bylaw is approved, those businesses and organizations which currently hold public moorings will be grandfathered into the new regulation.

Local fisherman Herb Jason complained that this change will prevent fishermen who are incorporated from owning a mooring. He called the new proposal "discrimination" against the local harbor businessmen.

Town counsel and Pfaffmann disagreed, explaining that a fisherman is still entitled to maintain a mooring using the name of one individual from the corporation. In addition, those fishermen who currently hold a mooring are grandfathered into the bylaw.

"The new bylaw is to prevent a corporation being sold to a new corporation and maintaining the same mooring," Selectman Diana Kornet explained.

"Be assured the harbor committee and selectmen want to protect the interests of the harbor fishermen."

Businesses that currently hold a mooring in the harbor can retain the same mooring as long as they remain in business, Henderson added. The change prevents private businesses from holding public moorings in the future. If the new bylaw is approved, it

Turtle Island residents worry about feathered friends' fate

In his lifetime, Adam McClay has met some people he will never claim as friends. But in his own words, he's "never met a duck I didn't like.'

It's a good thing, since McClay and his wife, Helen, have about 80 of those good friends scattered about their backyard.

Since December, the McClay property on the corner of Beechwood Street and Mill Lane has been home for as many as 100 mallards. As far as McClay can determine, the waters in Cohasset were frozen early, and the ducks took advantage of the running swamp beyond his backyard.

"The reservoir is frozen. The town common is frozen and the harbor is frozen, and these ducks had nowhere to go," he said. One night, he looked out into the yard and saw "the whole place covered with ducks - it was all black."

Now, McClay is considered a fine friend for the feathered fowl, but he admits it's getting to be a burden. With so many ducks deciding to winter on his land, the longtime Cohasset resident has felt compelled to feed them.'

The problem is, he can't afford the expense anymore. And he's wondering if anyone is willing to share this burden.

"My heating bill is up fifty dollars. The car insurance is up. I just can't afford to feed them anymore, but they are depending on me," he said.

The ducks flew into his corner of Cohasset when they spied the running water from nearby Bound Brook. The early winter caught many of the mallards off guard, and they were forced to find a safe haven for the remaining months.

"We've taken over so much of their land, they have no place to go anymore," the sympathetic homeowner said. "It's just a terrible thing, but they've become dependent on us all."

Since he began feeding the hungry fowl, McClay and his wife have become attached to their new neighbors. They have named many of the mallards, and have found that each possesses a distinct personality.

Town to benefit from tax windfall

Cohasset's free cash account will be $258,000 richer following two favorable decisions in Norfolk County land court.

According to town treasurer, Elizabeth Ripley, the funds cannot be used until the next fiscal year.

Both cases involve long-standing arrearages in property taxes.

The first case involves unpaid taxes from 1974 to 1989 on a nursing home on Turkey Hill. The property was protected from foreclosure because it has been in bankruptcy and receivership.

The town and Creditors Trust of Idak, Inc. have entered into a court-approved agreement that allows Idak to redeem the premises from foreclosure by paying the town $4000 a month until the entire tax liability has been paid off.

The Trust currently owes $115,000 in back taxes. Interest will continue to accrue on the unpaid portions.

The second case involves the estate owned by the Lee Beauregarde Trust located at 396 Jerusalem Road.

Louis Sawayer, trustee of the Beauregarde Trust, must pay the entire tax bill of $128,000 plus interest and court costs on or before Feb. 2 to prevent the town from taking title to the property.

Sawayer has been disputing the tax bill as far back as 1977. He contended that payments had been made on the property, but the court found "the records and testimony presented by the Defendant are insufficient to rebut the presumed regularity and accuracy of the Town's records."

Life is better for Rev. Hall after mishap

By Alison Cohen
Mariner staff

Stephen Hall does not let any grass grow beneath his feet.

Three and a half months ago, the car he was riding in while on vacation in England had a close encounter with a truck. Hall was seriously injured. A lesser man would still be taking it easy and trying to recover from his injuries.

Hall is definitely not a lesser man and is certainly on the move.

"There are things I'm very excited about," he says by way of greeting. Not one to rest on formality, he gets up from his desk, fits his arms into the crutches he still must use, and comes over to sit in

Cohasset's week

Dog licenses are due

Cohasset dog licenses were to be purchased by January 1, 1990. That date was changed from the previous April expiration date.

All residents who own a dog must license the dog with the town. Licenses are available at the town clerk's office at the town hall. At the time of registration, bring along a copy of the dog's rabies vaccine certification and certification that the dog has been neutered or spayed.

Licenses for spayed or neutered dogs are $8. There is a $15 charge for males and females that have not been fixed.

Roadrace set for April 1

Selectmen granted their approval for the Cohasset Rotary to sponsor its 14th annual Roadrace-By-The-Sea.

The event will be held at 1 p.m. April 1.

Selectmen emphasized that dog owners should make sure their pets are inside or restrained on their property during the roadrace. Selectman Rocco Laugelle recalled that during a race years ago, a runner was seriously injured when he collided with a loose dog on the course.

Although the animal control officer will be on duty throughout the race, selectmen asked that all dogs be restrained on their property for that time.

Warrant articles reviewed

Selectmen reviewed a first draft of warrant articles for the April 7 town meeting. The articles are from their office only, and did not include a number of articles submitted by various town departments.

Residents who wish to sponsor articles for the warrant have until Feb. 7 to submit them.

The articles sponsored by selectmen include: expanding the term for building inspector to three years; to sell or lease the West Corner fire station; to expand the Beechwood Cemetery; to purchase or lease the Eastern Edison office on North Main Street; to accept the firefighters contract; and to approve revised plans by the police and fire station renovation committee.

Several of these articles may not be ready for town meeting action, according to executive secretary Greg Doyon, but a space will be reserved on warrant.

Curb cut is supported

Selectmen voted Tuesday night to support a request from the owner of the Jonathan Livingston Square to reopen a curb cut along Rte. 3A.

Tom Cummings, owner of the shopping mall, explained that when he designed a second section of stores at the square the planning board requested that he close an existing curb cut and utilize one entrance and exit from the shopping area.

After that was accomplished, everyone agreed it was not a successful and safe plan, he said. The traffic is a "real bottleneck," he told selectmen. Customers and shop owners have found it an unsafe method of traveling into the parking lot, particularly since the grading dips 15 feet from the entrance/exit to the parking area.

The planning board has requested that Cummings petition the state Department of Public Works for permission to reopen the former curb cut. They suggested that along with their support, selectmen should indicate to the state their approval of the new plans.

"This board is 100 percent behind you because of the safety factor," Selectman Rocco Laugelle said.

Cummings will include selectmen's support for the plan along with his application for the curb cut.

No new candidates

There were no new candidates for office this week, although there is at least one incumbent who will not return after the April 14 election.

Rev. Edward T. Atkinson, a member of the board of trustees of the Paul Pratt Library, informed the town clerk that he will not be a candidate for re-election. Three seats on that board that will appear on the April ballot.

The other incumbents who have taken out nomination papers this week include: Moderator William D. Weeks, Town Clerk Frances Marks, Assessor James Lagrotteria, Treasurer-Collector Elizabeth Ripley, Highway Surveyor Harold Litchfield, School committee member Nancy Sandell, Sewer Commissioner Edward M. Guild, and Cohasset Housing Authority member Stephen F. Wigmore.

Business discussion Jan. 23

Local merchants and interested residents are asked to join the Village and Harbor merchants for an informational meeting Jan. 23 at noon at the South Shore Art Center.

The meeting has been scheduled to give merchants and others the opportunity to "brainstorm" about future plans for the downtown business district.

The Village Renaissance which began before the holiday season, was a great success, according to Phil Smith, owner of Designer Creations on Ripley Road.

In order to continue that success, the merchants are being asked to plan for the future.

"The Village and Harbor district is one of Cohasset's real treasuers. This treasure contributes greatly, not only to the quality of life of our residents and visitors, but also to the economy of our town," Smith said.

The Jan. 23 meeting has been scheduled to allow merchants and residents to discuss ideas for promoting the town's businesses.

Participants are asked to bring along their lunch for the noontime meeting.

JACKANSONS
1921 OCEAN STREET
P.O. BOX 1449 MARSHFIELD MA 02050 834-6300

Almost nine years ago I came to Marshfield to begin a new venture with the opening of Jackansons.

Since, March 18, 1981 the store has grown from the "old Ducas" to one of the finest Hallmark Stores on the South Shore and the 15th largest Lottery agent in the State of Massachusetts. These results were achieved because of the loyalty of our customers and the dedicated and great group of employees I have had during these nine years.

However, all good things must come to an end. Given the economic climate, government rules and regulations, mandated insurance costs, etc. it is difficult for a "small business " to keep up the pace required to remain profitable. I'm only one person and I'm spread too thin. While we're on top it's time to get out.

Jackansons is not bankrupt, nor is it being forced to close by any bank or creditors. This is a voluntary liquidation of a successful business and is a decision made taking into consideration my family and the price that would have to be paid for us to continue on.

Effective Monday, January 15, 1990 we will begin to liquidate the inventory, valued at $700,000.00, by selling everything in the store at 50% off its retail price. (Lottery, newspapers, magazines, tobacco and small candy & sundry items excluded.) This sale will continue until Wednesday, February 14th, 1990 at 10:00 PM, at which time Jackansons will cease to operate as the retail store it has been and all remaining inventory and fixtures will be sold to a third party.

However, after February 14th and for the indefinite future, we will remain open to sell Lottery, newspapers, magazines, tobacco, miscellaneous candy and sundry items. In other words we want to be your local newsstand and Lottery Agent.

I hope you, our loyal customers, will understand why I am doing this and I look forward to seeing you during our liquidation sale to thank you for making Jackansons what it was. I will never forget the many friends and fun times that have been had over these past nine years in Marshfield.

Sincerely,

Jack

Rev. Hall's life has been enriched since accident . . .

It's difficult to know what title to use in referring to Hall. This is a man of many talents, many accomplishments.

"If life is a journey, which I believe it is, then mine is taking some really interesting turns," he confides.

Hall began in hotel management, then added a degree in business management. He has been a consultant to many of the top hotel and hospitality businesses. For five years he was a vice president at Harvard University. He resigned in 1976 because it was no longer challenging enough.

After Harvard, he served as president of an international credit reporting company for a short period of time.

"I didn't like that too well," he said. "So I left."

Hall landed a job with a window manufacturer. One day he went to Amherst College to sell them some windows. While he was there he saw a wheelchair lift. For some reason, it caught his fancy.

"I wrote to the company to ask if I could be their dealer," he said. His handicapped access company "grew and grew".

The little company he started in Scituate has grown to do $1.7 million in business a year and employs ten people. It is, he says simply, the top grossing handicapped access dealership worldwide.

That success wasn't enough.

Something drew Hall inexorably toward the ministry.

"I don't really understand how that came about," he says. In 1981, he started studying for his divinity degree at Harvard University. He stops to do some calculations, then says, "I was 47."

Rev. Stephen Hall found himself ministering to the small congregation at Beechwood Congregational Church in Cohasset.

"I wound up enjoying the ministry far more than I thought I would-- and I thought I would a lot," Hall said.

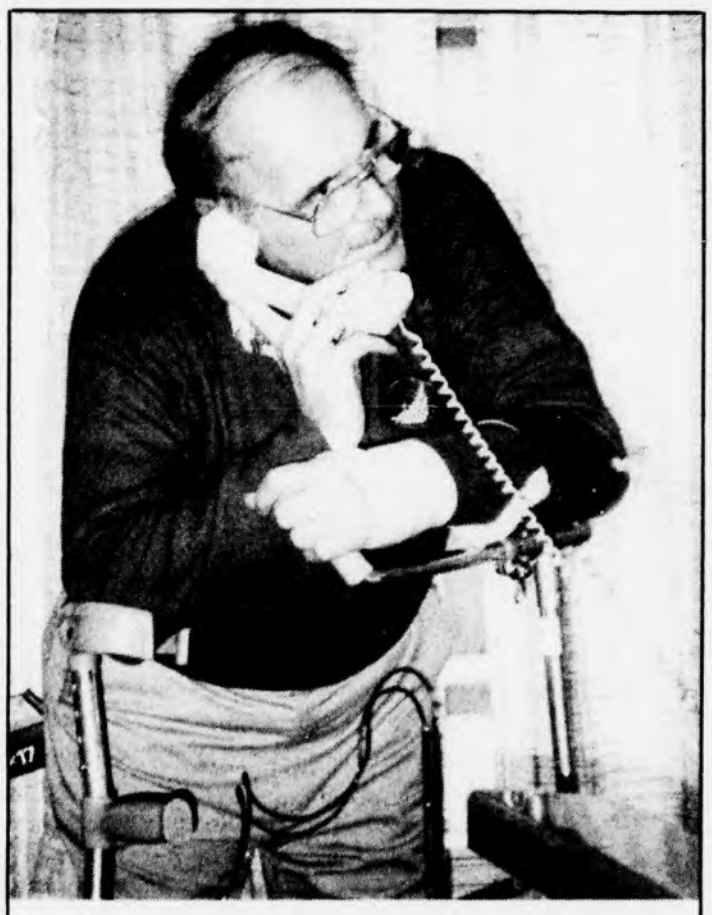
Life may have taken Hall down a new path, but he didn't abandon the old paths.

"Quality assurance kind of stuck on my mind," he says. So he started to write a book. His book should be published some time in the next few months.

Hall says the book introduces "a concept that is radically new to the world of quality assurance. But it's so obvious, it's embarrassing to talk about it."

Quality assurance has been defined as "conformance to standards" or "doing it right every time."

The problem with that, says Hall, is "What if they're lousy standards?"



By explanation, Hall creates a mythical company he names Rip-off Mufflers that sets a standard policy of using used parts and billing them as if they were new parts.

"Rip-off can meet it's standard every time," says Hall. "But is that quality?"

Then, says Hall, along came Peters' "In Search of Excellence", but Peters never defined excellence.

"So, when you think about it, quality can be of varying standards," says Hall. That just wasn't satisfying to Hall. He looked for a better model.

"Excellence equals quality plus ethics," he decided. "That means you can't have one without the other.

Rev. Stephen Hall

"The point is, that will be a new awakening. Quality assurance people will have to start talking about ethics."

And what is ethics?

According to Hall, "Ethics is knowing what is right and having the will to do it."

Hall is so convinced of the importance of joining quality assurance with ethics, that he has started a new venture-- the International Institute for Quality and Ethics in Service and Tourism, Ltd. The acronym is IIQEST, pronounced I-Quest.

When it is pointed out that there is no "u" in Hall's IIQEST, he pounces.

"A-ha! You're the 'u' in IIQEST."

IIQEST is just getting off Hall's drawing board. He has been sending out personal letters inviting hotels and tourist businesses he has met through his international consulting business to join. The response has been gratifying.

Oh yes. In addition to business man, administrator, and minister, Hall has also been a politician.

From 1968 to 1974, Hall served as selectman in Scituate.

"I miss it," he says. "I would like to jump back in."

It was never a question of power for Hall. He enjoyed doing a good job making the right decisions.

"I believed in open and total access," he says. "I was at town hall every Saturday a.m. so working people could come and talk to me.

"I started figuring the time, it didn't leave much time to do anything else."

He would have liked to have gone further in politics, but it would have meant a cut in pay. Hall had four children to care for and to educate, so he moved on to other things.

"I wanted to work my way up to state rep, and ultimately to Washington," he reminisced.

Hall is upbeat about his life. He is one of those folks who would, in deed, make lemonade if dealt lemons by life.

Of his Oct. 4 accident, he says that it was fortunate that it occurred so close to Northampton Hospital. He says it is one of the finest orthopedic hospitals in the world.

Hall gives the hospital staff a rave review. "The nurses in that hospital are just fantastic!" he said.

It's a good thing the hospital specialized in orthopedics, because Hall provided them with plenty of broken bones to fix. According to his wife, Margie, he had a fractured nose, fractured jaw, a couple of fractured ribs, a broken pelvis, a shattered left arm, and his right thigh was broken in four places.

"When I was first injured, I couldn't do anything," he recalled. For two and a half weeks, he was confined to bed. Finally, he got into a wheelchair.

"Margie (his wife) did everything for me," he said. "Actually, you're helpless."

When asked if it was difficult to be so far from home while hurting so badly, Hall says simply, "Hey. You just make friends."

Hall was helped along by letters, calls, and gifts from old friends from home as well as the new ones he made in England.

In his recovery, his emphasis is on productivity. He's always looking forward, always thinking positively. But his experience has made him a better minister.

"Now, as a minister, if I see somebody hurting, I relate to them a lot more," he says.

He may look to the future, but says that he has been changed by his accident.

"I'm not as intense about life. It's not a good way to learn, but we can't always pick the best way to learn."

Hall also says he learned the very real power of prayer. So many people were praying for him, that he says he could feel the power.

"It's like being carried on a bunch of shoulders."

Coming home was heavenly, but getting here was hard.

American Airlines flew him home, and Hall says they were wonderful to him. The flight lasted over 24 hours. Unfortunately, the last 45 minutes to an hour were sheer hell. Keep in mind that Hall had broken far more than his share of bones only a little more than a month previously.

"I'd just had it," he recalled. "I was almost in tears."

At that point, a stewardess came up to him. She asked if he was Rev. Hall. When he said that he was, she said she knew he must be. Then she told him that she was part of a prayer group that had been praying for him.

Hall looks back at that incident and says, "God said, 'Go as far as you can. I'll put an angel on the plane to help you the rest of the way."

Today, Hall is looking forward to being off his crutches. He has a goal: his last daughter is planning her wedding-- he thinks she is almost decided on July. Hall plans to walk her down the aisle under his own steam and then will perform the ceremony. It is a day that he doesn't picture himself on crutches.

Rev. Hall's life has been enriched

Not only is he a man of many vocations, he also has a full complement of avocations.

"I like to fly planes," he says. "I like the freedom being up in the air-- the beauty.

"I suppose some of it is the element of excitement-- the air is not as forgiving as a car. I love landing. It requires total concentration."

As he shows visitors around his business, he stops to point out the things he has made.

"I love to build," he says. "That's one of my hobbies."

Gardening is also a source of pleasure.

"I love to get out and dig in the dirt!"

Taking pleasure in the little things in life is a hallmark.

"The other day I drove the car for the first time. And there was the time I could walk outside for the first time since the accident. When I was able to get upstairs to our bedroom for the first time . . .

"We take it all for granted. Then suddenly, we realize how much we take the fun things for granted."

Now, Hall is planning for the future-- for his grandchildren and for others' children. He and his wife have started an educational trust they hope will grow and flourish so it can become an ongoing source of educational funds.

"I take all the money I get from funerals, weddings, and other things, and I put them in the educational trust or a pastor's emergency fund," he said. "They're not very big now, but some day . . .

"I don't worship money. I'm not very good with money."

It amuses Hall that for someone who isn't very good with money, he has a wonderful home. Hall's home is on Scituate's Second Cliff. It sits smack dab on the beach.

He says a realtor asked him to make a bid on the house. He refused, believing it was far beyond his means. The realtor pressed, so he made a bid that was refused.

The home was taken off the market. When it came up for sale again, the realtor pushed the Halls to put in another bid. The realtor wouldn't take no for an answer.

"We submitted a lower bid the second time," said Hall. He thought it was foolish. No one was more surprised when the bid was accepted.

"It's a lovely house right on the water," he says. "Since I bought it, it's gone up in value eight times. I could never buy it today.

"We raised all our children there. And the value of the house has allowed us to borrow money to start our business.

"That house has made it possible for us to do things we never could have done otherwise. We'll never sell it."

Hall never uses the word "miracle", but things keep happening in his life.

Years ago, he was put in charge of erecting a large cross on Lighthouse Point for the Easter sunrise service. For some reason, Hall couldn't find the lumber to build the cross anywhere. He feared that the service would go on without a cross.

"Then, two pieces of wood floated up on the beach in front of my house," he said.

The wood was the perfect size for the cross he was supposed to build. He nailed them together with large nails. The same two pieces of wood have been nailed together each Easter since then.

"It happened several years before I went into the ministry," Hall said. He went on to characterize it as "one of those things that happens serendipitously"-- like his life, which he says has "worked out just the best possible kind of life for me.

Of those serendipitous occurrences, Hall says, "I'm sure they happen in everybody's life. I'm just not sure they're always aware of them."

For the future, Hall wants to do some more international travel, continue promoting quality and ethics in business, keep going with his trusts and foundations, and spend time with his grandchildren.

"I have six grandkids and a seventh on the way," he says like a proud grandpa.

If he has a role model in life, it would be the stepfather that he thinks of as his "real" father, because he was the man that was there for Hall every step of the way.

His stepfather was a hardworking man with one goal in life: to have a million dollars and to give it all away.

"He did both," Hall says quietly. The million provided educational grants for hundreds of children.

In 1979, which Hall identifies as two years before he entered the ministry, his stepfather died. Hall was holding his hand at the moment that his stepfather died. It is a moment both precious and awesome for Hall.

Hall sums up the meaning of life and love by saying, "People are meant to care for each other." Perhaps that is the human measure of excellence.

Pitcher talks about ups and downs of career

By Jane Lane
Mariner staff

Cohasset's Little Leaguers and their parents listened last week to an inspirational story by a man who is "a survivor."

To many of these boys, Dennis Lamp is a professional athlete - a man who makes a lot of money and has his face and career immortalized upon a baseball card.

But the story told by the Red Sox relief pitcher paints a much different story. It is a tale filled with hard work, courage, disappointment, failure, and success. It is a story about a man who is determined to survive in order to fulfill a dream.

At an early age, Lamp was taught to take a positive approach to the game of baseball. It is something he also applies to his life.

"A coach once told me to persevere and to never give up the game. I've gone through a lot of ups and downs. but I've never given up," he told about 100 people who crowded into Rotary hall to hear the Chamber of Commerce guest speaker.

In 1977, during his year in Triple A minor league baseball, Lamp injured his arm for the first time. "It was the most depressing time of my life," he said, remembering how he sat out two months of that season.

But when he came back, Lamp performed well enough to make it to the pro's. And for the first time, he walked onto the hallowed grounds of Wrigley Field as a member of that team. "I was this high off the ground," he said, raising his hand to his shoulder.

While he was warming up for his first game, someone shouted to him from the bleachers. "What's your name?" the man continually inquired. Lamp finally turned to the fan and told him to look up his uniform number in the program.

"I did and you're not in it," the man yelled back.

"That was my first meeting with the bleacher bums," Lamp remembered.

Despite a losing record that season, Lamp was convinced he was pitching well. The problem was, his team wasn't scoring any runs.

He remembers 1979 as his greatest year, when his record climbed to 11-10. There were times to forget, however. Such as his wife's birthday when he said he would pitch a shutout. He came home after the game after allowing hits from the first 17 batters he faced, with a final losing score of 23-22. In August of that year, he was the pitcher who gave Lou Brock his 3,000 career hit. There was so much commotion during that milestone event, no one noticed that the base hit had struck Lamp and injured his hand.

He was traded after experiencing a terrible year in 1980. But the trade to the White Sox changed his whole career, Lamp admitted. His catcher was perennial All Star Carlton Fisk and in that year he almost got his first career no-hitter.

Following that year, he was a free agent and he signed with the Toronto Blue Jays - an experience he can only describe in negative terms. But the following year, adhering to advice taught to him by a coach in Chicago, he "blocked out all the negatives" and pitched to an 11-0 record. The team reached the league playoffs and he pitched 12 innings.

In 1986, Lamp was released. He wondered how they could have done this to him, after experiencing such a successful year for the team. But baseball is, afterall, a business, he said, and management is free to make any decision it chooses.

He was picked up by Cleveland where he pitched nine innings of baseball during spring training and was released.

"But I knew what I had to do," he told the youngsters. "Even though I was 35 years old, I went to the rookie league." There, he worked alongside kids who had never stepped onto a major league field. They were 18 and 19 years old.

He was picked up by the Oakland Athletics. Later that year, Lamp contacted Red Sox general manager Lou Gorman. Gorman was straight with the pitcher. Lamp would have to work hard and make the team like any other rookie. He would need a great spring training season.

The rest, as they say, is history. Lamp has been a relief pticher for the Red Sox for the past two seasons, and figures to be an important part of the bullpen in 1990.

"Big league life is tough," he told the aspiring ballplayers. "But I've enjoyed every minute of it."

He offered some advice. "Never give up. Success is failure turned inside out.

"But the most important thing is your education," he noted. Lamp is currently attending Emerson College and intends to pursue a career in broadcasting after his pitching days are over. If he had to do it all over, he would graduate from college before signing a professional baseball contract.

"And you have to stay away from drugs. I was never exposed to it, but you have to say no. Drugs won't make you jump higher and throw a ball better. You have to make that decision to say no," he warned.

Lamp, who moved to Cohasset when he tried out for the Boston team, loves living in this small community where "people treat me like a regular person. Even if I had a bad game, they say nice things to me," he said with a laugh.

Chamber of Commerce president Donald Staszko concluded the talk by noting that, "life is filled with ups and downs. Dennis is an example of someone who's made it through it all."

Art center volunteers honored

Volunteers at the South Shore Art Center were recently recognized for their contribution of time and expertise in helping the Center serve its public.

While over 150 volunteers help run special events and the June Festival on Cohasset Common, Chris Rifkin, President of the Board of Directors and Lanci Valentine, Executive Director, singled out individuals who have given extraordinary effort.

Susan Nalband of Scituate, and Marion Bush of Hingham, installed all the 1989 exhibitions with a volunteer crew; Mary Reardon and Helen Gallop of Cohasset, Maxine Schiffman of Hingham, and Patricia Delano of Scituate, consistently assisted with mailings and notifying the membership of events.

Anne Law of Cohasset, and Charlene Sullivan of Norwell welcomed visitors to the gallery on a weekly basis and Mary Alice Flynn of Scituate, has run the Gift Gallery, increasing artist participation and focusing attention on the unique gift opportunities at the Art Center.

Estey Manning of Cohasset, was recognized for co-chairing two special events, the Masked Ball and Artful Apparel Fashion Show.

Rifkin presented Board Member Janet Amiri with a Certificate of Appreciation for her many years of service and wished her well on her move to the West Coast.

Jill O'Donnell of Cohasset, Board of Directors, was recognized for overseeing and encouraging the volunteers. New volunteers are always welcome and can help the Art Center in a variety of ways. Artistic knowledge is not a prerequisite. Call 383-9548 for information.

Commission strikes deal for land

By Jane Lane
Mariner staff

After years of hope and frustration, the water commissioners have finally struck a deal they hope the town will support.

After meeting two weeks ago with developer Edward Britt, the water commissioners have agreed to purchase 37 acres of land surrounding Lily Pond for $1.9 million. That agreement is contingent upon town meeting's approval in April.

The land was slated to be developed into 11 single-family house lots. After a long court battle against the town, Britt and his former partner, Edward Rosenberg, won the right to build the homes on land known as Lily Pond Estates.

The commissioners are eager to purchase the land which will be reserved for open space. And, as commissioner William Montuori noted, the price tag is considerably less than the $2 million value set by an appraiser for the town.

Money for the land purchase, which had been in and out of negotiation for several years, will not affect the tax rate, according to commission chairman Ron Goodwin. Rather, the purchase will be financed through a series of grants combined with water department revenue.

"We expect to get about one-third of the money from grants, and about two-thirds from water revenue," Goodwin said, although whatever grants they obtain will not prevent them from applying for more until the loan is complete.

Goodwin acknowledged that residents endured "a pretty good (water) rate increase a couple of years ago." That rate hike helped to turn a profit for the department, and they were able to begin payment toward a debt owed to the town.

Water rates will increase along with inflation, he explained, and residents should not expect any steep change because of the land purchase.

"By town meeting we will be able to tell people exactly what the water rates will have to be to pay off the bond," he said, noting that the land purchase will not affect the tax base nor the tax rate.

If approved by town meeting, the purchase of Lily Pond Estates will mark the end to a long saga. Britt and Rosenberg presented their plans to the planning board several years ago. Their denial brought about a long court battle, which the developers utlimately won.

In the meantime, the town established a watershed moratorium, prohibiting any development within that protected district. Unfortunately, Goodwin recalled, Lily Pond Estates was grandfathered, and that development would not be regulated by the new moratorium.

While the developers wrangled with the planning board in court, the water commissioners held off on any attempt to purchase the land for open space. They were advised by legal counsel that until a decision is made regarding the development, a true market value of the property could not be determined.

About a year ago, after Britt was given permission to develop the land, the water commissioners renewed their interest in purchasing the property. They had the land appraised at $2 million. Britt's appraiser came to the bargaining table with a $3 million price tag.

Although the commissioners were hoping to have a negotiated settlement by last spring, it didn't happen. In the meantime, Britt has become the sole owner of the property, and the commission figured it would be easier to discuss the matter with one person.

At a meeting between Britt and the commission members last week, a compromise figure of $1.9 million was agreed upon.

❑ Molly Hochkeppel of Cohasset will star as Grace in Quincy Center Dinner Theatre's production of "Cheaters" to be performed January 27, February 3, 4, 10, 11 at Masonic Temple, 1170 Hancock St., Quincy, Ma.

Molly is no stranger to audiences on the South Shore. She has performed in several shows for Curtain Call Theatre of Braintree where she is a member. Her dinner theatre appearances, both at Christo's in Brockton and at Quincy Center include "Not Now Darling," "No Sex Please, We're British," "Female Odd Couple." When she is not on the stage, look for her back stage. Molly designs most of the sets for Quincy Center Dinner Theatre as well as for many local community theatre groups. She also paints, builds, or does whatever has to be done to put a professional looking set together!

Molly and her husband Joe and their four sons have lived here for 10 years and she is also the Cohasset town reporter for the Patriot Ledger.

Besides being the resident Production Manager, Molly is also President of Darling Productions, producers of the Quincy Center Dinner Theatre.

For further information and reservations on "Cheaters" call 617-843-5862.

☐ Cohasset Community Center's Annual Frosty Frolic Dance is scheduled for Saturday, Jan. 20 from 8 p.m. to 1 a.m. The cash bar will be open from 9 p.m. to 1 a.m. A deejay will be on hand providing a wide selection of music for dancing and listening pleasure. Dress festively and prepare to enjoy an evening of fun and friends at this highly anticipated event. Donations are $15 per person to benefit the Cohasset Community Center Building Fund. Tickets are available at the Cohasset Community Center or from Karen Hettstrom at the Osgood School. For further information call 383-0088.

Joe Doniger of Randolph and Molly Hochkeppel of Cohasset are stars in the upcoming Quincy Center Dinner Theatre's production of "Cheaters." For ticket information, see Sally Ann Chatterton's column.

☐ I had a nice chat with Bob Pape the other day, he sounds great! He wanted to be sure to thank all of you for his cards, plants, letters, food, etc. He said he is overwhelmed with the goodness and kindness of so many! The hospital must be rather glad that he is home now. He received over 300 cards while there. That's a lot of mail to process!! Anyway a giant thank you from Bob to all of you from 4 years old to 88 years old that remembered him!

☐ Richard and Sallyann (Kakas) Quebec are a mighty happy couple these days and the reason is their brand new son, Richard Kakas Quebec. Richard was born in Emerson Hospital on Jan. 5 and weighed 7 lbs. 11 ozs. His two grandmothers are thrilled too, Mrs. E. Gordon Kakas of Lexington, MA, and Mrs. Arthur F. Quebec of Newton, MA. Congratulations go to all of you, enjoy Richard!

☐ Speaking of grandparents, Jim and Lorraine Hoy are thrilled to have their daughter Cindy and her family in town for a couple of years. They get to spend time with their two wonderful granddaughters (and their parents too, of course, though they probably take a back seat to the girls).

☐We hear that Herm Fichtner is home from the hospital and doing well! That sure is good news, keep it up Herm! We are all rooting for you. You are a wonderful and special man.

☐ Congratulations to Nancy and Wayne Aikens on the birth of their baby boy, Joshua Michael born at St. Margaret's Hospital on November 30.

☐ Hope everyone saw the wonderful article about Paul Farren in last Thursday's Boston Globe. It was a great one. He has been playing football for the Cleveland Browns since 1983 and has done an admirable job. He is now six-foot-six-inches and weighs in at 270 lbs.! Paul was a CHS graduate, so that is another reason to be proud. It is just a shame that the Browns lost the playoff game on Sunday, otherwise we could all root for him in the Super Bowl. We'll bet that there were tons out there rooting for you last Sunday, Paul, you were great!

☐ All of this cold weather has reminded me of one thing, the new fireplace shop in Hingham. It is run by Cohasset's own Ludlow family, and it is a nifty store. Be sure to go and visit the next time that you are in Hingham. They have everything that you might want, including handcrafted items that you will love.

☐ Sure is a good thing that Joe Laugelle was allowed to retain his disposal permit. There would have been lots of people up in arms had he been denied! Joe can hardly be blamed for someone else's carelessness, especially when the whole sorting process is really new to his customers. Let it be a lesson to all of us though, remember to put your trash in appropriate bags!

☐ We hear that Jack Creamer is home and doing just great, keep up the good work Jack, everyone misses you.

☐ That's the news from here. Please call with your latest news flash so we can all share it!

Goedecke resigns

Jane Goedecke, chairman of the Cohasset Advisory Board for the past two and a half years, resigned this week.

Citing a need to help Cohasset resolve its fiscal problems, Goedecke is seeking election to the board of selectmen.

"I feel that the real leadership in Cohasset should come from the selectmen. I felt a particular frustration during my tenure on the advisory committee by the primarily reactive role the group must play in our town government. I would like to help formulate and guide Cohasset's future," she said.

Reacting to Goedecke's resignation, advisory committee member Chris Bassett said, "Jane will be remembered especially for her role in the 1989 Town Meeting. Her forthright, clear explanations and deep understanding of the way Cohasset's town departments, committees and boards work were a tremendous help throughout the long sesssions. She has a clear view of what can and cannot be done under Proposition 2 1/2 and she has a unique ability to translate and communicate the issues, thus helping others understand as well," Chris continued. Goedecke has served on the advisory committee since July, 1985. She has been chairman of the group since July, 1987.

Hussey endorsed by CLT

State Senate Candidate Donald Hussey received the endorsement of Citizen's for Limited Taxation 2 1/2 Political Action Committee.

This Citizen's Group, headed by Barbara Anderson, recently completed a signature drive for an initiative petition aimed at rolling back taxes. The successful petition drive will be on the ballot in 1990.

Hussey said, "we should look closely at all departments, agencies, and authorities in state government where responsible cuts can be made as our goal toward a balanced budget."

Last week Hussey was endorsed by Mass.Taxpayers Committee which provides information with respect to the fiscal affairs of Massachusetts government.

Hussey is a candidate for the State Senate seat from the Norfolk and Plymouth District which is currently held by William Golden.

Flynn supports tuition law

Rep. William J. Flynn, Jr., candidate for State Senator for the Norfolk and Plymouth district, noted that the Legislature recently passed CH 655 into law, a first-in-the-nation program designed to help Massachusetts families save for college tuition.

Rep. Flynn continued, "The major features of the program is that tax-exempt bonds starting at $50 may be purchased for future redemption at participating Massachusetts institutions. The percentage of tuition the bonds buy will remain fixed, thus protecting the purchaser from inflation."

Hedlund questions Ambler

Robert Hedlund of Weymouth, a candidate for the Republican nomination for state senate recently questioned Rep. Robert Ambler of Weymouth who is seeking the Democratic nomination for state senate about his recent change of positions on abortion and gun owners rights.

Hedlund who serves on the government affairs committee of the South Shore Chamber of Commerce questioned Ambler at a committee meeting at which Ambler spoke.

Hedlund commended Ambler on his opposition to the restoration of the Greenbush Rail line.

The two senate candidates, whose families have been friends for decades, also wished each other well in their respective primary contests.

Ambler wants tax review

State Rep. Robert B. Ambler, D-Weymouth, has endorsed a resolution before the House of Representatives which calls for a detailed analysis of revenues and expenditures to be made available prior to the consideration of any new tax package.

The resolution also requests that the Secretary of Administration and Finance furnish a report detailing the progress of all steps taken to downsize state government since July 1, 1988,.

Commission bargains for open space

"This is great news," Goodwin acknowledged. "It's what we wanted all along."

Although no engineer ever stated that development of the property abutting Lily Pond would certainly pollute the town reservoir, Goodwin said they agreed there was a potential for problems.

"It was going to be right on the banks of Lily Pond and the treatment plant. At one time, it was part of the same parcel. There would always be the possibility of some problems with septic systems," he stated.

Commission member Montuori recalled the town also tried to establish a land bank in which monies from the sale of private residences could be used to purchase open space property. The purchased land would be off-limits to future development.

Although the concept won approval by town meeting three years ago, the legislature never approved the measure.

"The enabling legislation was never approved and the whole thing was dropped," he said.

Supt. Joe Hamilton said protecting the town's water supply is a primary concern of the commission and the water department.

"We were really concerned about developing homes within the watershed. Besides, the Britt land is also wetlands - you can see streams of water gathering along the property. So we suspected we'd eventually have problems if the land was ever developed," Hamilton said.

The money will not come from the town hall, but from the water department's till, he noted. "And we'll try and keep the water rate increases down to a minimum. It's not fair to let the rates go out of sight. We know that. So, with a little planning and adjustments for inflation, I think this plan can work," he said.

"I think the purchase of this land will be in the best interest of the entire town. It will be nice to have this land remain undeveloped. People love to take walks along the paths there. It'll be a good feeling to know that land will belong to us forever."

It starts at home

Temple Sha'aray Shalom hosted an interesting, and as it turned out, an evocative discussion on an issue that refuses to be swept under the rug.

Anti-Semitism may not be an attractive topic, but it is real and it continues in our society and in our schools.

The Hingham congregation invited area officials, clergy members and school representatives to the forum held last weekend which focused on incidents of local anti-Semitism and how we can fight against it.

It was interesting to note that of all the school officials invited to the forum, only Hingham Supt. Lewis Ernst responded, along with the curriculum director for the Marshfield schools. Cohasset Supt. Stephen Hart contacted Rabbi Stephen Karol and informed him he would be unable to attend. No other school officials responded to the invitation.

The focus of last Friday's discussion centered on some anti-Semitic incidents which have occurred at Hingham High School. The student who spoke admitted that school officials were probably not aware of the occurrences because the victim chose to keep silent. He also noted that Hingham is not alone. There are many other students in many other communities who have been taunted and ridiculed because of their religious beliefs.

This should not come as a shock to us. Although a united nation, we have traditionally separated ourselves into economic and religious classes.

One person at last week's forum, a professional educator from Marshfield, admitted he had never been inside a synagogue. Perhaps extending an invitation to various religious services would be a step in creating more harmony, he suggested. Understanding is the key to acceptance.

Many of us wonder how any student could be so cruel as to taunt another for his religious beliefs. But this student said it has happened throughout the past year to his friend. One would think that by his teenaged years, an intelligent person would realize that belittling another human being is a mindless act of a fool. Then again, their are parents and grandparents who have handed down these senseless traditions by their thoughts, their words and their deeds.

Anti-Semitism is not going away, according to studies conducted by the Anti-Defamation League of B'nai B'rith. It is happening in our homes, in our communities and along the corridors of our schools.

As parents, it is our responsibility to take an individual stand against this outrage. Beginning in the home, we must make our children aware that we are all equal, particularly in the eyes of God. No one is better, no one is worse because of their religious beliefs. The faith we follow is an individual choice to be made without fear of harrassment or ridicule.

It is only after we begin the lessons at home that we can ask the schools to assist. They can reinforce our words of advice through classroom discussions, guest speakers, and textbooks.

But the primary teacher here is the parent. If understanding is the key to unlock anger and hatred, then the door must be opened at home.

Recycling news...

(This week's article was written by Jennifer Longley of the recycling committee. Ed.)

RECYCLING TIP FOR THE WEEK

Cohasset residents without an RTF sticker can now bring materials to be recycled to the RTF. To dispose of trash, one still needs a sticker. The purpose of this new policy is to allow those residents who have their trash collected by a private hauler to recycle.

RECYCLING WISH LIST

Cohasset's fledgling mandatory recycling program has, thus far, been a great success. The RTF (Recycling Transfer Facility, formerly the landfill) is now busy accepting paper, corrugated cardboard, glass, returnables, aluminum, appliances, metal, yard waste, and tires to be recycled. Pick up this list of items at the RTF to keep on hand for reference. Hopefully this list will be expanding in the near future. The Cohasset Recycling Committee has a short "wish list" for the RTF that would enable us to recycle even more materials.

The Committee will be putting an article on the next town warrant for a compacter to compact and bale cardboard and HDPE plastics (high density polyethylene). HDPE plastics include most milk bottles, some laundry detergent bottles, margarine tubs, bleach, and water jugs to name a few. The Committee hopes the town will support this purchase at the April 7th town meeting.

The second "wish list" item (which will soon be a reality) is a used oil "igloo," a self-contained receptacle for spent motor oil that the RTF will be acquiring in the near future. The estimated expense of about $2,000 has already been approved by the town. People who change the oil in their cars, boats, and lawnmowers will be able to drop the old oil off at the RTF to be disposed of properly. Although state law requires that all retailers of motor oil take back that oil after it has been used by the customer, some people may find a drop-off spot at the RTF more convenient. If thrown away in the trash or poured down the drain, motor oil, which is highly toxic, can contaminate groundwater, the ecosystem, and the marine environment, and it can damage septic systems and wastewater treatment plants.

Many individuals have requested that Cohasset organize another household hazardous waste collection day. The recycling committee is planning one for this fall. Eventually, we hope to see two such days per year. Just like the motor oil, if unused toxic household products are thrown away or poured down the drain, they can present a great threat to the public health and the environment, close drinking water wells, and damage treatment systems.

Sharon Becker is organizing an Earth Day committee to coordinate local activities to celebrate and participate in the upcoming international Earth Day to be held in the spring. Contact Sharon (383-1971) if you are interested in joining.

TROUBLESHOOTING AT THE RTF

Remember to completely clean your Christmas trees of all ornaments, tinsel, nails, wire and other man-made materials before bringing them to the RTF. The chipper can not properly function if there is anything on the trees. Feel free to take away some of the chipped tree chips. It makes a natural filling for fragrant sachets!

Committee wants ideas

To the Editor:

Having spent the last four months investigating the issue of drug and alcohol use, the Committee formed by the Selectmen is beginning to prepare its final report. Using the input of students, law enforcement personnel, school administrators, doctors, and experts in the field of substance abuse, the Committee intends to make specific recommendations to the Selectmen. Since any effort to control substance abuse will be community based, the Committee would appreciate the community's help in preparing its recommendations. If you have any concerns, ideas or suggestions that would aid the Committee, please forward them to the Drug and Alcohol Committee, Cohasset Town Hall, 41 Highland Ave., Cohasset 02025. We look forward to hearing from any interested citizens.

Priscilla Tebbetts
Secretary, Drug and Alcohol Committee

Naturalist to talk

The Community Garden Club of Cohasset will hold its monthly meeting Jan. 23, at Walton Rodgers Hall in St. Stephen's Church.

Coffee will be served at 9 a.m. and the meeting is set to begin at 9:30 a.m. The program will focus on "A Vanishing Heritage."

New England naturalist and land management consultant Mario DiGregorio will present a visual journey to vanishing habitats throughout New England. DiGregorio has co-authored a book titled A Vanishing Heritage, Wildflowers of Cape Cod, which will be available if anyone is interested. The public is invited.

Youth tells of anti-Semitic harassment in school

By Alison Cohen
Mariner staff

The Charles Stuart murder case has made prejudice in Boston a nationwide topic. People attending a forum on bigotry learned that they didn't have to go any farther than their own backyard to find the ugly reality of prejudice.

Josh Friedman, a sophomore at Hingham High School, told the crowd that one of his close friends has been verbally and physically abused because he is Jewish. Friedman's comments came during a question and answer period at a forum entitled "Working Together Against Bigotry" sponsored by Temple Sha'Aray Shalom in Hingham.

The temple invited clergy and school officials from the South Shore area to attend. Eve Dennis of the Anti-Defamation League of B'nai B'rith was invited to speak about prejudice and the World of Difference curriculum the ADL has developed to help schools address the problem.

"Don't get the idea that Hingham is breeding Nazis or anything like that, but there is an element," Friedman said.

The problem is not widespread, according to Friedman. He estimated that approximately 10 to 15 students in his grade were harassing Jewish students. He also said Jewish students at South Junior High School were experiencing the same problems.

The incidents in the Hingham school system have been going on for a long time, at least since Friedman was in junior high.

"The problem will die down, but then flares up again," said Friedman. Friedman hasn't been attacked directly.

"In my case, they know they can't get to me with it," he said.

The most recent incident occurred last week when his friend had pennies thrown at him and was told, "Why don't you pick them up, Jew!"

In the worst instance, the bully that Friedman referred to only as "Mr. X" rode the friend's bus route home and beat up on him.

Friedman said his friend hadn't told authorities about the problem.

"Kids don't tell on kids," he said.

According to Rabbi Stephen Karol, the silence of victims is an age-old response to prejudice. He said it comes from the fear of a backlash.

"There is a Yiddish term, 'sha shtil', meaning 'be quiet'," said Karol. "But that's not your position. Doesn't the ADL tell you not to feel guilty because this person singled you out? Because if you do that, it affirms what they think of you."

Dennis agreed with Karol.

"How do you deal with kids who pose a physical threat?" Friedman asked Dennis.

"Walk away, for safety's sake," advised Dennis. "You can't reason with them."

Once safe, however, a person confronted by anti-Semitic-- or any other sort of racial or ethnic prejudice-- should contact the ADL, school authorities, and the local police.

"You must speak out," Dennis said. "You can't be afraid, because it won't go away. You must confront it."

Dennis told the group that anti-Semitic incidents and hate crimes were on the rise. Between 1978 and 1982, Massachusetts was one of the top four states for vandalism and attacks against Jews. The ADL will issue an updated report Jan. 18. Dennis said she couldn't reveal Massachusetts' current rank, but when pressed confided that it was in the top five.

Another member of the audience was concerned about the low turnout of school officials.

"What I don't see here tonight is some of the representation from schools in the surrounding towns," said the Cohasset resident. "What should we as a community do to bring 'A World of Difference' to our schools? How do we reach other schools with no representation here?"

Superintendent Lewis Ernst of Hingham and Daniel Kehoe, director of curriculum for Marshfield, were the only school officials in attendance. Rabbi Karol indicated that Cohasset's superintendent of schools, Stephen Hart, called to let him know he was unable to attend.

According to Rabbi Karol, Cohasset has teachers who have been trained under the World of Difference program. Those teachers are training their colleagues.

Marshfield's Dan Kehoe suggested that interfaith sharing might be a good place to begin to bridge differences.

"This is the first time in my life I have ever been in a synagogue," he said. "I never would have thought it was o.k. to visit."

"I feel very welcome tonight," he continued. "Maybe that's a place to start. There's a lot we don't know about each other."

Local Boy Scouts to join Old Mill Kamporee

Old Mills District Activities Committee will hold a Klondike Kamporee on Jan. 20-21 at Camp Sayre in the Blue Hills. Scouts and Webelos will have the opportunity to camp in heated cabins, but the real adventurous scouts plan to camp in tents and Adirondak lean-tos in order to exercise their winter camping skills. The units who utilize tents and lean-tos will earn their "Flake-Out" award.

Friday evening's activities are for Webelos Scouts only. Saturday morning the Boy Scouts will arrive and both Webelos and Scouts will participate in the Klondike Derby. After the events of the day, the Webelos will leave camp and Saturday evenings events are for the older scouts. Departure will be Sunday morning.

During a Klondike Derby, which is part of the Klondike Kamporee, patrols of Webelos and Boy Scouts must present a specially designed sled that is packed with equipment that may be needed on the trail. All of the equipment must be secured with a diamond hitch.

Among the required equipment is: one tarp to wrap gear in; two blankets, three poles about six feet in length; plenty of rope; lashing twine; one or more bow saws; one neckerchief per scout (they must be wearing this); two or three jackknives; a compass; a first aid kit; a one quart container for boiling water; cleaning materials for cooking gear; two one gallon jugs of water; fire making materials; boy scout handbook and a boy scout field book.

On the Klondike trail the Scouts will earn "gold" nuggets based on how well they do at each station. The stations include a handicapped trail, where the Scouts are challenged to see how they would do if snowblinded; stalking; orienteering; knot tying and lashing; signaling; shelter building; fire starting; and first aid.

Turtle Island residents worry about ducks

"There's one female who absolutely hates three of these white male ducks. Everytime they come near her she bites them. It's funny to watch them," he said.

McClay believes that someone dropped off three white ducks simply because they saw the flock in his yard. "I think they just dumped them here and figured I'd watch over them It's horrible that someone would do that," he stated.

About twenty ducks arrived at the swamp behind McClay's home shortly before Christmas. Soon afterward dozens more appeared. Each day since they arrived hungry and cold, McClay and his wife have taken turns feeding them scraps from their table.

They are friendly, he said, and will waddle right up to them and beg for the samples. "They're just the cutest things," he said, admitting that they have selected names for several of their web-footed neighbors.

The McClays, residents of the Turtle Island section of Beechwood since 1962, are accustomed to seeing the winter flight of the mallards interrupted for a brief stop at their home. But this year, Mc'Clay believes the early cold winter stopped them in their tracks.

"These guys are caught. And now they're stuck here. They have to be fed," he said.

Rick Horton, director of the New england Wildlife Center in Hingham, isn't sure these fowl are wild, or whether they're a hybrid mallards. In that case, he explained, the ducks will not usually migrate in the winter and they'll be very content to stay where they are - as long as McClay continues to feed them.

"Ducks are opportunists," he stated. "They'll stay as long as someone is providing them with food."

Like some forms of Canadian geese, many variations of the mallard have become dependent on humans for food and survival, he explained.

One remedy for McClay's situation, Horton said, would be to try to collect the ducks and take them to a coastal area. If they fly away, then they are likely a true wildlife species, he said. If they return, particularly to the location where they have been continually fed, then they are probably the part-domesticated breed.

"My only other suggestion would be to slowly decrease their food and see if they will seek another place," Horton said. "Ducks will take advantage of us - particularly if we are feeding them. But it's a tricky situation because they've become adjusted to this location where they are regularly fed. But basically, ducks will go wherever they can survive."

Town Counsel Richard Henderson said the town had previously allowed Sawayer to pay in monthly installments of $1000, but the trustee did not adhere to the schedule.

Sawayer ceased making any payments once litigation began in 1983.

Ripley said that although the town can begin foreclosure proceedings within the year that a property owner falls into arrears, Cohasset has not been so quick. She indicated that Cohasset may change given current economic conditions.

When asked about the high amounts owed in both cases, Henderson remarked that 16 percent interest is charged on unpaid taxes "so it doesn't take long to get out of control."

Winter art course registrations

The South Shore Art Center, 119 Ripley Road in Cohasset is holding registrations for winter courses and workshops for adults and young artists.

Courses begin the week of Jan. 22 and early registration is encouraged.

There are new adult courses in the areas of calligraphy, watercolor, marble carving, terra cotta clay, and even clay jewelry. New workshops, one, two or three days, are offered in the areas of watercolor, drawing and painting, photography, "jewel finishes," and basket making.

For the young artist, there are several new courses: "Clay for Fours and Fives;" "Printmaking Magic;" "Lights, Camera, Action!"; "Creative Clay" (grades 4 to 6); and "Creating With Clay and Fabric."

One-day workshops for grades 1 to 3 will be offered on one Saturday each month: Jan. 27 from 1 to 3 p.m., "Snowflake Mobiles;" Feb. 10 from 1 to 3 p.m. "Creative Valentines;" and March 24 from 1 to 3 p.m., "Let's Celebrate Spring!" There are even workshops during February vacation.

For more information, to register or to request a course brochure, call the South Shore Art Center weekdays from 10 a.m. to 4p.m. at 617-383-9548.

Early release day Jan. 18

There will be an early release day in the Cohasset Public Schools, Thursday, Jan. 18.

There will be no afternoon kindergarten sessions and other students will be dismissed according to the following schedule:

School	Buses Depart
Junior/Senior High School	12 p.m.
Deer Hill School	12:40 p.m.
Joseph Osgood School	12:50 p.m.

Proposed harbor rules

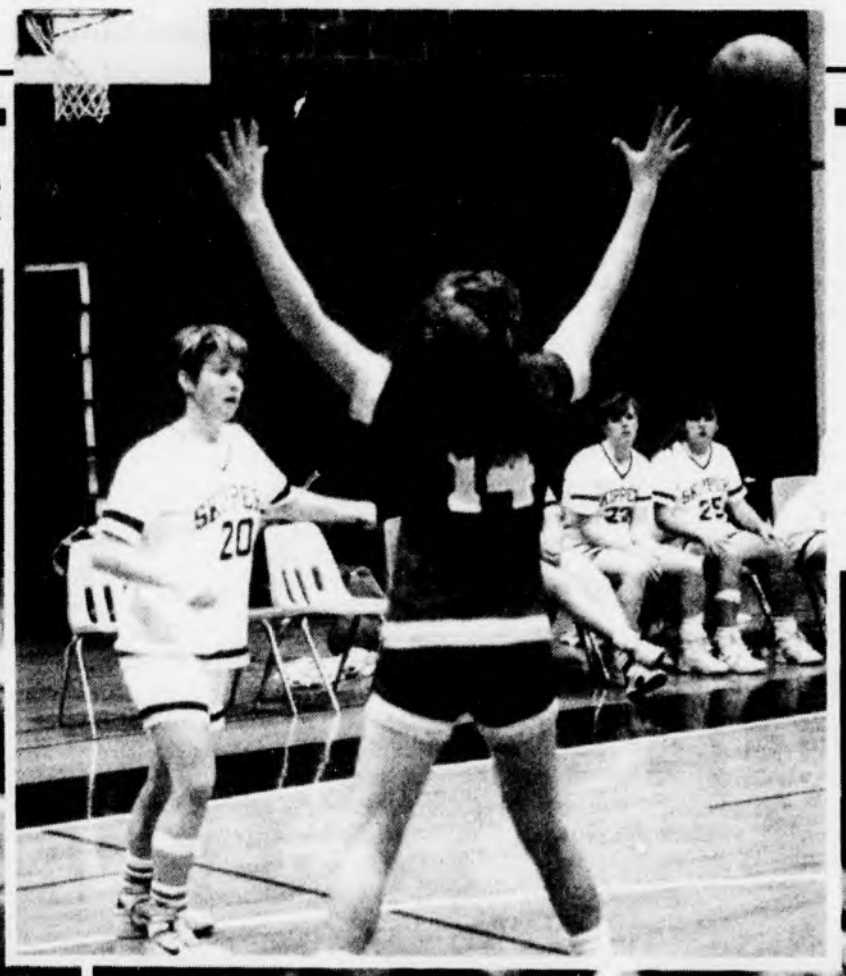
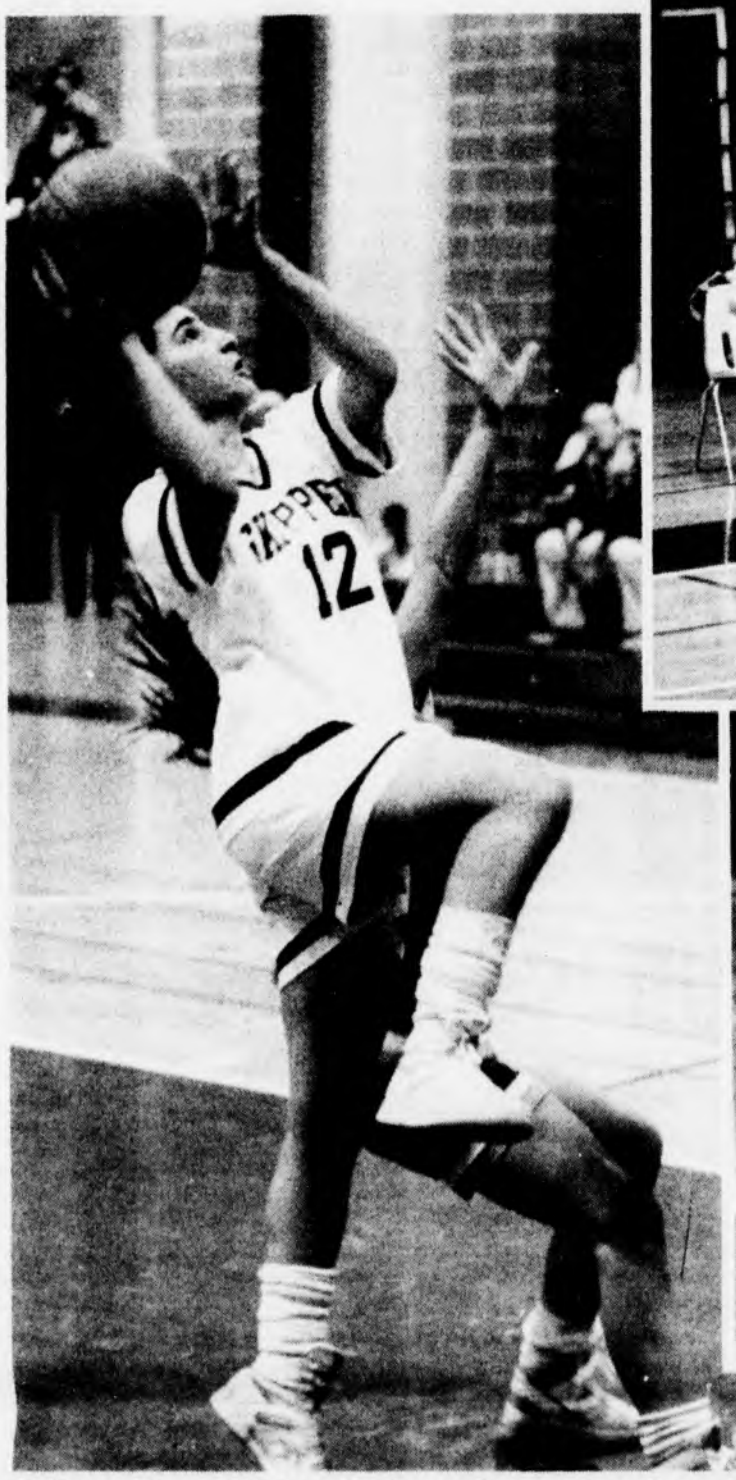
will limit those mooring permits to fishermen and recreational boaters.

Another proposed change in the bylaw states that if a mooring holder dies, that permit will be immediately assigned to his or her spouse. No other relative will be eligible for the mooring, according to town counsel.



Pfaffmann emphasized that the harbor committee has not voted on the final proposed bylaw changes. The committee will discuss those proposals at future meetings, he said.

And although selectmen agreed to save space on the town meeting warrant for the bylaw change, they did not vote whether to support the proposal.



Cohasset hoop action

A quick pass by Allison Ludlow, as Cohasset tries to get past a tough Norwell team.

Cohasset's Barb Lagrotteria rushes past a Norwell defender for a basket in last week's losing effort against the Clippers of Norwell.

Cohasset's wrestling team scored its first team victory of the 1990 season last week, with a big win over Norwell.

Coach Torin Sweeney was ecstatic with his team's efforts, and confident that it will help turn the tide for this young team.

Morale is high on the squad, despite their 1-6-1 record. Sweeney credits their great spirit with the "tremendous" guidance and spirit of the team's tri-captains, Eric Theriault, Pat Conroy and Greg Nourie.

"I think the thing I'm happiest about, looking back on last week, is the morale of this team," Coach Sweeney said. "We don't have kids quitting because we don't win, we don't have kids complaining. They're all working hard even though we haven't had the best year.

"The spirit on this team has been a pleasant surprise for me," he added. "I give all the credit for that to the tri-captains."

Cohasset had a number of players win their matches by pins, including: David Cullinane, 119lbs.; Jason Thayer, 135 lbs.; Oliver Nivaud, 152 lbs.; Eric Theriault, 171 lbs.; and Pat Conroy, 189 lbs.

Individual winners included Nathan Fiore, 125 lbs., who won his match with a 18-0 score.

Junior Bill Baird, 130 lbs., had the best match of the competition, according to Sweeney. The last time they met, Baird lost to Tim O'Halloran of Norwell when they were fighting for fifth and sixth placement. Last Wednesday, Baird evened the score when he won decisively over the Norwell athlete.

Josh Muir wrestled to his second consecutive tie in last week's match.

"For the most part," Sweeney said, "we played very well. It was a great match."

This week will see Cohasset against Scituate, a team that appears to have the advantage, at least on paper.

"I think it's going to be a good match. Like us, Scituate is in the process of rebuilding," he said.

Cohasset lost nine valuable seniors last year - all accomplished wrestlers, Sweeney said. The 26 kids who comprise the 1990 squad - a record high in the six years Sweeney has coached - knew from the start it would be an uphill climb.

"But I'm very impressed with the progress they're making," the coach said. "These kids are really coming along."

Last year's record of 10-5-1 will be impossible to match in 1990. In that year, eight Cohasset wrestlers made it to the state tournament.

Sweeney knew from the start of this season they had little chance of matching last year's impressive record. But that has not deterred the kids who came to wrestle in 1990.

"I knew I had to be patient with these kids and work with them. But I'm convinced that we're working our way to the top. By next year, and certainly the following year, we'll be right back on top."

Hockey

Cohasset started last week off strong with the team's first win of the 1990 season.

Mike Reynolds, a ninth grade center, scored two goals against Scituate for a 2-0 win.

Coach Dennis Walsh credited Reynolds with the win, along with rightwing John Murphy. The sophomore assisted on both goals.

Things went downhill from there as Cohasset lost last Saturday to Sandwich, 4-2.

"It was a really good game," Walsh commented, noting that the score seesawed between the two teams until Sandwich went ahead for good in the fourth quarter.

If it wasn't for a couple of Cohasset penalties, and some bad luck on a Skippers' shot that hit the goalpost, Cohasset might have brought home its second league victory.

"It was a real close game. I was very pleased with our defense. (Goalie) Joel Reidy played a real good game," Walsh said.

The coach credited Cohasset's four defensemen, John McDonald, a senior, Craig Mulcahy, a sophomore, Dave Farrag, a senior, and Tim Conroy, an eighth grader, with playing a superb game against Sandwich.

The two goals were fired from Joel Whitman and John McDonald.

This week, Cohasset sees action against Dennis-Yarmouth at home on Wednesday, and next Saturday they're away at Randolph.

Randolph will be a tough team for the Skippers, Walsh predicted, although he believes there could be another win in the victory column for Cohasset after they meet Dennis-Yarmouth.

"The kids aren't discouraged at all," according to their coach. "The young kids are playing really well. I keep telling them the only difference

WARNING:

WINTER MAY BE HAZARDOUS TO YOUR CAR.

The facts are hard and cold.

Many motor oils just don't perform in winter weather. And that can lead to friction. Extreme engine wear. Or even extensive damage, or a breakdown that leaves you and your family stranded.

That's why it's so important to take your car or truck to Jiffy Lube now for our famous 14-Point, 10-Minute Oil Change. We'll ensure that your oil is the right weight for your car and the weather. And we'll install a new FRAM or Purolator oil filter, check and fill six essential fluids, lube the chassis, and much more.

Be sure to protect your car and your wallet against cold-weather calamities — by visiting Jiffy Lube today.

Hockey team is young, but they're improving between them and most of the teams they've played is just one or two goals.

"The idea now is to start improving our play. This is a young club, and they're bound to make mistakes. But they're not down on themselves at all. All I can hope for is that they continue with that attitude, and that we have a little better luck. That's all it will take."

Boys' basketball

Coach Arnie Reppucci thinks the Skippers are falling into a sort of good game/bad game type of performance. He's hoping it will eventually evolve into a good game/good game schedule.

Last week, Cohasset lost big time to defending league champs, East Bridgewater. The score read 51-25, but according to the coach, it was a worse game than that.

What they ran into this time was a living, breathing roadblock by the name of Jim Peterson. For all practical purposes, the six-foot, 11-inch senior is the East Bridgewater team, according to Reppucci. The big senior player scored 19 points for East Bridgewater, and captured 12 rebounds.

"It was kind of a disappointing game for us," according to the Skippers' coach. "Our highest scorer had eight or nine points. For a high school varsity team to come out and get only 25 points during a game - it's tough."

With their heads hung low, Cohasset came into its next game against league-leading Norwell " a little flat," Reppucci recalled.

But they were psyched for this team, and Cohasset wanted a win - badly. The Skippers entered this game witha diametrically opposing record. Norwell has seven wins against one loss. Cohasset has garnered one win, with seven defeats.

"We were ready for them," the coach said.

Although Cohasset lost that match, 56-49, the coach said his team was never out of the game.

"I was very impressed with our play," he said. "It was a great game."

Senior tri-captain Linc Marsac scored 23 points against Norwell. Captain Mike Ellinger scored 16 points in another outstanding effort.

"The difference between the two games," the coach said, "is that we're starting to believe in ourselves. The kids are dedicated, and they think they can make things happen."

Norwell, despite their league domination, was a better match-up for the Skippers. They played Cohasset with a man-to-man defense, something the Skippers were able to overcome. "We were very laid back and just let our shooting do the talking," Reppucci said.

"Against East Bridgewater, the kids just weren't psyched. They took one look at Peterson, and it was all over. We only had ten points in the first half. You don't see varsity games where the scoring is so low - it's like junior varsity or girls' junior varsity."

Despite their seesaw season, Reppucci believes the Skippers could conclude the year with a 500 record. He's looking forward to a strong second half of the season.

"We're starting to believe in ourselves and appreciate the fact that we have to do the little things in order to win," he said.

This week, the Skippers face possibly the toughest schedule of the season.

They were scheduled to meet Hull at home Tuesday night. On Friday, Norton, a strong league contender, will be on Cohasset turf against the Skippers.

Reppucci also mentioned how the tremendous fan support has been a big morale booster for the team this season. "Game in and game out, their support has been wonderful," he said. In last week's junior varsity game against Norwell, there were ten times as many Cohasset fans in the Norwell stands. And during the varsity game, Reppucci said there were at least as many Cohasset fans watching their team.

"We owe our fans a better brand of basketball, and that's what we're going to give them," the coach said.

GYMNASTICS

The Cohasset High School Gymnastics team met with Scituate High School January 3. Scituate stands first in the League with a record of six wins and no losses. Cohasset put on a good performance, but Scituate was too strong for Cohasset to take a victory. Scituate scored 125.70 to Cohasset's 103.70. Top scorers for Cohasset are listed below on each event.

Uneven Parallel Bars — All Around Tara Gallagher 6.75, All Around Liz Buckley 6.25, and Sr. Carrie Ripley 5.8. Balance Beam — Sr. Liz Buckley 6.25, 8th grader Marnie DeMichele 6.1, and Freshman Tara Gallagher 5.95. Vaulting — Freshman Tara Gallagher 7.75, Sr. Liz Buckley 7.3 and Jr. Corey Desantis 7.0. Floor Exercise — Tara Gallagher 7.5, Sr. Carrie Ripley 6.7, and Marnie Demichele 6.65. All Around Michelle Hartley did not compete in this meet due to an injury on the Parallel Bars just before Christmas.Sargent feels that even if Michelle had performed against Scituate, Cohasset still would not have been able to beat the strong Sailors.

Wednesday, Jan. 10, Cohasset cruised over to Randolph High School for their third win of the season. Cohasset's record is 3-2 and Randolph's record is 1-4. All Around Michelle Hartley was present for the first time since she's been injured around Christmas.

The Cohasset High gymnastics team put on the heat with a score of 113.25 to Randolph's 111.75. Top Scorers for Cohasset on each event are listed below:

Uneven Bars — 1st Michelle Hartley 8.5, 2nd Tara Gallagher 7.35, and Liz Buckley 6.55.

Balance Beam — 1st Michelle Hartley 7.4, Liz Buckley 6.2, and Marnie DeMichele 6.05.

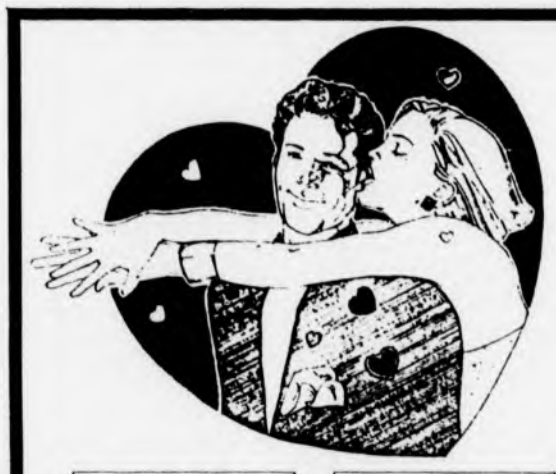
Vaulting — 1st Tara Gallagher 8.40, 2nd Michelle Hartley 8.20, and Liz Buckley 7.60.

Floor Exercise — 1st Michelle Hartley 7.95 (.50 deduction for having no music, would have scored 8.45), 2nd Tara Gallagher 7.45, and Carrie Ripley 6.40.

During the Randolph meet some of the gymnasts had some personal bests. Liz Buckley on Uneven bars, Tara Gallagher and Justin Muir on Vaulting, and Hilary Proodian on the Floor Exercise. Cohasset Coach Ruthann Sargent feels that Cohasset's performance on the floor exercise was terrific, although she believes the judges scored Cohasset extremely low on floor.

Monday, Jan. 22 Cohasset will be competing with Duxbury High School at Cohasset at 7 p.m. Sargent hopes to see all their fans in the stands.

Little League registration



The Cohasset Little League and Pony League Baseball Program will be accepting applications for registration in the 1990 Spring/Summer Baseball program at the Cohasset High School Saturdays, Jan. 20 and 27 and Feb. 3 and 10 from 9:30 a.m. to noon.

Please enroll your child in the program at this time, since any applications accepted after March 1, 1990 will be subject to a waiting list. Children ages six years prior to August 1, 1990 through 19 years are eligible for participation at either the Farm, Minor, Major, Pony or the newly created Senior League levels.

Parents and older siblings interested in coaching, refereeing or managing in the program should attend a Parent's Night Thursday, Jan. 25 at the Deer Hill School at 8 p.m.

School news

CHS students-of-the-month

We nominate Dawn Meehan of Grade 7 as student of the month for her outstanding accomplishments, exceptional contributions to the school, extra-curricular activities, academic achievement, and caring attitude.

Dawn is class secretary for Grade 7. Beyond the required activities for that office she provides her class with a monthly newsletter. In this newsletter, she describes all the upcoming events which involve Grade 7, sports reports and birthdays for the month. She also solicited volunteers for the school store for the month of January.

In addition to her school service she took part in the school's production of "Bye, Bye Birdie" playing the part of the "sad girl." During the production time she never missed a rehearsal and cheerfully volunteered to do any extra services needed such as costuming. Mr. Marks commented on her unselfishness and thoughtfulness during the rehearsals. She plays the flute in the school band and is a leader in the school chorus.

Dawn is noted for her outstanding achievements in athletics. She is part of a synchronized swimming team now in training for the 1992 Olympic games. She swims six days a week. For four years she has been the New England Synchronized Swimming Champion. She has just taken first place in the New England Collegiate Championships held at Wheaton College. She was the youngest competitor. Dawn qualified for this meet by placing first in the Bay State Games where she competed against high school and college age swimmers.

This seventh grader also maintains a high academic average. She has made the honor roll during terms 1 and 2. She has also been placed on the Effort Honor Roll which recognizes those students who consistently give their best. In appreciation of all of the above, we hope you will consider Dawn Meehan as student of the month for always giving her best as an athlete, a student and a school citizen.

Recommended by: Beatson, Mr. Cisneros, Mr. Kelly, Mr. Marks and Mrs. Schleiff.

Robin Haynes

Robin Haynes has consistently been a dedicated and spirited school leader.

She is a gifted musician who has contributed greatly to the growth of the Music Department and to the quality of its performances. Her courage and contagious enthusiasm has inspired students with less experience to attempt a difficult solo, a competitive inter-scholastic audition, or jazz improvisation! She is a member of Cohasset High School's Concert Band, Jazz Band and pit bands in the musicals "Bye, Bye Birdie" (1989) and the "Wizard of Oz" (1987). Robin is a member of Cohasset's first Advanced Placement Class in music history and regularly attends outside concerts and lectures. All of this experience will serve her well as she begins a career as a music educator!

Robin has numerous instrumental performance awards to her credit including several performances with the SEMSBA (Southeast Massachusetts School Bandmasters Association) Festival Bands and most recently, the highly competitive Southeast District Festival Band. She has demonstrated long-term commitment to her art by weekly saxophone lessons and the South Shore Conservatory's Summer Wind and Jazz Ensemble Programs. There she won the respect of the conservatory's demanding faculty for her ability, dedication and sensitivity.

Robin Haynes is a compassionate young woman who has volunteered her time and resources to assist those around her. She has helped to develop projects and ideas for Community Volunteer Service, spent time at home writing summaries of projects, worked at the Village Fair providing festive chamber music and collecting food and clothing for the Well-Spring Shelter, collected toys for Toys for Tots program, participated in the Walk-a-thon and Meals on Wheels projects. She has given the gift of music to sixth grade saxophone students (at the school of the Notre Dame in Hingham) and those in hospitals and nursing homes during this holiday season.

Robin Haynes is an exceptional musician and person!

Recommended by: Mrs. Civale, Ms. Foley and Mrs. Porter.

The School Committee budget discussions continue Monday, Jan. 22 at 8 p.m. in the high school home economics room. In light of the economic conditions you are urged to attend.

Support for METCO budget

The METCO Directors Association participated in a lobby day on Beacon Hill held Jan. 17.

Supporters of the METCO program turned out in force to show legislators that there is broad-based support for this program that brings minority students into suburban school systems.

METCO has been subjected to level funding. Given the increase in transportation costs, level funding means an actual decrease in services, according to Cohasset director Patricia Brown.

Residents are requested to write or call their local legislators, to express their support of the METCO program.

Swing Your Partner—

Don't forget to plan on coming to the Parish House on Friday, Jan. 19 from 7:30 to 9:30 p.m. for an evening of Square Dancing. The caller makes the learning a lot of fun for everyone: you don't have to be a great dancer, and kids can come too!

Fundraising Auction in the works...

As promised, the Fundraising Committee has met and is planning a Service Auction for Saturday, March 10. The evening will begin with a potluck dinner, followed by the auction, run by auctioneers Woody Chittick and Jim Hamilton. During the next few weeks, we will begin looking for donations of goods and services to be auctioned off—so start thinking of what you can offer! And, save March 10 on your calendar. We are looking forward to a packed house, a night of fun and the elimination of our budget deficit.

Also, the Fundraising Committee will meet again after church on Sunday, in the Parish House, to develop more specific ideas about gifts and to work out the details for soliciting gifts. Any member of the Parish who would like to join this committee is welcome to attend.

There will be a meeting of the Financial Planning Committee on Monday, Jan. 22 at 7:30 p.m. in the Parish House.

Mentor Dinner Date changed...

The Mentor dinner for eighth graders and their mentors will be held on January 28 at 6:30 at the DeMichele's.

Women's Book Group—

The Women's Book Group will meet on Tues., Jan. 30 at 7:30 p.m. at the home of Nancy Robertson, to discuss the book Breathing Lessons, by Ann Tyler. All are welcome!

NOTE OF THANKS TO CHOIRS—

I'd like to thank members of the junior and adult choirs who worked so hard to make such beautiful music on Christmas Eve. Although it means extra time and energy in a hectic season, the contribution adds so much to the special services. I would also like to thank Dick Cook, who played the guitar for us at the late service on Christmas Eve.

If you are interested in joining the choir, now is an excellent time. Speak to me on Sunday or call me at the church on Tuesday or Thursday, or any time at home, 267-1424.

Mary L. McNulty

A funeral Mass was celebrated Tuesday, Jan. 16 in Immaculate Conception Church in North Easton for Mary L. (Murphy) McNulty. Mrs. McNulty, 65, died Friday, Jan. 12 at Youville Hospital after a long illness. Burial was in Immaculate Conception Church Cemetery in North Easton.

For 40 years, Mrs. McNulty was a legal secretary for the Kemper Co. before her retirement.

She leaves her husband, Francis J. McNulty; two brothers, George V. Murphy of Stoughton and Frederick J. Murphy of West Yarmouth and Safety Harbor, Fla.; her mother-in-law, Mary C. McNulty Cronin of West Roxbury; and several cousins, Rita Wilde of North Easton, E. Francis McSweeney of Arizona and Clyde Craig, Harold Craig and Anna Craig, all of North Easton. She was the daughter of the late Frederick G. and Margaret A. (Cahill) Murphy.

Funeral arrangements were completed by the Sheehan-Lowe and Powers Funeral Home in Stoughton.

Rosemary Boyer

A funeral Mass will be celebrated at 10 a.m. Thursday, Jan. 18 in St. Anthony's Church in Cohasset for Rosemary (Bugg) Boyer. Mrs. Boyer, 73, died Sunday, Jan. 14 at the Queen Anne Nursing Home.

A private burial will be held in the spring at St. Joseph's Cemetery in Canaan, Conn.

Mrs. Boyer was an artist and member of the Copley Society. She was a gallery artist for the South Shore Art Center in Cohasset and was a member of the Scituate Art Association, the North River Art Society, and the Duxbury Art Association.

In addition to her paintings in oil and watercolors, Mrs. Boyer was an accomplished still life and landscape painter.

Born in Brooklyn, N.Y., she lived in Canaan, Conn. and Cohasset before moving to Hingham 18 years ago. She attended New Rochelle College in New York.

Funeral arrangements were completed by the Downing Cottage Funeral Chapel, 21 Pond Street in Hingham.

Mammography screening

The Cohasset Social Service League is sponsoring a mammography screening Monday, Jan. 22 from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m.

The private screenings will be held in a mobile van which will be parked near the town hall.

Mobile Diagnostics Inc. of Wellesley is providing the fully-equipped van which will be staffed by registered, female technologists. The equipment is a state-of-the-art low dose mammography unit.

The X-rays are read by board-certified radiologists and the results will be sent to the patient and the patient's physician.

The total cost for the screening, which can be billed to your insurance, is $97. Recent legislation requires most insurance companies to provide coverage for Massachusetts residents. If you belong to an HMO, you must have written permission from your primary physician. Some HMO's require patients to have mammographies at their own facility.

Call the Social Service League at 383-0771 for appointments or information. Patients will need to bring insurance information at the time of the screening, the name and address of the patient's physician, and written permission if the patient belongs to an HMO or Medicare.

Winter tracking at the park

The Department of Environmental Management will offer a walking tour of Wompatuck State Park Sunday, Jan. 28 from 1 to 3:30 p.m., leaving from the Visitors' Center.

Jerry Flaherty, who is the park interpreter will show you his favorite places to see various tracks in snow or mud. Since it is often difficult to see the animals you wish to observe, you may need to become a detective, gathering clues to its behavior before you are rewarded with the view of the animal. Possible tracks to observe are rabbit, squirrel, mice, skunks or maybe a sleeping place of a quail or grouse.

Dress warmly and wear appropriate footwear. Wompatuck State Park is located off Route 228 in Hingham. The program is free .

AARP meeting Jan. 25

The South Shore Chapter #1139 of AARP will meet at the Sons of Italy Hall, Route 3A in Hingham, Thursday, Jan. 25 at 1:30 p.m. The speaker will be Joan Cecil of the Internal Revenue Service.

Any person who is a member of the National AARP can become a member of a chapter and is welcome at this meeting.

Conservatory concert

Members of the South Shore Conservatory faculty will give a concert in Cox Recital Hall at the school off 19 Fort Hill Street in Hingham on Sunday, Jan.21 at 2 p.m.

The program is open to the public and there is no admission charge. However, a donation for scholarships will be welcomed.

Faculty members who will be performing include: David Cross, clarinet; Carol Kapstein, viola; Teresa Boland, Paul Hoffman, and Susan McGlaughlin, piano. All are professional musicians with degrees in music and extensive performing experience. For this program they have chosen works by Beethoven, Bizet, Mozart, and Hindemith.

The South Shore Conservatory is celebrating its 20th Anniversary in 1990 and this concert is one of a number of programs to be presented during the year. It is funded in part by the Mass. Council on the Arts and Humanities.

Club hosts medieval event

What say you fool, you've never heard of the Curse of Castle Blackmoor! You best be on guard if you wish to attend the Medieval Castle Murder hosted by the Cohasset Dramatic Club. This Murder Mystery Evening is a one night fundraising event to be held on Saturday February 24, at Nickerson Castle in Cohasset, (graciously made available by Arnold Nickerson).

All ye ladies and fine gentlemen are invited by King Tyrone and Queen Chrysantheum to Castle Blackmoor for Apres Jousting Tournament Festivities. There will be feasting and frolicking by Jack the Jester, Star Charts by Elvira, mistress of the stars, Sir Duke and his daughter Evaneline the valiant virgin, Lady Divan and a host of many medieval characters to spice up your evening of fun and intrigue.

All guests will come in medieval costume and remain in character throughout the evening. A few weeks prior to the murder, you will receive a kit containing all the character information, instructions, costume ideas, props, clues and accessories you will need in order to participate. There is no script to memorize, no pressure to perform and lots of room to improvise your role. One of our guests will be murdered and it might just be you!

This is a one-night only event and we must limit it to the first 100 reservations, so please act now! Our first Murder Mystery was a huge success, we are expecting a great response to this one, don't hesitate and be disappointed, make your reservations today!

For reservations, mail $35 per person, ($25 per person C.D.C. Members) to the Cohasset Dramatic Club/Murder Mystery, P.O. Box 225, Cohasset, MA 02025. Include the name, address and phone number of each participant. You will receive your kit in the mail. For more information, call Maureen Kingdon at 545-6539. One word of warning to all you knights in armor and damsels in distress, Drake the Dungeon Master loves his job!!!

Discussion on Alzheimer's

Marcia E. Benser, M.S., program coordinator of the Special Care Unit for Alzheimer's Disease at Sherrill House in Boston, will speak on "Home Management of the Alzheimer's Patient" on Wednesday, Jan. 24, at 7:30 p.m., at the Hersey House, 229 North Street in Hingham.

The program, which is free and open to the public, is sponsored by the Alzheimer's Disease Support Group of the South Shore, Inc., of Hingham.

Benser, a specialist in gerontological nursing, will explain how methods for alleviating problem behaviors in the nursing home setting can be adapted for home care of patients with memory disorders. Through understanding the causes of problem behaviors, caregivers are better able to minimize, prevent or manage such behaviors. Sherrill House is one of the few nursing homes in the Boston area that has a specialized unit dedicated to caring for victims of Alzheimer's Disease.

The Alzheimer's Disease Support Group of the South Shore, Inc. (ADSGSS) is a volunteer nonprofit charitable organization dedicated to providing information and support to families dealing with the problems of Alzheimer's Disease. Meetings are free and open to the public.

For further information, call 749-5417.

Planning for the future

The South Shore Coalition will sponsor a presentation of "MetroPlan 2000 — The Growth Plan for the Region" at 7:30 p.m. Thursday, Jan. 18, at Norwell Town Hall.

The meeting is a special effort to get selectmen, planning board members, other local officials and the public to become familiar with the plan as it relates to local growth.

The proposed plan will have an impact on all communities in the region, and local input is crucial at this time.

All are welcome to attend.

During the meeting, consultants for the solid waste grant will be introduced.

In addition, the coalition will vote on how much member communities should contribute to the coalition.

Plans for Earth Day activities in April also will be discussed.

Assessors should complete reviews

By Jane Lane
Mariner staff

The assessors expect to have all 617 property tax abatement applications reviewed by the end of this week.

"We'll review all of them," Lagrotteria told selectmen Monday night.

The assessors were initially concerned they would not be able to review a record number of abatement applications before the statutory deadline of 90 days which arrives in early March.

In that event, those applications which were not reviewed, would be systematically denied and the process would continue to a court appeal.

But by talking with people over the telephone at nights and during the weekends, Lagrotteria said the assessors should complete the review process by this week. They have already reviewed 85 percent of the applications, he said.

Many of the applications are quickly approved because veterans and the elderly are automatically eligible for an abatement, he explained. Others are quickly disapproved.

"There are those that are obviously filed incorrectly and we may not get to them - some of them are out of the ballpark. But those people with legitimate concerns - we'll definitely talk with them," he told selectmen.

"We intend to finish our examination of all the abatements. The problem is if we can get to talk with all. And the ones we deny need to know all their rights," he added.

Lagrotteria said town counsel is currently working on a form which will be available to those

Local area needs better ambulance

Town officials are convinced this area deserves the same kind of emergency medical care available in most other Massachusetts communities.

"We don't want the Cadillac of emergency medical services," said Dr. James Wechsler, chairman of the Hingham Advanced Life Support Implementation Committee. "We just want standard pre-hospital care - we just want to be as good as other communities in this Commonwealth."

Currently, Cohasset and Hingham are among seven area towns which do not provide advanced life support care to its residents. The communities are among a total of seven in the state which only maintain a basic life support ambulance program.

Hingham hosted an informational meeting last Thursday at which officials from Hingham, Hull, Scituate, Norwell and Cohasset, discussed their need for upgraded ambulance service. How that service will be implemented remains a question, although many officials believe a regional Level-funded budget is 'nonsense' for school dept.

By Alison Cohen
Mariner staff

The school committee told residents Monday that the level-funded budget the advisory committee told them to draft cannot be taken seriously.

"This isn't a budget," said committee member Ralph Kidder. "This is nonsense."

The committee is drafting three separate budgets-- a level-funded budget, a level-services budget, and a growth budget.

The level-funded budget has a price tag of nearly $5.3 million. All increases in salaries and overhead must be absorbed in the budget. The net result, according to the committee and administration, is drastic reductions in programs and staff.

To simply retain what is currently offered will require a 5.5 percent increase, for a total budget of $5.6 million.

The school committee's preference is a modest growth budget. The $5.8 million budget represents an increase of 9 percent.

The difficulty faced by the school committee is that Proposition 2 1/2 limits the combined town and school budget to $300,000 in new money. The school system needs that much in additional money just to maintain services at the 1989/1990 level.

The committee had lists of potential cuts that would have to be made at each of the budget levels.

The school committee made it clear the system couldn't absorb the cuts necessary to achieve a level-funded budget.

"This school system is being undermined and dismantled piece by piece," said Kidder.

William Kite, chairman of the English department, said the cuts would have a domino effect.

"We've spent ten years going through reductions

Fee not for moorings

There was an inaccuracy in a story written in last week's Cohasset Mariner regarding a proposed harbor user fee.

The fee, if approved by town meeting, will be charged to all boaters who habitually use the harbor but do not currently have a mooring. According to harbor committee chairman Fritz Pfaffmann, the proposed fee will be charged only to those persons who keep their boats at a private dock or marina in the harbor. Mooring holders will not be affected by the implementation of a harbor user fee.

The proposal will be discussed further at the Feb. 1 harbor committee meeting.

Town common looks good

Selectman Burt Pratt noted this week that the town common appears better than it has in years.

Since extensive repairs to the Meeting House Pond were completed last fall, the pond looks better than it has since it was built in 1903, he commented.

And after ten months, the clock at the First Parish Meeting House was repaired. Austin Ahearne made the repairs to the clock which overlooks the common. Pratt also noted that a generous benefactor donated a huge American flag to be flown on the town common flagpole.

"Our heritage is in great shape," he noted.

Incumbents undeclared

The news on the Cohasset election front this week is not so much who's running for office, but who hasn't yet decided.

There are a number of incumbents who have not yet taken out their nomination papers. Those papers must be returned to the town clerk by Friday, Feb. 23 in order for a candidate to officially declare his campaign.

Those still undeclared incumbents include planning board member John O'Toole and board of health chairman William Baird.

There appears to be a race shaping up for the three seats on the Paul Pratt Library board of trustees. Potential candidates include incumbents Sheila Evans and Doris McNulty, along with Sigrid Carey and Lucille McLoughlin.

Candidates for selectmen include incumbents Martha Gjesteby and Burt Pratt, along with Jane Goedecke.

Traesurer-Collector Elziabeth Ripley has taken out nomination papers for that position and Harold Litchfield will be running again for highway surveyor.

Nancy Sandell, a member of the school committee, will be running again for that office.

Water commissioner William Montouri has taken out nomination papers for that post, and sewer commissioner Edward Guild will be running for re-election. Stephen Wigmore will be seeking re-election on the housing authority.

There remains vacancy for a five-year term on the recreation commission. No one has yet taken out nomination papers for that position.

Walp on cable committee

John Walp of Fernway was unanimously voted by selectmen to fill a vacancy on the cable television advisory committee. his term will expire in 1992.

Bloodmobile Jan. 30

The next Cohasset Community triannual Red Cross Bloodmobile will be held Tuesday, Jan. 3, from 2 to 7 p.m. at the Unitarian First Parish House, 23 North Main St.

Groups that will participate and their donor promoters are Seavey Engineering (Gayle Seavey); Webb-Norfolk (Peg Faletra and Bill Handrahan); Rotary (Wayne Robbins); Masons (Don Harrold); Legion (Steve Wigmore); Unitarian First Parish (Susan Grant); Second Congregational (Vi Tuthill); St. Stephens (Karen Gammon); St. Anthonys (Carol Riley); independents (Mary Brennock); Glastonbury (Pat Hammond), schoolteachers (Carol Riley); and other miscellaneous donors who donate for specific units.

Any group that is interested in becoming active participants in this community service should contact Chairman Al Odermatt at 383-1283 or 878-3954, or Corinne Cahill, coordinator at 383-9265.

King award dinner Feb. 14

The Forrest E. King Memorial Awards presentation and dinner, sponsored by the Cohasset Chamber of Commerce, will be held Feb. 14, at Kimball's by the Sea from 6:30 to 11 p.m.

This year's nominees are Charles Fink, James Kearney, and Bob Martin. The winner will be announced at the dinner.

Anyone wishing to make reservations for the evening, or for more information, call Valerie King at King Jewelers 383-1755. The public is invited to attend. The cost of the evening is $25.00 per person. Reservations must be made in advance.

Democrats to caucus

Registered Democrats in Cohasset will be holding a caucus Saturday, Feb. 3, at 2 p.m. to elect delegates to the 1990 Massachusetts Democratic Convention.

Cohasset will be electing five delegates and four alternates.

Frederick R. Koed, chairman of the town committee, will call the caucus at Cohasset Town Hall, 41 Highland Avenue. The caucus is open to all registered Democrats, persons ineligible to register and media representatives. The only persons eligible to participate in any portion of the caucus are those who are registered Democrats in the ward or town as of Dec. 29, 1989. There will be no absentee or proxy voting.

in the English department. At some point this has to stop," said Kite.

None of the cuts in the educational staff or programs had any support from the committee, administration, and audience. Eliminating football and hockey from the athletic program was equally unpopular.

Chairman Barbara Bliss told the crowd that whatever they removed from the list of cuts had to be replaced with something else of equal dollar value if the override is unsuccessful.

JACKANSONS
1921 OCEAN STREET
P.O. BOX 1449 MARSHFIELD MA 02050 834-6300

Almost nine years ago I came to Marshfield to begin a new venture with the opening of Jackansons.

Since, March 18, 1981 the store has grown from the "old Ducas" to one of the finest Hallmark Stores on the South Shore and the 15th largest Lottery agent in the State of Massachusetts. These results were achieved because of the loyalty of our customers and the dedicated and great group of employees I have had during these nine years.

However, all good things must come to an end. Given the economic climate, government rules and regulations, mandated insurance costs, etc. it is difficult for a "small business " to keep up the pace required to remain profitable. I'm only one person and I'm spread too thin. While we're on top it's time to get out.

Jackansons is not bankrupt, nor is it being forced to close by any bank or creditors. This is a voluntary liquidation of a successful business and is a decision made taking into consideration my family and the price that would have to be paid for us to continue on.

Effective Monday, January 15, 1990 we will begin to liquidate the inventory, valued at $700,000.00, by selling everything in the store at 50% off its retail price. (Lottery, newspapers, magazines, tobacco and small candy & sundry items excluded.) This sale will continue until Wednesday, February 14th, 1990 at 10:00 PM, at which time Jackansons will cease to operate as the retail store it has been and all remaining inventory and fixtures will be sold to a third party.

However, after February 14th and for the indefinite future, we will remain open to sell Lottery, newspapers, magazines, tobacco, miscellaneous candy and sundry items. In other words we want to be your local newsstand and Lottery Agent.

I hope you, our loyal customers, will understand why I am doing this and I look forward to seeing you during our liquidation sale to thank you for making Jackansons what it was. I will never forget the many friends and fun times that have been had over these past nine years in Marshfield.

Sincerely,
Jack

Committee pushes for upgraded services

advanced life support ambulance program is the best option to follow.

And it appears that a privately-operated system will be the most cost-effective, according to Dr. Wechsler.

This does not sit well with some local firefighters who currently provide their towns with basic life support through the fire departments' EMT service. They believe, according to Hingham Lt. Lincoln Hersey, that the local EMT's should be trained in the paramedic program and continue to operate an upgraded ambulance system for the town.

"I believe the EMT's are upset," Hersey said. "They feel they are being stepped over and pushed aside. I believe that's the feeling of EMT's in all five towns."

Cohasset's Capt. Robert Silvia who also attended the meeting, believes each town must implement a paramedic program. But he's not sure a private ambulance service would be cheaper than training the current EMT staff.

Based on the discussion held last week, the Hingham committee has proposed an article for the town meeting warrant which will allow selectmen to enter into a multi-town agreement to provide advanced life support emergency medical assistance.

The Hingham committee has presented this option only if the service will be provided at no cost to the town, Dr. Wechsler explained. Anytime the service is used, the patient's insurance will be billed for the service.

The current EMT basic life support system will not be disbanded. It would be added to the ALS program, Dr. Wechsler explained, which will give the participating towns a two-tier level of service.

Right now, he explained, people don't realize how vital an ALS emergency medical program is to a community. Studies have indicated that if a paramedic is on the scene of a medical emergency within 16 minutes, it can increase the chance for survival by 40 percent.

"It is imperative that these towns bring their emergency medical service up to standard," he said. "People don't appreciate that we're not getting the best we can get."

Basic life support is performed well by the dedicated EMT's within the local fire departments, Dr. Wechsler said. But they are not trained in the advanced system which allows for additional life support capabilities, he added.

The determining factor in deciding to seek a privately-operated ALS program was financial, he said. Based on the committee's studies, they determined that contracting with a private ALS company will be the most cost-efficient method of operation. But the only way that can be done is if several towns participate in the service.

Paramedics must be called on at least 750 ambulance runs per year to keep their certification current, the physician explained. None of the neighboring towns alone could support that number of annual runs, so the answer is to regionalize the program, he said.

Capt. Silvia doubts that combined towns, such as Hingham, Hull, Cohasset and Scituate, will produce the need for 750 ALS calls. And he wonders what the service will eventually cost if the participating towns fail to live up to that requirement.

"I hate to see another committee, but I'd like to see a regional committee decide what each town needs and what they are willing to spend. I can't see how this private service will be free. Why not spend $100,000 to get our EMT's upgraded. I'd love to see a regional committee look into that," Silvia said.

Figures received by the committee by one ALS company, Norfolk-Bristol, indicated that the service costs about $300,000 annually. That cost is borne by the patients who use the service. Norfolk-Bristol is willing to enter into a multi-town agreement to provide the ALS service free of charge to the communities for 18 months.

"But after 18 months, where does that leave us?" Silvia questioned.

"The firefighters are concerned about their jobs and they expressed those concerns at the meeting," Dr. Wechsler said. "But their concerns seemed superficial - that the paramedics won't be as motivated as the local EMT's, or that they'll need maps to travel through the towns. I think their basic concern is that they'll lose their jobs."

He argued that the economy appears to be the greatest threat to the local EMT service. Several neighboring communities, faced with severe financial constraints, have considered substantial cuts in the local fire departments. Dr. Wechsler said it was never a goal of the committee to eliminate jobs from the local work force.

"My goal is simply to improve the service and delivery of medical care equal to the service in other parts of this Commonwealth," he said.

Cohasset selectmen Diana Kornet and Martha Gjesteby also attended last week's meeting. They discussed the proposal with the other members of the board, and decided to forward the issue to the government structure committee for further review.

Kornet said she was concerned that the current proposal would require the ambulance to be located somewhere in Hingham. In some instances, it would be impossible for an ambulance to reach a victim in areas of Cohasset, Hull or Scituate within the required 16 minutes, she stated.

Capt. Silvia called the proposal "self-serving for Hingham." He suggested that two ambulances could be provided for a multi-town area. They could be stored at two central locations, ensuring that victims throughout the area would be served by the system.

Hingham selectman Edna English said the ALS service would address a "very serious situation" in the local towns.

"But we have to watch out. We don't want to go from a zero-based bid (no cost) and find out two years later it's going to cost some outrageous sum to subsidize it the service. The selectmen want to look at other systems and see what a reasonable cost of this service will be."

English said the regional approach to solving emergency medical care is just one step in helping to solve common problems. "There may be other communities in worse financial straits than Hingham. Without overrides, maybe some communities will do away with their ambulances and they'll need this service even more than we do," she said.

Lt. Hersey remains unconvinced that a private service is the way for towns to go. "We don't feel it's cost effective when you already have emergency medical service in these towns," he said.

"A private service is going to have to be subsidizied sometime. They're not going to get anymore from the state so the subsidy will have to come from the town eventually.

"We already have the service here. Why not build upon it?" he asked.

FEBRUARY 1990 CALENDAR

"Experience is not what happens to a man. It's what a man does with what happens to him." - Aldous Huxley

A DAY DOWN UNDER

Thursday, February 1: Escape for a "mini vacation" to Australia. Our day will begin with a slide show narrated by my Australian son who lived with us for a year during 1986-87 through the AFS program, and has returned to visit for three months. Adventure will continue with an Australian lunch at the Ritz Cafe celebrating the International Festival. Next month, we will complete the adventure with a trip to the OMNI Theater to view TheGreat Barrier Reef. Meet at Brandon Woods at 10 A.M. $20.00 all inclusive.

MONET SLIDE SHOW

Tuesday, February 6: The Museum of Fine Arts will be presenting a slide show of the Monet exhibit here at Brandon Woods. This is a wonderful way to prepare for our trip next month (March 7, mark your calendars now) or to enjoy the exhibit if you will be unable to make the excursion into Boston. Henry Tate, of the Museum staff, will be the lecturer. Coffee, tea and dessert, starting at 1 P.M. Members free, guests $2.50

MONDAY BRIDGE

Mondays: Let's try Mondays this month for the bridge group to see if it proves to be a better day. For all levels of bridge players, from the novice to the advanced player. We are hoping to coax all reluctant bridge players out. Bring a sandwich and we will provide drinks and dessert. From 11 A.M. to 3 P.M.

VALENTINE BIRTHDAY PARTY AND POETRY READING

Tuesday, February 13: Celebrate all of our February Birthdays while we listen to Mary Reppucci talk about the joys of poetry writing and reading. Birthday cake, coffee and tea at 1 P.M.

THE UNSINKABLE MOLLY BROWN

Thursday, February 15: Enjoy a light catered luncheon of quiche and salad at Brandon Woods, before heading into Boston for the matinee. Starring Debbie Reynolds and Harve Presnell, The Unsinkable Molly Brown celebrates the rugged adventurism of the American pioneer spirit. Meet at Brandon Woods at 11:30 A.M. I will wait until Tuesday, February 13, to purchase the tickets, so that we can be sure of the weather. Please let me know with your response sheet if you are planning to attend. $45 all inclusive.

WORCESTER SPRING FLOWER SHOW

Thursday, February 22: Get a head start on Spring by visiting the Flower Show. Landscapers, garden clubs and floral designers look back at the past 100 years for their inspiration for this year's Show. Fresh spring gardens, quaint room and table settings, and enchanting floral designs will bring the Centrum into full bloom. Enjoy lunch at Maxwell's Tool House. The ticket for the flower show is $5.50 and we will order off the menu at Maxwell's, with the price ranging from $5 to $13 for lunch. Leave Brandon Woods at 9 A.M.

JACK DRUMMEY - CARICATURE ARTIST

Tuesday, February 27: Jack Drummey will be returning to Brandon Woods with his wonderful caricatures. See attached flyer for details. Door prizes to be awarded. Coffee, tea and dessert beginning at 1 P.M.

School committee looks at safety

By Alison Cohen
Mariner staff

Protecting Osgood School children from the hazards of street crossing is high on the minds of their parents.

Concerns were heightened following an incident in early January. According to one parent who was there, a motorist became irate when forced to stop while the youngsters were walked across the intersection.

According to the eyewitness, the man pulled up onto the sidewalk and began honking his horn and yelling at the school janitor who was crossing the children.

"The man was really scary," said the parent.

A group of worried parents formed a committee to address safety issues. Committee members plan on working closely with school officials and Cohasset police officers.

"One out of every ten motorists is speeding," said committee member Jane Henderson. "Cars fail to stop. It is just a matter of time before someone is hit."

Henderson stresses that they aren't asking for replacement of buses cut when a Proposition 2 1/2 override failed last year. They do want residents to be more careful.

Supt. Stephen Hart agrees that traffic safety could be improved in the area.

"It's a difficult situation because of where the school is," he said. "There is a lack of space for people to come into the yard and turn around [when dropping off children]."

But Hart does not want to overstate the problems either.

"There is a police officer there on a daily basis," he said. "We are looking into some other things, such as having parents drop off on only one side of the street for better traffic flow."

Following the incident with the angry motorist, the police officer and janitor swapped positions. The officer monitors children at the crosswalk now.

"There is always a danger," Hart said. "We all have to be careful."

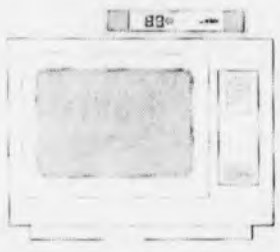
CABLE CORNER

A Monthly Feature Sponsored By Continental Cablevision

ARE YOU THROWING YOUR CABLE GUIDE IN THE TRASH EACH MONTH -- WITHOUT READING IT?



It may interest you to know that Continental Cablevision sends out approximately two tons of Cable Guides each month. . . using the equivalent of 468 trees a year! Our research shows that television viewers use a variety of sources for TV listings and information, including newspapers, weekly guides, and the video Prevue Guide (channel 66). If you are using these or any other sources, you may feel that the guide is no longer necessary.

For this reason, and because Continental Cablevision is committed to protecting the environment, we are asking our customers to give up The Cable Guide -- if it's not being used. We will be sending out a postcard in February that will give you the choice of receiving or cancelling The Cable Guide.

Remember, the choice is yours -- if you're using The Cable Guide, we will continue your complimentary subscription. But if you're not using it, cancel your subscription -- and help save a tree.

TECH TIP OF THE MONTH

Installation and Service Supervisor Keith Mains has a helpful suggestion for the winter months: if you have scheduled a visit from a technician this winter, it's a good idea to spread newspapers on the carpet that he'll walk on. In inclement weather, our technicians' boots may be wet -- and putting down newspapers will prevent any damage to your carpets.

EMPLOYEE OF THE MONTH

January's Employee of the Month is Service Technician Paul Zupperoli. Paul joined Continental in April of last year, having recently completed four years with the U.S. Navy.

We often receive complimentary calls from our customers regarding Paul's job performance. One customer in particular said that "Paul should be recognized as a valuable asset to Continental Cablevision". Well, we agree. . .

*Congratulations, Paul!

Assessors to complete abatement review early whose abatements are denied. It will explain in detail how a resident files for an appeal to the tax court if their abatement is denied by the local assessors.

The applicant has 60 days after the deadline to file for an appeal.

"We're not meeting face-to-face with 500 applicants," Lagrotteria said. "But we will contact 500 people with an offer."

Lagrotteria explained that if the total amount of abatements exceeds the $235,000 they have set aside, the money will probably be raised through next year's tax rate.

"But as far as I can see, our assessments are right on target," he said.

Selectman Rocco Laugelle recalled years ago the company that completed the assessments were present for the abatement reviews. They sat at town hall and talked individually with residents who filed for the abatements.

Laugelle wondered if that same process could be used again. "I'd hate to see some residents not get a fair shake," he said.

Assessor Tom Duggan also recalled that process, but noted that police officers were called in to "restore some decorum" to the hearing room at town hall.

The company will not come to Cohasset free of charge, according to the assessor chairman, because it was not part of their contract.

Lagrotteria explained that with the advent of Proposition 2 1/2, the rules governing assessments have been fined tuned to a specific formula. He argued that the assessors are using the same formula when reviewing these abatement requests, as the residents who are issuing the protests.

Selectmen Chairman Burt Pratt congratulated the assessors for completing 85 percent of their applications.

Assessors' articles

Although it is past the deadline for submission of warrant articles by town departments, selectmen allowed two more articles into the April 7 town meeting warrant.

The two articles, sponsored by the board of assessors, were late because the board was unaware of new legislation that affects the local tax assessment process.

The first article would extend the deadline for assessing new construction from January 1 until June 30. Lagrotteria explained that a commercial or residential building is completed Jan. 2, the assessors now have to wait until the next year to assess that property. By the time the taxes are paid on the property, the developer will have enjoyed an 18-month "free ride," he said.

With this new enabling legislation, which must be approved by town meeting, the assessors will have until June 30 to assess all new buildings completed after Jan. 1 of that year.

"This will gain us valuable new growth revenue, and we need all we can get," he explained.

Selectman Pratt was concerned that in that six-month period there might be a change in the real estate market that could alter assessments. But Lagrotteria assured him the market does not fluctuate that drastically in a six-month period.

"We need additional revenue and this will give us the opportunity to bill taxable property sooner," Lagrotteria said. He has not had the opportunity to estimate how much new revenue this would generate, but Lagrotteria said that information will be available by the town meeting.

The second article which selectmen accepted into the warrant would allow homeowners a tax exemption for any renovations they make to a home in order to accommodate an elderly resident.

"This is not for an in-law apartment," he said. "This exemption would be for families providing for an elderly person."

Although he thinks it's a "great idea," Lagrotteria said he will review the legislation with the planning board before they decide whether to endorse the article. At this time, they felt it was important to reserve space in the warrant for a possible article, he said.

The assessors would act as the watchdog agency, overseeing abatements for those residents housing an elderly resident.

"How are you going to handle all the illegal in-law apartments we have in this town now?" questioned selectman Laugelle. "I can see them all filing for abatements now."

Lagrotteria said until they review this article more thoroughly, they don't have answers to most of their questions. "But it's an idea worth looking into," he noted.

A third warrant article will ask the town to accept a parcel of land off Forest Avenue from George Buckley. Buckley says he does not own the 16,573 square foot property, and has refused to pay taxes on the unbuildable lot since 1974.

It would make sense to accept the parcel as town property, since the tax collector continually issues a bill for the land as taxable property. Because the taxable property is figured into the town's predicted revenue, the collector must then borrow in anticipation of taxes, Lagrotteria explained.

Executive Secretary Greg Doyon said accepting the land in lieu of back taxes would be less costly than battling the matter in tax court. The person donating the land is responsible for any engineering costs involved in transferring the property to the town.

Selectmen Diana Kornet and Ned Tebbetts will discuss their ideas for a possible reorganization of town departments, and then forward those ideas to the government structure committee.

Kornet and Tebbetts volunteered to be a selectmen's subcommittee to study ways in which town government could be made more efficient and cost effective.

Although they said they could not discuss their ideas in open session, Kornet said they will meet to outline their suggestions. They will then forward those recommendations to the government structure committee for their review.

Tebbetts said one idea would be for several towns to utilize the services of one employee. One example could be for several surrounding towns to share one fulltime animal control officer. Cohasset's ACO is currently employed for only ten

There are other functions that towns could economize if one individual provides the service for several communities, he said. Any ideas from the public would be gratefully accepted, he added.

Candidates' corner . . .

Goedecke begins campaign

Jane Goedecke kicked off her campaign for a position on Cohasset's Board of Selectmen last Sunday night.

In a brief speech, Goedecke explained her reasons for running for one of the two seats available on the board of selectmen this year. She said, "While my leadership of the advisory committee has given me a knowledge of the complexities of the issues facing Cohasset, the advisory committee only becomes active at the end of the policy making process."

Goedecke said that Cohasset's finances are the most important issue facing the board of selectmen this year. "It is vital to maintain the town's commitment to the levels of service in public safety, health and education in a time of declining state aid and the restrictions of Propostion 2 1/2. This means exploring many avenues and methods of funding."

She also emphasized the need for attention to long range planning for the town, specifically in areas such as regionalization.

G.O.P. delegates picked

The Cohasset Republican Town Committee met January 16 to elect nine delegates to the State Convention to be held on March 10 at the World Trade Center in Boston.

The following people were elected: Barbara Bowman, Patricia Buckley, Raymond Buckley, Janet Lahive, Grace Tuckerman, Lillian Murray, Jill O'Donnell, Rita Strong and Lee Jenkins.

The ex-officio delegates are Rep. Mary Jeannette Murray, State Committee person Polly Logan and Chairman Julie Guild. Also eligible to be delegates are Selectmen, Moderator, Town Treasurer, Town Clerk, and members of the School Committee provided they were registered Republicans on December 15, 1989.

Also elected to membership on the Town Committee were Joseph Horak and Yvonne Julian.

Hedlund gets endorsement

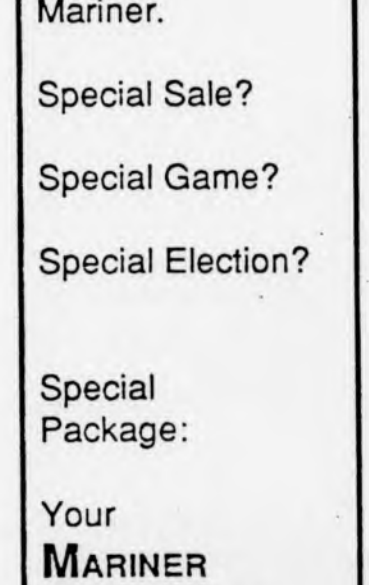
Republican State Senate candidate Robert Hedlund of Weymouth received the endorsement of the Massachusetts Taxpayers Committee. The committee is a non-partisian organization that supports fiscally-responsible legislative candidates.

Hussey on radio talk show

Donald Hussey, a candidate for state senate from the Norfolk and Plymouth District, was among the guests who appeared on a radio talk show hosted by WATD-FM in Marshfield.

"This was a good opportunity to present some of my thoughts with respect to the issues which affect our state government," Hussey said.

Flynn announces bid



Rep. William J. Flynn, Jr. has announced his candidacy for State Senator for the Norfolk and Plymouth Senatorial District now occupied by William Golden.

In addition to the state's present fiscal crisis, one of Rep. Flynn's highest priorities is holding down taxes.

WARNING:

WINTER MAY BE HAZARDOUS TO YOUR CAR.

The facts are hard and cold.

Many motor oils just don't perform in winter weather. And that can lead to friction. Extreme engine wear. Or even extensive damage, or a breakdown that leaves you and your family stranded.

That's why it's so important to take your car or truck to Jiffy Lube now for our famous 14-Point, 10-Minute Oil Change. We'll ensure that your oil is the right weight for your car and the weather. And we'll install a new FRAM or Purolator oil filter, check and fill six essential fluids, lube the chassis, and much more.

Be sure to protect your car and your wallet against cold-weather calamities — by visiting Jiffy Lube today.

☐Happy birthday to Kevin Hanian.

☐ Lisa McCarthy is getting married this month, and will be the new Mrs. Robert Shanahan. Lisa is beautiful, and will make a beautiful bride and we certainly wish her health, happiness and love in her future.

☐ Don't stop saving those Stop and Shop pink tapes. There is still plenty of time left to get more computers. The program goes through March 10, which means several more can be purchased.

☐ Congratulations to Joel Reidy, who was named player of the year in the 1989 Boston Globe All-Scholastic Boys Soccer team! That is a feat indeed, and Joel deserves it! Not only that, he is the third Reidy to make the squad, a record in itself we'll bet. Continued success in whatever you undertake Joel, you deserve it!

☐ Nancy L. Pompeo of Ripley Road, a student at the University of Rhode Island, was named to the Dean's List for the fall term.

☐ William Grimm and Deborah Shadd of Summer Street, are the parents of a boy born December 1 at South Shore Hospital.

☐ Scott Randall and Lisa Reddie of South Main Street are the parents of a girl born December 2 at the South Shore Hospital.

❑Congratulations go to Brendan Mulcahy this week!! Brendan had a certificate awarded him recently, for "selection as one of Stop and Shop's Most Valuable Players." It is an acknowledgement of outstanding performance and significant contribution to his store team. It was signed by Tricia Johnson store manager. Brendan also received a bright red t-shirt with hugh white letters that say MVP, Stop and Shop, Major League. Good work Brendan. We're proud of you.

❑If you have extra bread or anything that ducks will eat, run to Beechwood to the reservoir. Adam McClay says there are so many mallards up there he cannot keep feeding all of them, and he is afraid they will starve!

Secretary of State Michael J. Connolly swears in Laura Jean Yorkstas McDonald of Cohasset (center) as a Notary Public. Rep. Mary Jeanette Murray also participated in the swearing-in ceremony at the state house.

❑The Veterans of Foreign Wars Post 9146 did a generous thing recently! Through the Social Service League of Cohasset and Mary Anne Hansen, the veterans post gave five families Stop and Shop gift certificates. Of course, the families were most appreciative of the help, and impressed with the kindness and community concern shown them. Our hats go off to Post 9146, a fine group dedicated to helping others!

❑The next Cohasset Community Triannual Red Cross Bloodmobile will be held Tuesday, Jan. 30 from 2 to 7 p.m. at the First Parish House, 23 North Main Street. Blood is needed more than ever! As Alfred Odermatt, chairman says, "This is a good opportunity for those whose relatives or friends have recently received blood to replace it so that blood will still be available for others." Go and enjoy the pleasure that one receives when giving the gift of Life.

❑Monday, Feb. 5th, the Cohasset High School Gymnastics Team will be conducting a "One day only Gymnastic Clinic." This clinic is open to 4th to 8th grade students, boys and girls. The clinic will be held in the upstairs gym of the Cohasset High School from 5:15 to 7 p.m. The clinic will consist of a warm-up with Captains Liz Buckley, Carrie Ripley and Michelle Hartley. Rotations on the floor exercise, uneven bars, vaulting, balance beam and dance rotation (for girls only). Also during the clinic you will see performances by All Arounds, Seniors and Jrs. So, if you are interested, call Ruthann Sargent at 545-3058, or drop off a check to Ruthann at the Cohasset Community Center for $10. Everyone involved believes this clinic will be a great success, so sign up early so you do not miss out. Enrollment is limited.

❑Garrett A. Hunt has been promoted in the U.S.Air Force to the rank of airman first class. Garrett is an apprentice communication and navigation systems specialist at Barksdale Air Force Base, LA, with the 2nd Avionivs Maintenance Squadron. He is the son of Jacqueline M. Noonan and the stepson of Brian W. Noonan, of 26 Ash Street. Garrett is a 1988 graduate of Cohasset High School.

❑Believe it or not, its that time again...Little League and Pony League sign-up! Applications for registrations in the 1990 Spring/summer season are available at the Cohasset High School. Saturday, Jan. 27, Feb. 3 and Feb. 10th from 9:30 to noon. Be sure to enroll your child at these times or they will be subject to a waiting list!

❑Every year you say you are going to do it then the time comes and you have forgotten again! Plenty of warning this time! The Mariner is running its Valentine greeting section again, and you can have your greeting printed for $10 for twenty words! The deadline is Feb. 10 at noon, so gather your thoughts then write your greeting. Mail $10 and greeting along with your name, address and phone number to Mariner Classifieds, P.O. Box 682, Marshfield, MA 02050. Then, get ready to read!! It's fun and everyone loves it.

Obituaries

Grace L. Mitchell

A funeral service will be held Thursday, Jan. 25 at 1:30 p.m. at the Downing Cottage Funeral Chapel, 21 Pond St. in Hingham for Grace L. (Cowing) Mitchell of Cohasset.

Mrs. Mitchell, 88, died Friday, Jan. 19 at her daughter's home in Bradenton, Fla. Burial will be in Woodside Cemetery.

For many years, Mrs. Mitchell was the bookkeeper for the family business, Mitchell's Garage. The car repair business was located on Chief Justice Cushing Highway, until the property was sold two years ago.

A former bookkeeper for the East Weymouth Savings Bank, Mrs. Mitchell moved to Cohasset 60 years ago. Her husband, the late Joseph "Pete" Mitchell, started his business along the state highway in 1946.

Born in Hingham, she was a graduate of Hingham High School. She was an active member of the Beechwood Congregational Church, the Satuit Chapter of the Order of the Eastern Star, and the 60 Plus Club. Mrs. Mitchell was also a past degree master of the Cohasset Grange.

She leaves three sons, Francis J. Mitchell of Cohasset, Kennth C. Mitchell of Underhill, Vt., and Russell H. Mitchell of Bradenton, Fla.; two daughters, Eileen Sargent of Grantham, N.H., and Barbara Debevec of Bradenton, Fla; a sister, Marion C. Moulton of Cohasset and Peachtree City, Ga.; 18 grandchildren and 30 great-grandchildren. She was the sister of the late Ralph C. Cowing.

Memorial donations may be made to the Beechwood Congregational Church, Church Street.

Mary L. McNulty

A funeral Mass was celebrated Tuesday, Jan. 16 in Immaculate Conception Church in North Easton for Mary L. (Murphy) McNulty. Mrs. McNulty, 65, died Friday, Jan. 12 at Youville Hospital after a long illness. Burial was in Immaculate Conception Church Cemetery in North Easton.

For 40 years, Mrs. McNulty was a legal secretary for the Kemper Co. before her retirement.

She leaves her husband, Francis J. McNulty; two brothers, George V. Murphy of Stoughton and Frederick J. Murphy of West Yarmouth and Safety Harbor, Fla.; her mother-in-law, Mary C. McNulty Cronin of West Roxbury; and several cousins, Rita Wilde of North Easton, E. Francis McSweeney of Arizona and Clyde Craig, Harold Craig and Anna Craig, all of North Easton. She was the daughter of the late Frederick G. and Margaret A. (Cahill) Murphy.

Funeral arrangements were completed by the Sheehan-Lowe and Powers Funeral Home in Stoughton.

Words of wisdom

For the past few weeks, Greater Boston has agonized about the way the Carol Stuart murder investigation has been handled, or mishandled, not only by the police and the district attorney's office but by elected politicians, community leaders and the media.

All this criticism strikes to the core of our predisposed attitudes toward people who are different from us, and we must reflect on these prejudices.

In preparation for February's observance of Black History Month, and in celebration of the life of Dr. Martin Luther King, we offer the following thoughts from the leader of the Civil Rights movement in this country.

In tribute to him we are reprinting excerpts from his speeches, sermons and writings from The Words of Martin Luther King Jr., selected by Coretta Scott King.

His words 21 years ago are just as timely as today. There has been improvement in race relations, to some degree. King's language, however, is from another era, when the word Negro was used instead of black.

"The straitjackets of race prejudice and discrimination do not wear only Southern labels. The subtle, psychological technique of the North has approached in its ugliness and victimization of the Negro the outright terror and open brutality of the South."

"There is little hope for us until we become toughminded enough to break loose from the shackles of prejudice, half-truths and downright ignorance."

"The daily life of the Negro is still lived in the basement of the Great Society. He is still at the bottom despite the few who have penetrated to slightly higher levels. Even where the door has been forced partially open, mobility for the Negro is still sharply restricted. There is often no bottom at which to start, and when there is, there is almost always no room at the top."

"A doctrine of black supremacy is as evil as a doctrine of white supremacy."

"Like life, racial understanding is not something that we find but something that we must create. And so the ability of Negroes and whites to work together, to understand each other, will not be found readymade; it must be created by the fact of contact."

"We must use time creatively, in the knowledge that the time is always ripe to do right. Now is the time to make real the promise of democracy and transform our pending national elegy into a creative psalm of brotherhood. Now is the time to lift our national policy from the quicksand of racial injustice to the solid rock of human dignity."

"Oppressed people cannot remain oppressed forever. The yearning for freedom eventually manifests itself, and that is what has happened to the American Negro.

"Something within has reminded him of his birthright of freedom, and something without has reminded him that it can be gained.

"Consciously or unconsciously, he has been caught up by the Zeitgeist, and with his black brothers of Africa and his brown and yellow brothers of Asia, South America and the Caribbean, the United States Negro is moving with a sense of great urgency toward the promised land of racial justice."

We wonder if the School Committee is discussing what to do with the high school football uniforms now that Cohasset has discontinued competition at the varsity level.

Recycling news...

This week's recycling news was written by Alix White of the recycling committee.

Recycling Tip for the week

Batteries used in toys and machines that you got over the holidays are probably dead now. Do Not Throw Them Away. They are high in heavy metals and considered hazardous waste. Instead, store them in a glass jar (against leakage) in your shed or a safe place in your kitchen until the next Hazardous Waste Day, which should be in the Fall.

Cost Avoidance

Recycling is not only good for the environment, it is good for Cohasset's General Fund: Recycling saves our town money. It is that simple.

Think about this for a minute: In the Fall, 40 percent of our waste by volume at the Recycling/Transfer Facility (RTF) is leaves. We have a choice: we can compost them directly at the RTF or we can pay to have them hauled and burned at the SEMASS incinerator for $44/ton plus transportation. If we compost, we are saving natural resources through reduced air pollution and increased local compost, plus we are saving money.

Compost works year round for us as a cost avoidance factor. I say "factor" because recycling is not free. Compost, the commodity which is as close to free as possible, still takes labor and machinery to create the windrows, to turn and maintain them. In January there are Christmas trees, in Spring and Summer there are grass clippings and brush, and in the Fall we are completing the cycle with leaves again. These are all items that we can process at the RTF without paying for transportation or disposal costs. If you prepare your Christmas trees properly (no nails, tinsel, ornaments, plastic) you cut down on labor costs at the RTF. If you don't use chemical lawn and plant treatments, your grass clippings (and therefore compost) will be organic and can be used safely in your vegetable garden instead of just your flower beds. (We will be speaking extensively on composting in upcoming articles.) As we can see, compost works for us in many ways. Today, it is important to remember that it saves us a great deal of money.

Newsprint and corrugated cardboard saved the town $7,877.43 for the last quarter of 1989. Newsprint and corrugated collections are up nationwide, which means that the mills are glutted with the commodity right now. We are currently charged $15 per ton if the commodity goes directly to the mill, and $30 per ton if it has to be warehoused. The long term solution to the glut is to build more recycled paper mills near population centers, and consumers should seek out recycled paper products to strengthen the market and complete the cycle.

Glass saved the town $1,210 over an eight week period this fall. We were paid $131 for 18.5 tons of glass, and we avoided spending $1,079 by not having it hauled to SEMASS. We also saved money because we own the glass bin, and there is no rental fee. Glass does not actually burn in an incinerator, it only melts. Recycling is the best use and re-use of glass. Glass collection is up at the RTF, in part because of school participation. Buy glass containers instead of plastic, and then recycle them.

As you can see recycling saves us money, but it is not free. We need your continued support as we upgrade collection and increase commodities at the RTF. Specifically, we need a compactor and baler for corrugated and for HDPE Plastic, two commodities that are more valuable if they are baled. We also need a second hand "oil igloo" to collect used motor oil properly (motor oil containers are made of HDPE, and would be recyclable if we had the baler). We can only purchase these items with your vote at Town Meeting in April. The Recycling Committee has no budget of its own, any revenues from recycling go directly into the General Fund, and it is important to remember that we saved $9,000 through recycling glass, newsprint and corrugated cardboard in the last quarter of 1989 alone. Your support is crucial as our recycling program grows.

Twenty nine area businesses, artists and interior designers will come together at the South Shore Art Center to interprete their work through creative table settings. The event will be held Wednesday, Feb. 7 at The Art Center, 119 Ripley Road in Cohasset.

The tables will address a selected artist or artistic style. For example, a table may focus on the impressionist, Monet, and reflect his style through the floral pattern on the china and the arrangement of fresh flowers. Another table might create a tea party in the Chinese style of painting utilizing 19th century Chinese porcelain.

The event will begin at 10 a.m. and continue until 9 p.m. Refreshments will be served throughout the day.

Tickets ($10) are available at the South Shore Art Center, at (617-383-9548).

Senior center news

Your Council on Aging finished the year with a flurry of activity including the Sixty Plus Club Christmas party (the best ever), the well attended awards luncheon, a matinee at the Pops, and the Council on Aging annual Christmas party, which surpassed previous ones.

The pace continues as we prepare for a New Year and the challenges embraced in providing programs and services with a reduced budget. Fortunately, the "Friends of the Cohasset Council on Aging," the new fund raising arm of the COA, has undertaken an ambitious money raising program to fill the gap. The success of the "Friends" program will depend on a generous response by Cohasset citizens to the financial appeal which will be delivered to each Cohasset home. We hope you will be generous in your response to the "Friends" appeal, keeping in mind that they are volunteering their time, energy and efforts so that Senior Citizens can continue to enjoy the services and programs provided by the Council. PLEASE GIVE GENEROUSLY WHEN THIS APPEAL IS RECEIVED IN YOUR MAIL BOX.

THE GIVER AND THE TAKERS

In every community there are those who give and those who take. Cohasset is fortunate, however, because we have an abundance of givers, those who give their time, money and talents gladly. They far outnumber the "Takers or Gimme Group" who do their share of complaining.

Our Seniors are among the largest taxpayers, they are some of the biggest contributors in fund drives, they are the leaders in volunteer programs, at the forefront in town government, (Board of Selectmen, Planning Board, Advisory Board, to give a few examples). They are a large voting block who will have a greater impact as time goes on.

They are concerned about good government, taxes and adequate town services. They worry about our environment and were away out front in combating disposal problems.

About 15 years ago, Blanche "Bobbie" Buckley, Forest Notch and Helen Carter, Fair Oaks Lane, organized a group of Senior Citizens (Percy James, Pete Cumner, Nellie DeSantos, Karl Paffman, to name a few) who encouraged separation of waste, such as papers, cans and bottles. They gave freely of their time and tried to impress upon our town officials and citizens the need to conserve and extend the life of our disposal facility. With money accumulated from the return on bottles and the sale of papers, they purchased a machine (later given to the town) and still in use today, to grind up the glass. Compare the cost of their operation with that of the new facility and we wonder why we didn't take them more seriously. Yes, Seniors take a bow. You are a vital part of our community.

AMERICAN HEART MONTH
FEBRUARY 1 to 28

PURPOSE: Health Care Professionals and Volunteers across the country will spend their time this month providing educational information about cardiovascular disease and prevention methods of strokes. Here are a few good tips in changing your lifestyle that can make a big difference to your heart. Old habits are hard to break, but by eliminating just a few of them, you can greatly reduce your risk of heart attacks. (So where do you begin)

1. First, quit smoking. Don't get discouraged if it takes a few tries;most people have 4 or 5 starts before kicking the habit for good.

2. For lunch, try a turkey sandwich on whole wheat bread instead of fried foods or luncheon meats. It's lower in cholesterol and sodium.

3. Take a walk. Half an hour of walking or other exercise, three times a week, does wonders for your cardiovascular system. It also helps to relieve tension.

4. Sign up for a Health Promotion course this month. Cooking for aHealthy Heart, freedom from stress and smoking. Call your nutritionist (Pat Messing) to join in the supermarket tour on February 5, 7-8:30 P.M. at the Super Stop & Shop on Route 3A. Cost is $15. Call 383-2410.

NEW SENIOR AQUATIC PROGRAM TO BENEFIT A HEALTHY HEART

Cohasset Seniors have been invited to join Scituate COA at Webb's ProFitness Pool in Norwell for a 1-hr swim. Program will include: 1/2 hr. water aerobic class, 1/2 hr. free swim. Use of hot tub, sauna & shower. The cost for ten (10) weeks will be $49. Applications must be filled out prior to the start of classes and a Doctor's approval will be required for anyone with high blood pressure or a pace maker. Classes meet Monday and Wednesday 10 A.M. To register, call 545-6700-Ext. 268

Cohasset girls pull out squeaker over Abington

By Jane Lane
Mariner staff

It wasn't the most notable week in Cohasset sports history, but there was at least one memorable match performed by the girls' basketball team.

It was, according to Coach Debbie Bostwick, a well-played, high tension nailbiter that will not be soon forgotten.

When Cohasset walked into the Abington High gym last Friday night, they were prepared for anything. Bostwick, who teaches in the Abington schools, knew the gym would be packed with hometown fans.

"I told them to expect the unexpected. There might be bad ref's, there might be good ref's. There might be obnoxious fans, there might be great fans. But I knew for certain the place would be jammed. And I was right," she said.

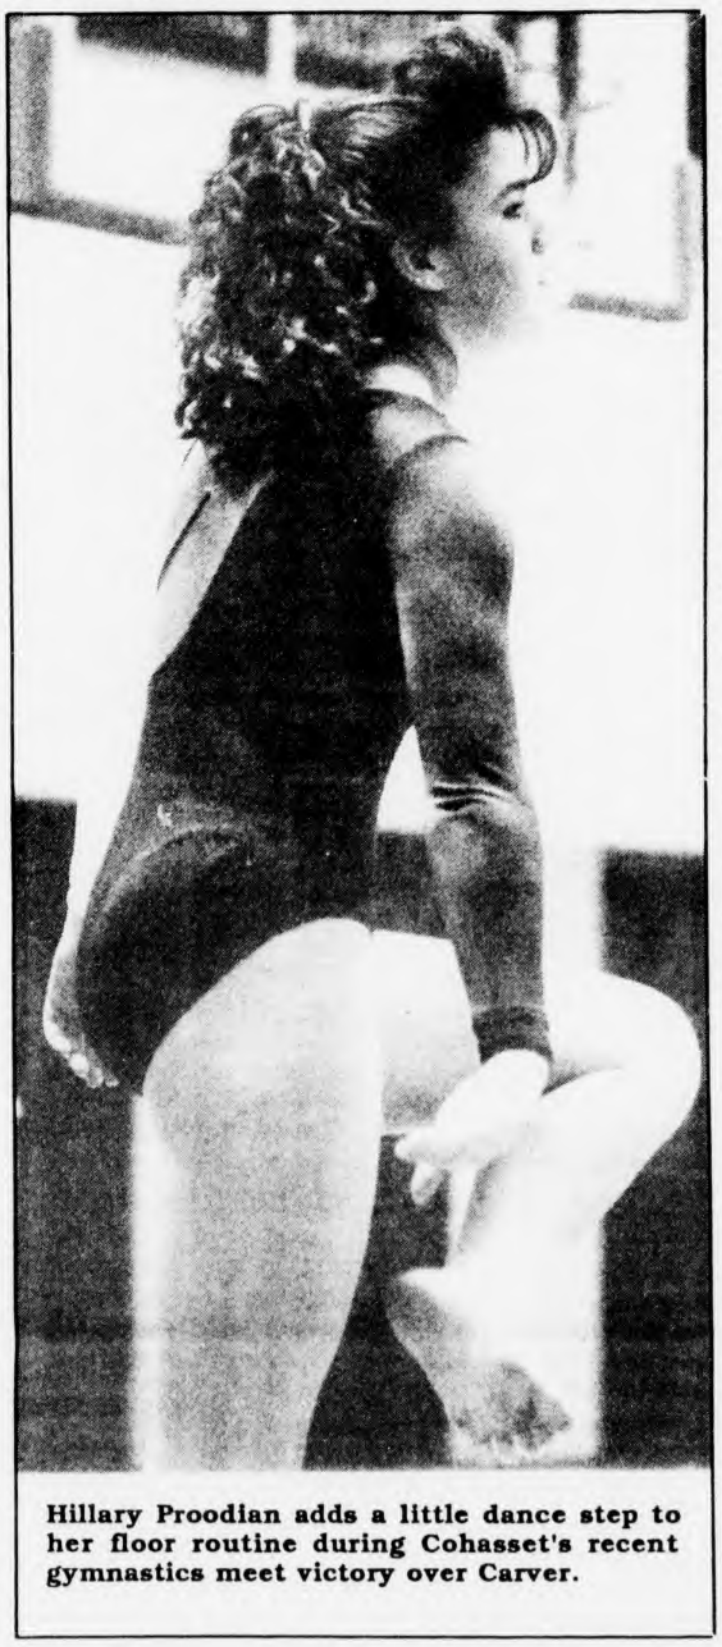
But in the end, all the noise that Abington could muster did not pay off. The Skippers walked away with a win.

This win was badly needed by this team that hit their "low peak" earlier last week when they lost to East Bridgewater, 40-25; Norwell, 42-30 and then went down to a difficult defeat against Hull last Tuesday by a score of 63-19.

The Hull game was the pits for the girls of Cohasset. They shot 25 percent from the foul line, compared to Hull's 76 percent. The Hull team hit 25 percent from the floor, while Cohasset scored eight percent of their shots.

"We put up 41 shots from the floor and only eight fell in," Bostwick recalled with great pain. "We were very cold. But Hull, on the other hand - whatever they put up went in."

The girls were outpsyched by the strong Hull team, she said. They were frustrated by their mental errors and their flat shooting. Nothing went right that night, Bostwick recalled. Even the bus was late, as Bostwick ended up driving game officials to Hull and parents drove the junior varsity team to their destination.



"Despite their frustration, the girls never yelled at each other. They knew they were having an off night, and they accepted it," she said.

On a positive note, it was a strong night for the defense, as they gathered a record number of rebounds against Hull. In addition, the second string players saw some action and Bostwick was duly impressed with their performance.

But the crowning jewel of their season thus far was Friday night's victory of Abington.

Sue Cashman, the league's second leading scorer, was held to 11 points by Cohasset. She scored only two points in the final quarter - with credit going to the "unbelievable" defense put together by the Skippers.

Cohasset made a few changes to their game play in preparation for the Abington game. Coach Bostwick put Tonya Peterson in as point guard and Barb Lagrotteria was moved to off guard. The team's sixth player, Moe Long, was moved in as center. Heather Bass slid in as down low person, with Kay Long helping her out. Forward wings for this game were Kerri Murphy and Allison Ludlow.

Hillary Proodian adds a little dance step to her floor routine during Cohasset's recent gymnastics meet victory over Carver.

The bench was terrific, according to their coach. Kathleen Conroy, Jenn Knowles, Bridget Corkery and Bridget Leung did a great job supporting their team from the sidelines. "They were there the entire game, yelling for their teammates and helping them out. You need as much teamwork on the bench as you do on the court, and that's what these kids did last week," she said.

At the end of the first quarter, Cohasset was losing 7-11. But despite their tradition of scoring only two or four points in the second, the Skippers returned to the bench at halftime with 13 points on the scoreboard. The bad news was, Abington also scored 13 that quarter,and they still held the lead.

Bostwick told her players to think of the third quarter as the start of a new ballgame. At one point, they were down by seven and the players were feeling the pressure.

That's when junior varsity coach Dan Magner stepped in. According to Bostwick, Magner is better at pumping up the players. "I think I get too involved in the games," she said. "Dan does a great job working with me to get the most out of the players."

That quarter, Cohasset scored seven points. Once again, the bad news was that Abington scored nine.

By the fourth quarter, the Abington crowd was going wild. Two prime players, Lagrotteria and Bass, were sitting out with four fouls each. Peterson had tight control over the Cashman scoring machine.

Abington was starting to foul Cohasset players as the Skippers pressed their man-to-man defense.

Key hoops of the night, according to Bostwick, were two shots from Terry Murphy. Although she was ice cold in the previous three games, Murphy scored four, including a wing shot that brought Cohasset to within two points of Abington.

Center Moe Long grabbed the ball and was fouled late in that quarter. She went one for two at the foul line. Murphy got a hold of the ball, and proceeded to hit a back shot about three feet from the foul line. It gave Cohasset the lead by one with about 20 seconds left in the game.

Cohasset was pressing as Abington passed the ball. It was intercepted by Lagrotteria who dribbled out of bounds with about ten seconds remaining. Cashman got the ball and shot an airball from three-pointer territory.

Peterson grabbed the rebound, while Moe Long was fouled. The coach sent her up to the foul line alone where she hit on her first shot. Cohasset was now up by two points.

Abington grabbed the rebound and brought the ball up court. With one second left they asked for a time out. They brought three players up to the three-point line. An Abington player went for it, but came up short.

Chiropractic for Health

CURRENT TOPICS
Electrical charges and currents are woven into the very fabric of life. It stands to reason, then, that an applied electrical charge can have a potentially beneficial effect on the human body. This has been known since the ancient Romans applied electrical eels to arthritic joints for the treatment of pain. Today, of course, electrical therapies are infinitely more sophisticated. For instance, transcutaneous electrical stimulation (TENS) involves the application of a mild electric current via electrodes to the skin. By stimulating acupressure points with electricity, the body's own painkillers are released to fight chronic pain. Another treatment employs the use of an acuscope to deliver minute electrical current to injured tissue. This application encourages the cells to increase their energy and healing capabilities.
The body has a tremendous resource of its own...a natural approach to addressing discomfort and ills. Chiropractic offers an approach that provides for such natural healing instructions to flow freely to all parts of the body so that a natural healing process can take place. Let SCITUATE HARBOR CHIROPRACTIC open up a natural road to addressing your needs for a healthy and comfortable lifestyle. Located at 80 Front St., Scituate Harbor. Tel. 545-7388. By appt. CHS sports scene...

Peterson got the rebound and protected it in a stomach clench as the buzzer sounded. "We were hugging each other and screaming - it was just like a championship game," Bostwick said.

"The girls improved so much over the last couple of weeks. This game was a real plus for us. Even if we had lost, I think we would have been excited. They played so well - it was awesome."

Their record this season stands at 4-6. Cohasset was scheduled to play against Norton at home on Tuesday, and against Hanover on Friday night.

Bostwick noted that the junior varsity players have been performing well too. Against Abington, the junior varsity girls scored in the double figures for the first time this season. Magner is extremely pleased with their play this season, particularly since his team is comprised of seventh and eighth graders who compete against ninth, tenth and 11th grade opponents.

Hockey coach Dennis Walsh is hoping that last week's scores are not indicative of a downward trend for his team.

"Things did not go well," he commented after the Skippers lost last Wednesday to Dennis/Yarmouth and again to a strong Randolph team last Saturday night.

The Dennis-Yarmouth match-up was simply a bad game, the coach lamented. Cohasset struggled throughout as they lost to the Cape Cod team, 9-1. The only positive statements that could be made by Coach Walsh was that Joel Reidy was good in goal for the Skippers. And eighth grader Tim Conroy played a strong defensive game.

Prospects appeared better for Cohasset when they faced off against Randolph last week. The Skippers knew they were in for a tough game against the fourth-rated team in the division.

By the end of the second period, Cohasset was down, 4-0. Things didn't bode well as center Chuckie Smith left the game after the first period with a separated shoulder. Joel Whitman followed in the second period with a slightly less serious shoulder injury.

"Because of the injuries, we were forced to play our younger, less experienced players," Walsh said.

The real problem for Cohasset this year, he said, is that many players are inexperienced and very, very young. In many cases, Cohasset's seventh and eighth grade students are playing against juniors and seniors from other schools.

The game was closer than the final score of 7-0 indicated, Walsh said. Once again, Reidy was great in goal and Conroy was credited with a strong game. Kevin Mulcahy was effective, despite being moved from defense to center.

Because of the injuries, Walsh brought in his "young line" consisting of ninth grader Mike Reynolds, eighth grader Chuck Enders, and sophomore John Murphy.

At the end of the first period, Randolph held a small 1-0 lead. "We were playing them closely but the injuries were a serious factor. It took its toll and we began to fall apart," Coach Walsh said.

Despite last week's two losses, Walsh said his players are not despondent. "They understand they're young. And I keep telling them - you're getting your experience now. Wait a year or two and you guys will be the experienced team," he said.

This week, Cohasset faces Rockland on Saturday night.

Boys' Basketball

Coach Arnie Reppucci endured a similar week, as the Skippers were defeated by two strong division teams.

Despite their losses, they were close games, according to Reppucci. Cohasset played a very tough Hull team, and lost the decision by a 72-68 margin. Reppucci said he was "very pleased" with Cohasset's play, "considering the talented team Hull has - we played a good game overall."

Cohasset almost grabbed the win when they tied the game with one minute and twenty seconds remaining. But once again, the coach explained, it was the lack of mental discipline that hurt the team.

"It betrayed us once again," he said. "We need to do the things we have to do - even if it's not the easiest thing to do." In the Hull game, for instance, with the score tied, Cohasset gained possession of the ball. What they should have done is called for a time out, hold onto the ball for a minute, and with twenty seconds left, try for a shot. Instead, the players dribbled away the ball to Hull, and eventually became the game-winning shot.

Despite their shortcomings, Reppucci said the team played a great game. "Their intensity was sky high," he said, noting that Cohasset teams rarely have trouble psyching themselves for any match against Hull.

Linc Marsac had an incredible game with 24 points and 12 rebounds. Mike Ellinger scored 14 points with 10 rebounds. Noah Hill sunk nine baskets with ten rebounds, while Tad Kasperowicz scored eight points for the local team.

"I was optimistic that we could win this one. Now if we had only played the same type of game against Abington . . ."

Ah, Abington. It seemed the Skippers could do no right against this team last Friday night. The final score reflected the horror of it all as Cohasset went down to defeat, 48-41.

"That 41 points is quite a difference from the 68 we scored against Hull," Reppucci said. "It shows me we change personality depending on which team we play. We are not a consistent team yet - and that is extremely important."

Abington managed to trap and press the Skippers, but in the end, Reppucci said it is their inexperience that let them down. Tri-captain Marsac grabbed 23 points against Abington, despite an intense defense surrounding him throughout the night.

Hill scored 13 points, with six rebounds. The team was without the usual double-digit scoring of tri-captain Ellinger. He was out of action Friday night with an injury.

Reppucci predicted this would be an interesting week for the varsity team. They begin the season's second-half with a game against Norton on Tuesday. The Skippers will see action at home against league-leading Hanover High School on Friday night.

"Based on what I've been seeing, I'm looking for a strong second half. We'll also have some opportunity to see what the younger players can do," Reppucci said.

Despite their off-week, Coach Reppucci believes the team is attaining its season goal of competitive play. "Now all we have to do is to get some W's and we'll be all set," he said.

Gymnastics

The girls from Cohasset High are on a hot streak, and it appears nothing is going to stop them.

The gymnastics team has scored three wins in a row, and the chance to make it to the state divisional competition looks better than ever.

Cohasset won over Carver High on Jan. 18 by a slim 109.05 to 106.6 score. Coach Ruth Ann Sargent said the score does not nearly reflect Cohasset's domination of the match. Unfair scoring was her complaint, which was a similar phrase sounded by other officials at that match.

Despite the scoring, Cohasset gymnasts performed solidly, according to Sargent. In the Uneven bar competiton, Michelle Hartley came in first among her teammates. Tara Gallagher was second and Liz Buckley scored third. In the Balance Beam, Hartley was first, Buckley was second and eighth grader Marnie DiMichele came in third. Sargent labeled her a promising gymnast for the future.

In Vaulting, Hartley again gained first place, with freshman Gallagher in second, and Buckley in third place. Buckley, a senior tri-captain in 1990, has come a long way in the vaulting competition, according to her coach.

In Floor Exercise, Hartley was first, Gallagher was second, and Melissa Rousseau, "a lovely dancer," according to Sargent, finished third among her teammates.

Hartley was named first in the all-around competition. The senior tri-captain is undefeated this season.

"Even though the score was close, we really had a super night," Sargent stated.

Monday night, Cohasset won decisively against Duxbury, a team which defeated them in their first meet of the season. The final score was Cohasset, 114.9 and Duxbury, 112.3.

Based on those results, Cohasset now retains sole possession of second place in the South Shore League.

In the Uneven Bar competition, Hartley scored first, Gallagher finished second and Buckley came in third; in the Balance Beam, Hartley finished first, Gallagher was second and Buckley scored a personal best in an outstanding routine.

In Vaulting, Hartley once again finished in first, with Gallagher in second and Buckley rounding out the trio. In Floor Exercise, Hartley was first, Gallagher was second, and Rousseau finished third among her teammates.

Once again, Hartley took first place in the all-around, with Gallagher finishing second. Hartley also won the meet with a final score of 33.60.

Tuesday night, the girls rounded out a very successful week with a win over Hanover High. The final score was 114.95 for Cohasset - a season high, with 106.65 for Hanover.

In Uneven Bars, Nicole Haefner scored a personal best against Hanover. In that competition, Hartley finished in first, with Gallagher in second and senior tri-captain Carrie Ripley in third place. On the Balance Beam, Hartley came in first, Gallagher was second, and Ripley continued a very good meet with third place.

In Vaulting, Hartley finished first, Buckley and Gallagher tied for second among the Cohasset competitors, and the only male on the team, Justin Muir, finished third.

In Floor Exercise, Hartley finished with a personal best for the season, in first place, with Gallagher in second and Buckley taking third place.

Other terrific performances throughout the week were credited to: Laura Andrews, Lisa Coates, Hillary Proodian, Corey DeSantis, Amy Mitchell and Courtney Schultz.

Their next meet will be a tough one on Monday, Jan. 29 against Norwell (4-2) at home. The match begins at 7 p.m.

School news

Osgood weekly news notes

Kindergarten registration continues — Kindergarten registration will continue daily from 10 to 2 daily. Children who will be 5 years of age on or before December 31, 1990 are eligible to attend Kindergarten in September 1990. A birth certificate must be presented at time of registration if not on file in the Cohasset Town Hall.

Reminder — Kindergarten changeover will occur on Monday, January 29, 1990. Morning Kindergarteners will be assigned to the afternoon session while current afternoon assignees will become morning kindergarteners. Morning Kindergarten hours are from 8:55 a.m. to 11:30 a.m. while the afternoon session meets from 12:15 p.m. to 2:55 p.m.

Computer classes — for volunteer parents will be held at the Osgood School Resource Room. Classes will be held from 3 to 4 p.m. on January 31. If interested please leave your name and telephone number at the office and Robin Balch will return your call to make a reservation.

School budget meetings

School committee budget discussions continue Monday, Jan. 29 at 8 p.m. in the high school home economics room. The PSO urges you to attend.

The great T.V. turn-off week

Cohasset PSO urges families to join several South Shore communities in supporting and promoting an exciting week-long "experiment" during which parents and kids will be accepting the challenge of not watching T.V. or timing the amount of T.V. watched for seven days, Feb. 5-11.

This is not an anti-T.V. campaign but rather an exercise in self-discovery. How much or what T.V. viewing is "right" for anyone is understood to be a private decision. Why not reevaluate our T.V. viewing — How much is quality viewing? Let's re-discover the "lost treasures" within ourselves and re-discover each other! Read a book, listen to music, have more family discussions, try out a new craft. Don't miss out on being a part of this special event!

Dudley Bryan has won the highest honor at the Boston Globe Scholastic Art Awards Show — a Gold Key, for his self portrait drawing.

Congratulations Dudley!

Kindergarten changeover

Kindergarten changeover will ocur Monday, Jan. 29. Morning Kindergarteners will be assigned to the afternoon session while current afternoon assignees will become morning kindergarteners. Morning Kindergarten hours are from 8:55 a.m. to 11:30 a.m. while the afternoon session meets from 12:15 p.m. to 2:55 p.m.

Volunteer training classes

Computer classes for volunteer parents will be held at the Osgood School Resource Room. Classes will be held from 3 to 4 p.m. on Wednesdays, Jan. 24 and Jan. 31. If interested please leave your name and telephone number at the office and Robin Balch will return your call to make a reservation.

Reminder to parents

When driving your children to school, you are asked to leave them at the main entrance of the school NO EARLIER THAN 8:45 a.m. Please note that walkers should also plan to arrive at school no earlier than 8:45 a.m.

Children should enter the building and wait in the main hall until the 8:55 a.m. bell rings before going to class. Thank you for your cooperation.

Afterschool program

The Cohasset Afterschool Program is in full swing and is now accepting registrations for the second half of the year. The program is for children in grades K-6 and is held at the Joseph Osgood School. The program runs from the end of the school day until 6 p.m. every school day. Activities include: bowling, trips to the library, cooking projects, art projects, organized games and more. Children may attend one to five days a week. If you have any questions, stop by and speak to Melissa Walker, the Afterschool Director or call Marnie Carter at 383-6104 to register.

"A Day With An Educator"

The Faculty Senate of Cohasset High School has invited citizens of Cohasset to participate in the "A Day with an Educator" program, which will take place throughout the month of February. Instead of basing their opinions upon the highly generalized accounts in Boston newspapers and the even more highly generalized articles in national magazines, the citizens of Cohasset will be afforded the opportunity to view the specifics of education at Cohasset High School.

The Faculty Senate feels there is no better way to gain a clear understanding of what CHS education at the beginning of a new decade is all about than to experience the school environment first-hand.

The program will allow individuals from the community to experience an entire school day with a member of the CHS staff.

Jeffrey Garbers looks a little bashful about having a bear attached to his shirt during the Big Bear Bash at Osgood School last week. Peeking in is Jeff's pal David Kruger.

Those citizens spending a "A Day with an Educator" will choose the discipline or area in which they wish to participate; however, because of scheduling problems, they will not be able to choose a specific staff member to visit. This will be done via a lottery system. All visits will take place during the month of February.

For more information about this program consult the newsletter being sent to all citizens or call the high school at 383-6100.

African masks Feb. 1 - 16

PSO Curriculum enrichment will be presenting a unit on "African Mask Making" at the Osgood School February 1-16. Resources have been borrowed from the Childrens Museum, Afro-American Museum and the Paul Pratt Library. Each student will create their own mask. Completed masks will be on display at the Osgood and Paul Pratt Library. Resource information will be placed on a "cultural table" to be set up at the entrance of the Osgood School.

PSO to host pizza party

Beth Christoffel and Sarah Pease, PSO Jr. High Representatives, have been busy organizing the long-awaited pizza party for the seventh and eighth grade classes. The party will take place right after school on Friday, February 2. Special arrangements have been made to provide a late bus for the partygoers.

CHs poster contest

During the month of December, 1989, the Foreign Language Department at CHS sponsored a poster contest. The purpose of the contest was to increase student awareness of the importance of foreign languages. The theme chosen (Grow With Foreign Languages)was the same as that of the state-wide contest sponsored by the Massachusetts Foreign Language Teachers Association. Of the entries that were received, the members of the Foreign Language Department chose two as prize winners that best exemplified the spirit of the contest and the theme involved.

Gift certificates to Tower Records, donated by the PSO, were awarded to Ray Jones (1st prize) and Joe Andrade (2nd prize). Congratulations to both students for a job well done.

Weber Dodge

DRIVEN BY PRIDE

Dear Chrysler Product Owner,

Weber Dodge is now open on Route 3A in Hingham. And I have a lot to offer!

EXPERIENCE.

You know my name. I've been in the car business for over 25 years. And now I'm bringing my trusted knowledge and proven leadership to Weber Dodge.

RESPECT.

At Weber Dodge, I'll stick to the belief that quality cars sell themselves. You'll see it in our friendly, honest, and helpful people. All are here to provide information, and answer your questions. To make buying a car a pleasure, not a chore.

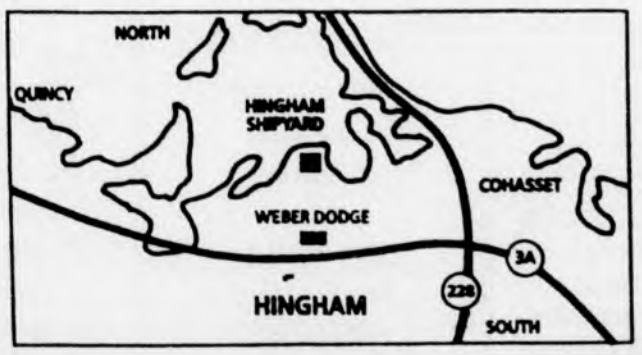
SERVICE.

Quality car care is the cornerstone of every successful dealership. That's why our factory-trained mechanics will work hard to provide the best service possible. And we'll perform factory warranty work on all Dodge cars and trucks, and Chrysler and Plymouth cars. We have a full inventory of Chrysler parts, and top-notch service representatives.

SELECTION.

Choose from our wide selection of new and used Dodge cars and trucks. With factory rebates and dealer incentives, we can get you into a new Dodge for less. We also offer money-saving lease programs on new cars and trucks.

A SPECIAL OFFER.



Stop by to meet us and look over our selection.

While you're here, we'll give you an oil and filter change (on Dodge and Chrysler products) for only $5. Just bring in this ad before February 28, 1990.

Call (617) 749-4550 for an appointment. We'll show you a lot of what makes Weber Dodge the best place to buy your next car.

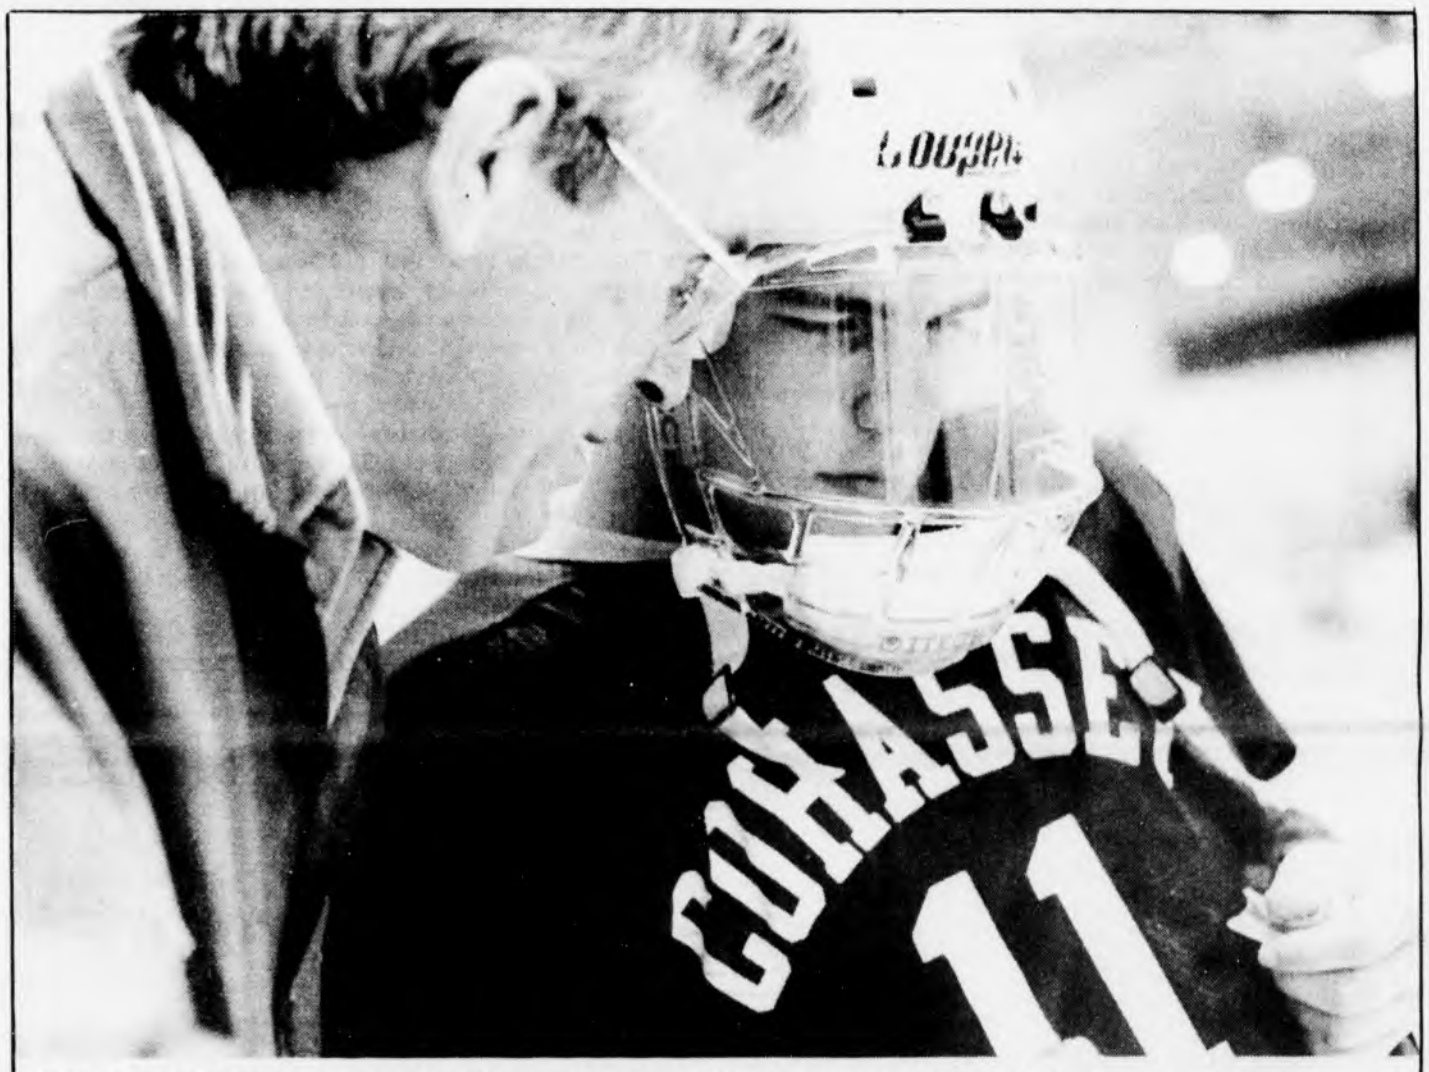
School board seeks support for budget hike

● Override necessary



At their meeting Jan. 29, the school committee settled on a tentative bottom line they can live with. Now they hope taxpayers will be willing to vote for the override necessary to support a $5.6 million budget.

Although the budget represents a 5.5 percent increase over the current year, it can't really be called a growth budget according to Chairman Barbara Bliss.

"Other than the athletic programs, everything is something previously cut," she said.

Before the committee settled on the budget figure,

Kathryn Morgan sat front-and-center at the school committee meeting and billed herself as "the witch at the christening tonight".

Holding up a copy of the first issue of the school committee's newsletter, the Bow St. resident pronounced herself enraged that the committee would spend taxpayers' dollars on a "glossy attempt . . .to get more money from people in town."

Morgan made it clear that she had no objection to the newsletter itself, her objection was to the fact that taxpayers were footing the $1300 bill for printing and mailing it to the residents of Cohasset.

She suggested that advertisements could have been sold to defray the costs of the newsletter.

Committee members defended the newsletter as an essential way of providing information about the programs and needs of the school system to all the residents of Cohasset. Approximately 75 percent of the residents do not have children enrolled in the schools.

"We need to communicate more clearly with the community so they can make more-informed decisions about the resources they want to invest and whether those resources are being used wisely," said member Ralph Kidder.

Supt. Stephen Hart told Morgan that the newsletter was produced by volunteers. According to Hart, the "glossy" look was free. It would have cost the same for a mimeographed newsletter, he said.

Chairman Barbara Bliss told Morgan that all future editions of the quarterly newsletter would be underwritten by contributions. She also said there was a possible source of funding for this issue as well.

Bliss told Morgan that she had gotten feedback from other residents with no children in the system who were pleased with the mailing.

"I hope there are more of them out there than there are of you," she said.

Morgan left the meeting unmollified.

"The cost should not come from taxpayers dollars," she stated. "The $1,300 would probably send the entire art department on one or two field trips. You could fund the basketball for that."

Advisors wonder whether town land can be sold

By Alison Cohen
Mariner staff

The advisory committee is making a list and checking it twice, but still can't come up with any substantial budget cuts.

One possible area for savings is the town buildings account, specifically the rental duplex on Government Island.

Both apartments are currently rented for $600 a month. The advisory committee thinks the revenue is not worth the expense and headaches of maintaining the building.

Committee members questioned the high water use and the maintenance requirements. A ballpark figure of $50,000 was floated for making all necessary repairs.

"I'm against spending any money on those buildings," said Arne Gjesteby. He suggested that no money be allocated for repairs in order to force the selectmen to consider divesting the town of this burden.

The town doesn't even get to count the apartments as affordable units for its troubles in maintaining them.

According to Executive Secretary Gregory Doyon, the apartments do not qualify as affordable units because they are not rented through one of the housing subsidy or certificate programs. Doyon believes that the building probably would not pass the federal and state housing code inspection necessary to participate in the rental subsidy programs.

Although getting out of the landlord business might make financial sense for the town, the town is not likely to see an end to its responsibility for the structure.

According to David Wadsworth, a researcher for the local historical commission and member of the historical society, the house is one of the most historical buildings in Cohasset and is a possible candidate for inclusion in the National Register.

The house was built in the mid-1850s as a duplex residence for the lighthouse keepers. There was a second duplex on the four acre reservation that the town demolished in 1970, according to Wadworth's recollection.

Wadsworth said the local historical groups and the state would take an active interest in the fate of the building.

At their meeting Monday night, Selectman Rocco Laugelle said he would fight to keep town ownership of the coastal property.

"Government Island will never be sold," he vowed.

Much interest in vacant town building

By Jane Lane
Mariner staff

It's been nearly a year since the town vacated its first floor offices at the Bates Building on Elm Street.

Suddenly, it seems a lot of other people are interested in the building across the street from the police and fire station.

The Chamber of Commerce would like to use the second floor for its monthly meetings. The Rotary Club now uses the building regularly for its weekly meetings. The Cohasset Veterans of Foreign Wars Post thinks the Bates Building would be the perfect site for its monthly membership sessions. The Council on Aging says the Bates Building could be used for classes when the rooms at the senior center are occupied. And the local Clergy Council has endorsed an idea to renovate the structure into affordable housing units.

Selectmen think there's merit in each request, and they're wondering if a combined use is possible - accommodating the civic organizations with the town's affordable housing needs.

Right now, the building's rear office is used by the sewer department which operates the treatment plant in the backyard of the property. The Rotary Club pays for electrical and gas expenses, and the sewer department assumes the heating and half the electric bill.

Chamber of Commerce President Donald Staszko told selectmen Monday night that they would like to hold their monthly Wednesday night meetings in

Developers may want land

When the attorney general put the kibosh on developing the old Curtis estate as an Alzheimer's care center, the way was opened for trustees to put the property on the market. The local housing partnership hopes that a developer with vision will come up with plans that include some units of affordable housing.

"We want to make sure developers are aware that the community is prepared to work with a developer if they include affordable housing units," said Chartis Langmaid of the housing partnership.

Langmaid said questions remain about the developability of the property. The main problem centers around the ability of the land to accomodate an adequate septic system.

"There is not much potential for normal development, but the community is willing to look at creative and innovative solutions," she said.

"This property has the potential for positive development for the town."

Is highway overstaffed?

The highway department sent the advisory committee a budget with cuts in most line items. The advisory committee responded to the good news by raising the possibility that the department may be overstaffed.

"If everything is down, do we need the same number of people?," asked Arne Gjesteby.

Much of the reduction was caused by a decrease in state funds for road surfacing in fiscal 1991. The committee plans to ask highway Supt. Harold Litchfield if he will have excess manpower if neither the state or the town provides an additional $75,000 for resurfacing projects.

The committee also plans to explore the possibility of shifting the duties of the part-time secretary to another department.

Although the committee thinks they may be able to shave expenses from the highway department's fiscal 1991 budget, Mother Nature forced them to give Litchfield permission to run a deficit in his budget for snow removal and sanding. Selectmen had previously approved the cost overrun.

Litchfield told the committee that he sands when called out by the police, but he is responsible for snowplowing decisions. Litchfield reminded the committee that spending is at the whim of nature.

"Last year I gave you back $7,000," he said.

According to Litchfield, the Jan. 21 snowstorm cost $8,000 in plowing and sanding costs. Less than $2,000 remains in the budget for all remaining ice and snowstorm clean-ups in the winter of '90.

"We trust you with a blank check," chairman Ray Kasperowicz told Litchfield, "but we don't trust Mother Nature."

Litchfield told the committee he would provide them with a running tally of costs for snow and ice removal.

Recreation comes to defense

The advisory committee toyed with the future of the recreation department, but opted to wait for more information before making a decision.

The Community Center of Cohasset kicked off the debate by sending a letter to the advisory committee raising the possibility of the center helping the town avoid Proposition 2 1/2 headaches by absorbing the activities currently provided by the recreation commission.

Representatives from the center attended the Jan. 25 meeting of the advisory committee. They said they were not suggesting the town subsidize the center in place of the commission. They felt they could offer the services based on user fees.

According to the recreation commission, if the town is looking for areas to save money, this is not the department to do it in.

According to recreation director John Worley, the commission generates considerable revenue.

"The bottom line cost is so very little," Worley said. "We are giving back more than we've spent."

Richard Barrow, Chairman of the recreation commission, also said that the community center would not be able to take on all the functions that the commisssion provides.

"Too much is going to be lost," he said. "We maintain skating areas, basketball courts, and other recreation facilities around town."

The stability of the center has also been called into question.

The recreation commission was created in 1978 when it appeared that the center was about to go out of business. The center recovered from those lean times and has expanded its services and its building.

"To me, they're like the stock market. They're up and down," said Barrow. "They're having a good year, but golly knows what next year is going to bring."

All parties are asking to see detailed budget sheets to see who can offer the most comprehensive recreation program at the lowest cost.

"If you have a department that is making money, there's no reason to change," said Arne Gjesteby of the advisory committee.

"Trust, but verify," he added.

Clarification

Because of some incomplete information given to the Cohasset Mariner two weeks ago, there may have been some misunderstandings on the article we wrote concerning the tax title windfall Cohasset received.

The article reported on a property redemption agreement recently approved by the land court. Under the agreement, Cohasset will be paid $3,800 a month until the entire tax liability of $115,000 plus interest is paid in full.

The property is owned by Creditors Trust of Idak, Inc., a company that unsuccessfully sought to build a nursing home on the Turkey Hill parcel that had previously been a Nike missile site. The redemption payments are being made by a third party.

Creditors Trust of Idak, Inc. is in no way associated with the corporation which operates the Cohasset Knoll Nursing Home.

Committee supports growth budget they spent a long time considering ways to cut, consolidate, and otherwise reduce the budget. They had hoped to find some savings in the line item for department chairmen. It was not fated to be.

The committee had hoped that some of their functions could be assumed by Supt. Stephen Hart. After reviewing the responsibilities carried by the chairmen, it was clear that any reduction in staff would make it impossible to attain the goals set by the school committee.

"Look at this list," said committee member Ralph Kidder. "There's not a whole lot we can do. We have to let Steve go home some times."

Paul Narkiewicz, chairman of the foreign language department, explained that staff cuts in his department would make it virtually impossible to maintain current offerings and add a foreign language option for seventh graders.

Committe members still hope that there is some room in the schedule for seventh graders. They asked Narkiewicz to work up a plan that includes the seventh graders.

"We want to see what the schedule looks like with the seventh grade program," said Kidder. "We want to see what happens at the other end or in the middle."

The committee also reviewed a wide-ranging list of possible cuts if the budget was calculated on a level-funded, level-service or modest growth rate. In the end, the elected to settle on a budget and worry about the final budget allocations later.

The committee was unanimously agreed that a level-funded budget was completely unrealistic.

"At some point we have to draw the line," said Hart.

The line was drawn at a level that allows the program to "tread water" in committee member Nancy Sandell's words.

"This budget includes no new programs," stressed Bliss. "It replaces things we cut out last year. Every year it gets tighter and tighter."

The next step in the budget is a public hearing scheduled for Feb. 8. After reviewing public comment, the board will vote on a final budget to be presented to the advisory committee.

Astronomy tour

Wompatuck State Park interpreter will lead an astronomical tour on Wednesday, Feb. 14 from 7:30 to 9 p.m. at the visitors' center.

Clear skies will reveal the Crab Nebula first seen in 1056 AD. The winter skies are moving westward. This may be one of the last views of Orion and Pleiades this year. If it is cloudy the program will take place indoors. Dress warmly and bring your scopes or binoculars. This program is sponsored by the Department of Environmental Management - Division of Forests and Parks.

Wompatuck State Park is located off Route 228 in Hingham.

WARNING:

WINTER MAY BE HAZARDOUS TO YOUR CAR.

The facts are hard and cold.

Many motor oils just don't perform in winter weather. And that can lead to friction. Extreme engine wear. Or even extensive damage, or a breakdown that leaves you and your family stranded.

That's why it's so important to take your car or truck to Jiffy Lube now for our famous 14-Point, 10-Minute Oil Change. We'll ensure that your oil is the right weight for your car and the weather. And we'll install a new FRAM or Purolator oil filter, check and fill six essential fluids, lube the chassis, and much more.

Be sure to protect your car and your wallet against cold-weather calamities — by visiting Jiffy Lube today.

Suddenly there's interest in Bates building the second floor of the building. The local veterans' post, which frequently uses the George Mealey American Legion Post for its monthly Tuesday night meetings, would be willing to share the Bates Building, according to Post President Ralph Peroncello.

Tony Finegan said the Council on Aging does not want the building to be transferred to their jurisdiction. But they would like to use the property occasionally when there is a space problem at the community center.

The local Rotary Club, which has held its weekly meetings there for several years and has renovated the interior of the building, would be willing to share use of the property, according to member Wayne Sawchuk.

"We would feel very pleased to share it with someone, but we are not in the position to take over the financial responsibility," he said.

Earlier Monday night, selectmen heard a preliminary request from Barbara Power, representing a committee of local clergymen. They have suggested converting the building into at least one affordable housing unit. There has not been a lot of research done on the proposal, she explained, since the council does not yet have any endorsement by the town.

The only stumbling block, selectmen warned, is that the site is restricted to a 200-gallon per day water flow. That would preclude a multi-family housing site, they said, but it is possible that at least one unit could be included in the overall scheme.

Adding together the evenings the second floor meeting room would be occupied, Selectman Diana Kornet suggested it would "leave a lot of hours when the whole building will not be used. We might be able to have an affordable housing unit in the other portion of the building not used by these organizations."

Selectman Burt Pratt tended to favor an organizational use of the building. That way, he said, the building would remain under the town's control. Despite a promise made to the town that the Bates Building would be sold to the highest bidder, Pratt said a community use of the building is a more productive use.

Several people suggested the Rotary Club could coordinate the schedules of the various community groups using the building. The cost of renovations would be shared among the groups.

But Selectman Kornet said she would be "uncomfortable" with any decision to use the building without including a request to include affordable housing. "Could this be a potential roof over someone's head?" she asked.

Rotary member Sawchuk noted that any person living in the first floor of the building could also serve as a caretaker of the property. "There is merit to that proposal," he stated. "I think we could build something affordable."

Selectman Pratt disagreed. "I do not see that building accommodating both," he said.

Selectmen suggested the community organizations develop a schedule for a combined use of the building with each group dividing the expenses. In the meantime, the clergy council can work out a more detailed proposal to include affordable housing on the site.

Champions Day for youth basketball

Saturday, Feb. 3, has been designated as Champions Day for the Cohasset Basketball Recreation/ Boosters League.

All finals will be played Saturday, Feb. 3, either at the CHS downstairs gym, or at the Deer Hill School gym. The schedule and particulars are as follows: 9:45 a.m., 4/5 grade boys, CHS Main Gym; 11 a.m., 6/7 grade boys, CHS Main Gym; 12:15 p.m., 4/5 grade girls, CHS Main Gym; 1:30 p.m., 8/9 grade boys, CHS Main Gym; 2:45 p.m., 6-9 grade girls, CHS Main Gym; 9:45 a.m., 3rd grade clinic, Deer Hill Gym; 1:30 p.m., 1/2 grade clinic, Deer Hill Gym.

Trophies will be awarded to champions and runners-up immediately following each final in the CHS Main Gym.

Deer Hill finalists should report to the CHS Gym directly after their game for the awarding of trophies in front of the CHS crowd.

Consolation games for all other teams will be held that day and will not conflict with championship games. Check the schedule posted in each gym for times and locations of these games.

Concession stands will be open throughout all events.

All coaches should plan to turn in team basketballs at the concession stand following their last game.

Many thanks to the Cohasset Basketball Boosters Club for their superb efforts and expertise in this program. Special thanks should go to Mr. and Mrs. George Ellinger. In order for this program to succeed, many individuals have to donate their time and energy.

The Basketball Boosters Club are helping to reinforce good habits by helping to provide opportunity and exposure for our children. While it is difficult to measure the impact, common sense tells us that the effects are nothing but positive.

School Budget presentation

Thursday, Feb. 8 at 8 p.m., the school committee will present its proposed school budget for 1990/1991 at an open meeting to be held in the economics room. The P.S.O. urges all parents to attend if possible.

New options for Alzheimer's center

Not deterred by apparent defeat, the group which fought to build an Alzheimer's Care Center on the George Curtis estate, will now be looking for alternative sites.

The committee, which has been headed by Windy Hill resident Joseph McElroy for the past two years, will be reorganized. New members are welcomed to join the effort, he said, as they search for locations for an Alzheimer's center.

The citizens' action committee has been trying for two years to stop the trustees of the estate from selling the property for private development. The committee devised a plan to develop an Alzheimer's center on the property, a plan they thought would more closely adhere to the will of the late George Curtis who envisioned his land being used to care for the indigent and elderly.

But the attorney general in charge of public charities declared earlier this month that an Alzheimer's center, although in line with Curtis' will, is not a feasible solution because of financial and geographic restrictions. A final court trial will be scheduled in April between the trustees and the attorney general to decide how the proceeds from the sale of the property, along with $2 million in assets, can be used to further the intent of Curtis' will.

Atty. Richard Allen will support an alternative site for an Alzheimer's Care Center to be developed with the proceeds of Curtis' will.

Judge James Lawton has given his permission to the trustees to sell the property, although the $2 million in liquid assets has been placed in escrow.

In the meantime, the local action committee is down, but not out. Chairman McElroy, along with members William Weeks, Jo-Ann Mitchell of the Alzheimer's Support Group of the South Shore, and Council on Aging president Gerard Keating, will begin to look for alternative site for a George Curtis Home.

According to McElroy, Allen would like the action committee to participate in finding an alternative site. Hopefully, he said, their findings would be completed by the mid-April trial.

They would like to keep the Curtis Home project in Cohasset, McElroy said, but they would look at alternative sites throughout the South Shore.

The action committee is in the midst of reorganizing, McElroy said. They will welcome new members to join their search for alternative site. There remains a critical need for an Alzheimer's center in this area, he said, so the committee will remain "glued to that focus," he said.

"It's almost as if your hands are untied now," Selectman Diana Kornet said in an effort to encourage the committee's new goal.

"Well if nothing else happens, at least we're signaling the attorney general's office that the town of Cohasset is concerned," McElroy answered. He noted that there are many energetic people in Cohasset who are willing to serve at no cost as Curtis estate trustees in order to fulfill the terms of the Curtis will.

Selectmen endorsed the committee's redefined direction, and noted that new members are welcome to join the group as they search for a new location for the Alzheimer's center.

Early release day Feb. 8

February 8, will be an early release day in the Cohasset Public Schools. There will be no afternoon kindergarten sessions and other students will be dismissed according to the following schedule:

SCHOOL	BUSES DEPART
Junior/Senior High School	12:00 p.m.
Deer Hill School	12:40 p.m.
Joseph Osgood School	12:50 p.m.

Lunch will be served in the Elementary Schools and food service will he available at the Junior/Senior High School.

This early release day has been approved by the Cohasset School Committee to allow the staff to review curriculum and to prepare for accreditation.

Candidates' corner

Goedecke names officials

Sam and Sarah Pease will serve as chairman and treasurer of the Committee to Elect Jane Goedecke. Goedecke is running for a seat on the board of selectmen.

According to Sarah, "We simply want quality government and believe she can add a great deal to our town's board of selectmen. A number of people have asked why she wants to run for selectman when she has done such a great job on the advisory committee. Jane wants to become active earlier in the process of formulating town policies. She very strongly believes that the leadership of Cohasset should come from the board of selectmen."

A series of neighborhood coffees and meetings is being coordinated for the candidate to meet with voters before the April 14 election. Persons interested in learning more about the candidate and her campaign should contact Sam or Sarah Pease.

Selectmen split on proposed fire budget

Selectmen did not approve the proposed fire department budget for next year, calling it a "budget by default."

Selectman Diana Kornet was the most outspoken opponent, saying the proposed $1,035,034 budget was unacceptable because it did not include probable salary hikes for next year, although it had already exceeded this year's appropriation by $21,000.

"This budget did not come in tight enough. All the departments have been instructed to level fund, and this is not," she said, noting that if negotiations with the department are not completed by July 1, this would be the budget of record. "And this budget is over target. It's a budget of default."

Selectman Burt Pratt noted that in their three budget reviews with the fire chief, they have concluded that an extra $21,000 is necessary because of the overtime account. This year that account will be overdrawn; therefore the chief supplemented next year's projections with a surplus of $21,000.

"This is a good compromise," Pratt said, noting they have revised these figures with the fire chief three times.

Kornet argued that by approving this budget for review by the advisory committee, it "gives them permission to operate on this basis. It would be to their benefit to drag out negotiations for three years if they can get a better budget."

"I think we've done very well to come up with a budget $21,000 over last year," Pratt responded.

But Kornet noted that this proposed budget does not include $20,000 to $30,000 which may be needed once contract negotiations are complete. She stated that selectmen should reserve the right to go back into the entire budget and approve it once the contracts are settled.

Most of the proposed town budgets are about two or three percent higher than this year's appropriations, according to Selectman Ned Tebbetts. But he was concerned with the proposed five percent hike in the fire department total, excluding any additional amounts for negotiated contracts.

The board voted against approving the budget before it is sent to the advisory committee for review.

Revised station plans

Maybe the third time will be the charm for the police and fire station renovation committee's plans.

They are sponsoring an article for the April 7 town meeting, which will request $396,000 for repairs to the station. This proposal, which totalled $714,000 when it was approved by town meeting last year and $1 million the previous year, does not include any addition to the station, according to study committee chairman David Chase. Although the previous two proposals were approved by town meeting, an override was rejected in the subsequent elections.

The study committee has since pared down the plans once again, according to Chase, and has eliminated the female firefighters' dormitory, and combined facilities within the station. There will be handicapped access into the station, along with separate changing quarters for female officers and firefighters, a new roof, insulation and repairs to the windows.

There is also an extra $50,000 in that total, he said, which would be used for new communications equipment and furnishings for the station.

"This has a chance of flying," Selectman Diana Kornet noted.

Officials to decide on more work hours

Selectmen delayed a decision whether to make the conservation commission's secretary a full-time town employee.

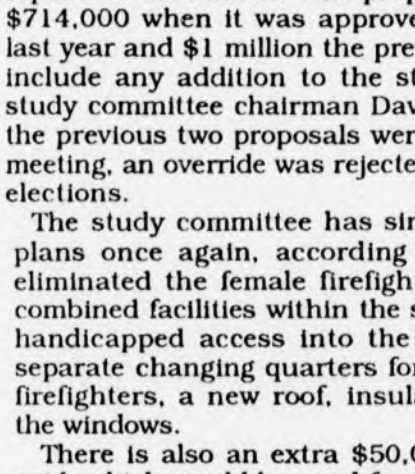
Selectman Ned Tebbetts noted that in the early 1980's the commission was allotted $284 for clerical services. That number increased annually until 1986 when the secretary's position was expanded to 20 hours.

"I'm concerned about doubling someone's hours," Tebbetts said, "when we are under tight fiscal constraints. This is not something the public wants to hear - the doubling of hours."

Commission chairman Jeff Waal noted that paperwork in that office has vastly increased because of the plethora of state and federal laws that now regulate the commission. The increased rules also expand the duties of the commission which now meets at least twice monthly. He also noted the commission cut $5,000 from its FY91 professional services account because the commission now charges applicants for all professional services, such as engineering.

Commission member Merle Brown noted that their secretary is one of the hardest-working employees at town hall. She frequently works 30 hours a week without full compensation. If she were to quit, he said, the commission would have to "close its doors" with a 20-hour employee.

Selectman Diana Kornet noted that although the commission's work has expanded, "I am not comfortable with waving a wand and doubling this," she said. She supported Tebbetts' suggestion to establish a flexible 35-or 40-hour work schedule for the secretary throughout the year, giving her more hours when the office duties are the heaviest.



"My suggestion is that we give it a whirl at 35 hours a week," Selectman Burt Pratt commented.

The matter was tabled for another week so selectmen can decide if a flexible work schedule is feasible.

Conservation project an award winner

By Rosie Dole
Cohasset Community Garden Club

For more than 30 years, striving to improve the quality of life of not only the individual member but also of this community, while protecting and conserving our natural resources, programs and activities have been designed with these goals in mind.

When years ago, Cohasset was faced with erosion on Sandy Beach, the Community Garden Club stepped in and planted Rosa rugosa and Beach Plum on the threatened sites.

For the past two years, our club has again been involved in a major conservation project, i.e. the establishment of two woodland trails on over fifty acres of town property between the Osgood and Deer Hill schools with teacher manuals for conducting science classes on those trails. For its efforts in "having provided the leadership and funding for this town-wide project" the Community Garden Club of Cohasset was awarded by the Garden Club Federation of Massachusetts the Mildred S. Parker Silver Bowl. Margaret Cotter and Debbie Cook are chairmen of this project.

Our club has endorsed the Mass. Endangered Species Bill which, if passed into law, will not only protect endangered animals and birds, but also plants; is supporting the aim of the Nature Conservancy to internationally preserve rare, threatened and endangered species and their habitats, as well as that of the New England Wildlife Center aiding their work in wildlife rehabilitation, research and education and holds contributing memberships in the Mass. Audubon Society and the New England Wildflower Association.

On the national level, the club supports the National Council of Garden Clubs in their World Gardening efforts and in particular with their Project Hugo — the replanting of trees in the Carolinas.

Monthly programs, such as "New England Birds of Prey," by Rick Horton of the N.E. Wildlife Center in Hingham, "A Vanishing Heritage" by New England Naturalist Mario DiGregorio and "Landscaping to Attract Wildlife" by Landscape Architect Barbara Devine are geared to educate the membership in these important issues. Barbara Christensen is program chairman. Two of our members are also serving on pertinent town committees: Pat Buckley is serving on the Conservation Board and Karen Kissane on the Recycling Committee

around town

❑ Edwin (Ted) Bennett has joined the Cohasset office of the Jack Conway Company as a sales associate.

Bennett is an avid cyclist and a member of Bike Centennial, League of American Wheelsmen and Rail to Trails. He was a former police officer in Needham. He has completed the fifteen-day intensive training course for new associates sponsored by the Jack Conway Company. He lives in Hull.

❑ Daniel J. and Christine A. Belz of Forest Avenue are the parents of a girl who was born January 3 in the South Shore Hospital.

❑ Anne Elizabeth Taylor, a senior at Washington and Lee University, has earned dean's list status for the recently ended fall term.

Dean's list status at Washington and Lee represents a term grade-average of at least 3.0 on a 4.33 scale.

She is the daughter of Mr. & Mrs. Willard S. Taylor of Cohasset.

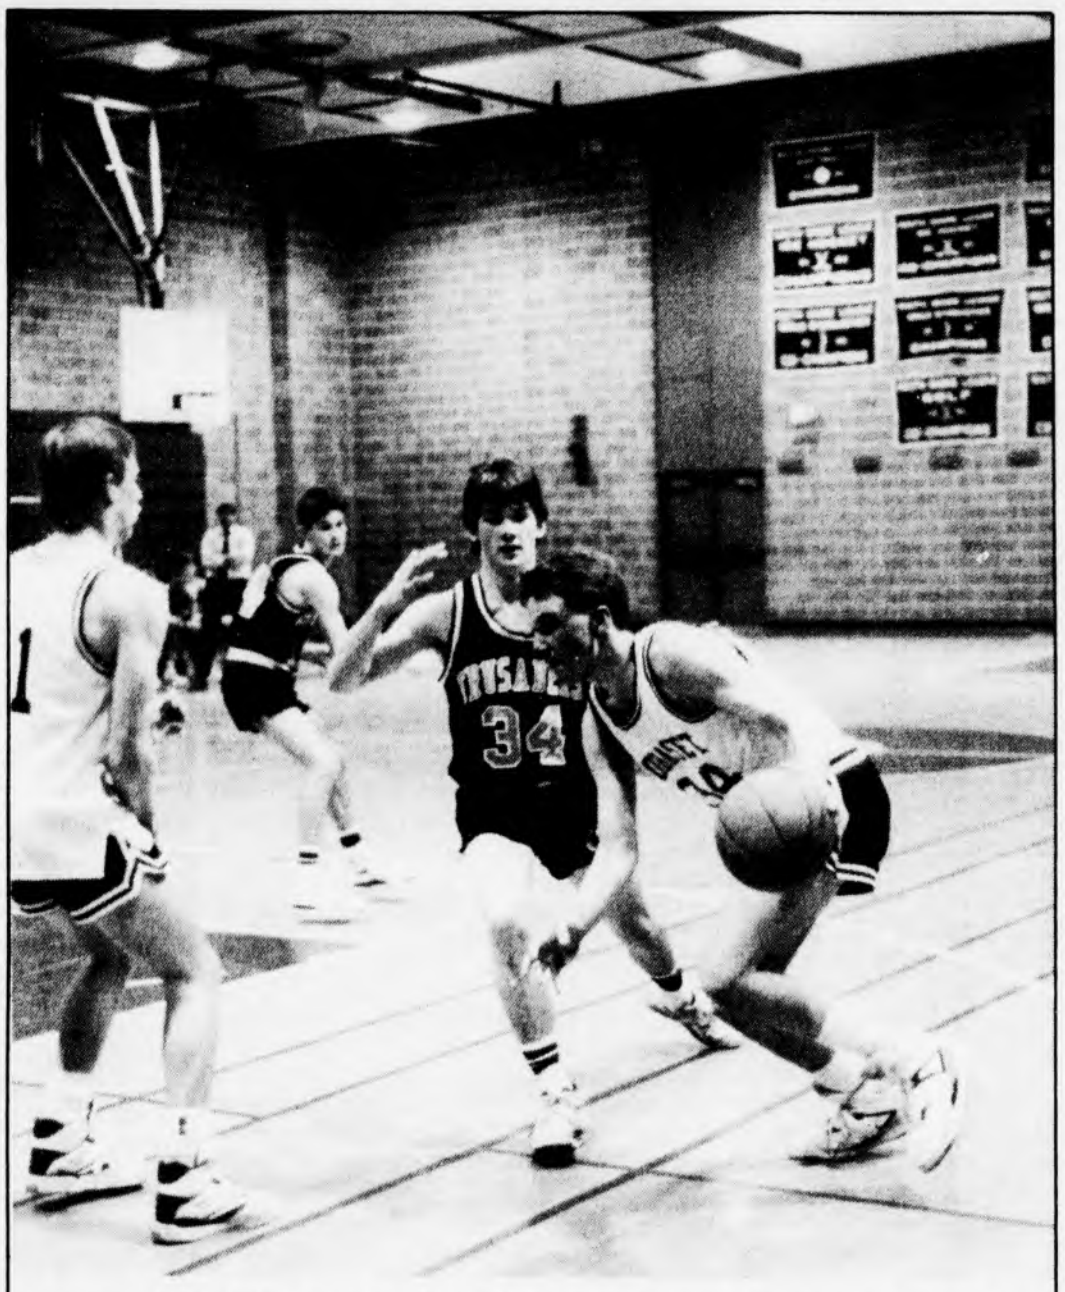
❑ Joyce Kisakye of 81 Wheel Wright Farm, was named to the Dean's List for the fall semester at Massasoit Community College.



❑Three of Cohasset's most famous are celebrating their birthdays this week, and we want to be sure to send them all best wishes! January 30, Joel and Jim Reidy turned 19 and on January 31 Sean McCarthy turned 18. Congratulations to a great bunch of guys and we hope that every year is better than the last for you!

❑It is nice to be able to report that Mrs. Mulcahy is doing extremely well, and should be back in full swing in no time! A little illness will never keep her down for long. She won't allow it! Besides too many people rely on Kay, and she's not one to let anyone down! Hurry home, we all miss you!

❑Gail Huston was in town last week for the memorial service of her late Grandmother Grace Mitchell. Gail has been living in Florida for many years now, but she is still a Cohassetite as far as we are concerned! She is flying all over for Delta and loves it! Her kiddos are all grown (does that seem possible), and she reports that all is well. Gail looked wonderful as usual, and we hope to see her again soon!

Cohasset High tri-captain Linc Marsac performs his fancy footwork against some tough competitors at Carver High.

❑Charlie Stover and his wife Barbara must be getting more exicted by the day; their daughter Lorie is being married in a few weeks! What fun it is to plan for a wedding, we certainly wish you all the best! Especially Lori and Paul!

❑We hope that Bruce Edmonds is on the mend, and back behind the wheel of his truck real soon! It's amazing how much you miss a Cohasset "regular," we get so used to seeing them "around town." Bruce did have the most festive room at the hospital for the super bowl; daughter Joan decorated it in all of the Denver colors; as most of you know, Joannie lives in Denver so who would know better how to coordinate a room for the game? Too bad she couldn't have done the same for Elway and his team — whew what a romp! Anyway, hurry and get better Bruce, we miss your smiling face.

❑This is one of Roger Pompeo's favorite weeks, because Feb. 2 is Groundhog Day! It wouldn't surprise us if someday he and Ann head for Punxsutawney, Pa., to watch the old groundhog for themselves! Here's hoping that the groundhog doesn't see his shadow (I think that's the way it goes, check with the master, Dr. Pompeo.

❑We hope that Jimmy Rosano is feeling better and that he is home from his recent hospital bout.

❑Attention registered Democrats, your caucus is to be held this Saturday, Feb. 3 at 2 p.m. at the town hall. It is open to all registered Democrats as of December 29, 1989.

❑Charles Fink, James Kearney and Bob Martin are all looking forward to Valentine's Day this year. That is the day the Forrest E. King Memorial Awards presentation and dinner are going to be held. It will take place at Kimball's-By-The-Sea from 6:30 to 11 p.m. If you would like to attend or would like more information, call Valerie King at 383-1755. The public is invited. Reservations must be made in advance and the cost is $25 per person. Best of luck to the three nominees (we can't say may the best man win — they are all the best!), and congratulations on being nominated for such an honor! Forrie King was a fine man!

❑We will sure miss Grace Mitchell around town. She was a grand lady who did everything for everyone! I always associate her with the Beechwood Church, where she was very active, and especially with the Christmas Fair they hold each year. Sure won't be the same not to see her there!

❑ Be sure to set aside Feb. 7. That's the day that 29 area businesses, artists and interior designers will interpret their work through creative table settings at the South Shore Art Center. The tables will reflect the style of an artist chosen by the people putting them together. It should be a spectacular sight; the day begins at 10 a.m. and will go on all day until 9 p.m. with refreshments being served. The tickets are $10 and are available at the Art Center. Call 383-9548 for tickets or more information.

❑Jeffrey A. Lloyd, son of Mr. and Mrs. James Lloyd, of 131 Nichols Rd., has made Dean's List for the third time at Springfield College. Jeffrey graduated from Cohasset High in 1987 and will graduate from Springfield in May 1991.

Kung Fu demonstration

Saturday, Feb. 3, the Lion Dance teams from the Wah Lum Kung Fu Academy of Cohasset will be performing at a number of Chinese restaurants including the Royal Gardens in Kingston, KoKo Island in Cohasset, Tivan and China Palace in Rockland, Super Dragon in Quincy, Mandarin Garden in Braintree, Ocean Kai in Hingham, the Golden Crown in Hanover, the Fiji Island in Abington and Hunan Village in Weymouth.

John Loupos, the Sifu or teacher, of the Wah Lum School explained that the lion costume used by his school's dancers is one that was used at the Chinese pavillion in the Epcot Center in Disneyworld by the man who gave him his training in the art, Master P. Chan.

The lion costume covers two acrobatic dancers who move about to the beating of a drum and sounding of a gong. The noise of the music, and often the accompanying firecrackers, are meant to frighten away evil spirits.

The lion dances his way through a restaurant including the kitchen to insure good fortune and prosperity in the coming year.

Keep Well clinic Feb 7

The Cohasset Social Service League will hold a cholesterol screening during its Keep-Well Clinic at the Senior Center, Cohasset Community Center, 3 North Main Street, on Wednesday, Feb. 7 from 10 a.m. to noon.

The public health nurse will offer free blood pressure checks, and nurses from the Hingham Visiting Nurse will conduct cholesterol screenings. The charge for cholesterol screenings is $6.00 per person. Reservations are encouraged, but not required.

Nurses from the Hingham Visiting Nurse will offer information on reducing blood cholesterol levels through diet, exercise, and lifestyle changes.

The Hingham Visiting Nurse holds regular cholesterol screenings the first Thursday of every month at its headquarters at 10 Downer Avenue in Hingham, and at other times and at other locations on the South Shore. To make an appointment for a cholesterol screening on February 7, call the Hingham Visiting Nurse at 749-1160.

Gourmet Guild meeting

The Scituate Gourmet-Decorator Guild will meet Tuesday, Feb. 13, at 8 p.m., at the First Trinitarian Congregational Church, on Country Way in Scituate.

The meeting is entitled "Relaxed Entertaining." Ideas for Brunches, Childrens Parties, and quick and easy hor d'ouvres for that impromptu party will be featured.

Dessert will be served and information about future meetings will be available. Guests are welcome for a fee of $5 payable at the door.

Resident in local performance

The Quincy Center Dinner Theatre, 1170 Hancock St. in Quincy, will launch the new year with a production of "Cheaters," starring Molly Hockheppel of Cohasset.

Presented by Darling Productions in association with rural lodge AF and AM, this adult comedy will be presented Jan. 27, 28 and Feb. 3, 4, 10, 11. Directed by John Macero of Saugus the case includes Hockheppel, Tommie Stevens of Braintree, Joe Doniger of Randolph, Mike Kelly of Watertown, John Quatrucchi of Stoughton and Pietra Beis of Waltham.

Full course dinner and show is $25 on Saturday night and $22.50 on Sunday. Social hour is 6:30 p.m., dinner is at 7:15 p.m. and the show begins at 9 p.m. on Saturday. On Sunday, the social hour starts at 4:30 p.m., dinner is at 5:30 p.m., and the show will begin at 7 p.m.

For more information and reservations call Darling Productions at 617-843-5862.

New exhibit at art center

The current art exhibit in the Bankcroft Gallery at the South Shore Art Center is "Connecting: Hillier, Nason, Peters."

The show, which will run through Feb. 16, represents the work of three artists in watercolor, watercolor with mixed media and monotype.

Barbara Hillier of Scituate spends a great deal of time in the classroom with elementary students. "They make their symbols and their shapes as I make mine, connecting ideas and finding inspirations in nature, both real and imagined. I love the spontaneity of the media — the surprise yet the control of watercolor, printing inks, the press and intaglio responding to the design as it emerges on paper," she stated.

Robert Nason, also of Scituate, paints "matter of fact" images such as pears, plums, folds of cloth, flowers and old houses by the shore.

Marie DiMestico Peters, of Bryantville, is a print maker. In this group of monotypes begun and completed during 1989, a rectangular framing often interacts with the imagery representing man's role as seeker of visual delights.

Peters is presently an art teacher at Silver Lake Regional High School and a Lecturer for Lesley College's Graduate School in the Creative Arts in Learning Program.

Search for birds of prey

Saturday, Feb. 10 interpreter Jerry Flaherty will lead a car and walking tour of Wompatuck State Park in search of birds of prey.

While visiting various habitats the group may expect to see hawks, owls and maybe an eagle. This is the time of year that the great horned owl begins nesting.

Participants will leave at 9 a.m. from the Wompatuck State Park Visitors' Center and return by 4 p.m. Bring a lunch, binoculars or scopes (if you have them) and wear appropriate clothing and footwear.

This is one of a series of programs sponsored by the Department of Environmental Managment - Division of Forest and Parks.

Wompatuck State Park is located off Route 228 in Hingham.

Run for office

Why don't you run for office in the 1990 local election?

Nomination papers are now available at the town clerk's office.

Cohasset will continue to need leaders with intelligence, strength, foresight, leadership and compassion to meet the challenges of the 1990's.

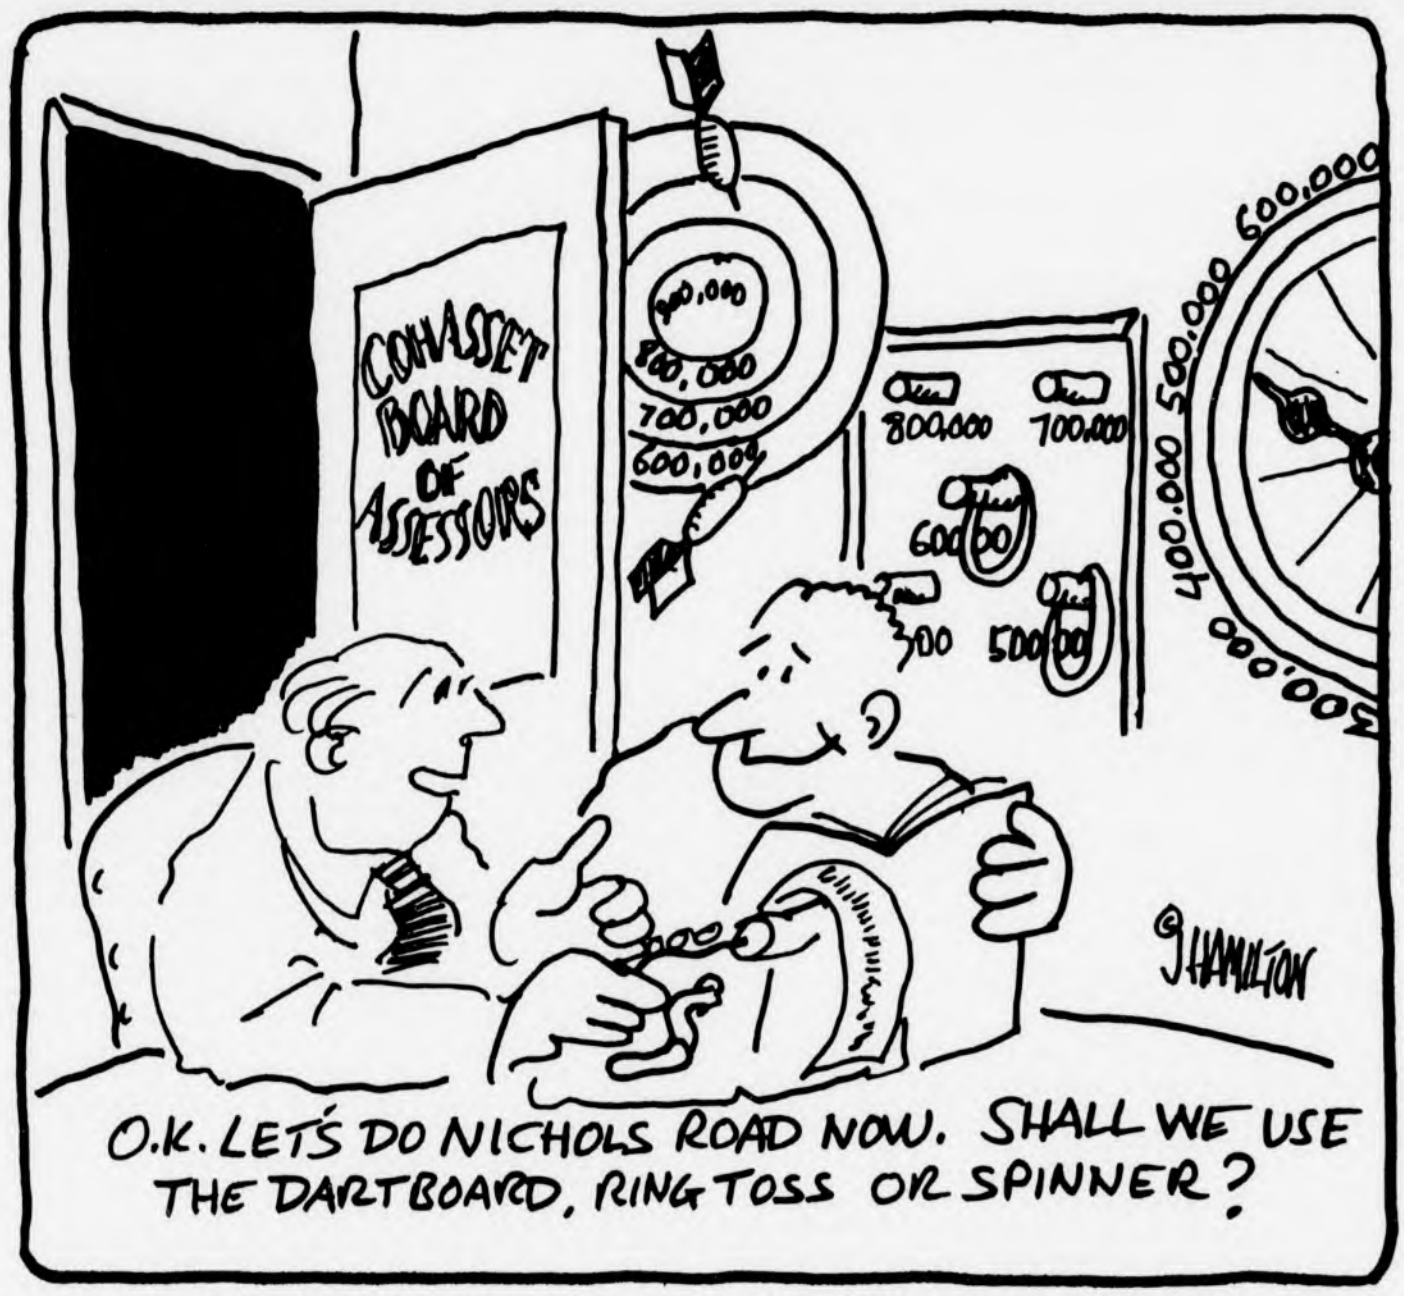
Why not you?

What have you done for the town that educates your children, plows your streets, tends your parks, monitors your elections, feeds your faucets, stocks your library and finds housing for our elderly?

Isn't it time for you to give back to the town?

Running for office is not easy. It takes guts.

A campaign for local office does not take a lot of money or political know-how. All you have to do is submit your ideas to the Mariner and we'll print them in Candidate's Corner.



Start out with a clear, concise announcement of your candidacy, with a photo if you wish, and send it in. Follow up each week with a press release outlining campaign activity or discussing a particular issue.

Candidate's Corner continues until the two weeks before the election. The last week is reserved for corrections.

Cohasset has been blessed with public spirited citizens who care enough to serve.

The more citizens who participate the healthier town government becomes.

Is 1990 the year you have the guts to put your ideas, your time, your commitment, your personality on the line and run for office?

In spite of the fact that the assessors reviewed 617 property tax abatement applications, they felt that their initial assessments were "right on target."

Chamber plans directory

The Cohasset Chamber of Commerce plans to publish a Chamber of Commerce Business Directory in 1990.

This guide, scheduled for a Spring 1990 publication date, will be available to the public at retail stores, realtors' offices, business offices and through the Chamber of Commerce. The directory will also be given to buying officers of all town departments and the school dept., and will be available to newcomers and tourists.

Any businesses interested in being included in this directory are urged to join the Cohasset Chamber of Commerce before February 25. Membership information may be obtained by calling Peg D'Onofrio at Colpitts Travel Agency at 383-1566, or leaving a message with the Chamber of Commerce at 383-1010.

This will be a Chamber of Commerce Directory, and only members paid for 1990 may be included.

Valentine Cabaret

The Cohasset Arts Boosters will be sponsoring a Valentine Cabaret and Silent Art Auction on Tuesday, Feb. 13 at Kimball's-By-The-Sea. The light buffet supper will be served from 6 to 7:30 p.m. The Cabaret, which will feature the Cohasset High School Chorus and Jazz Band, will take place from 7:30 to 9 p.m. Tickets are available for $10 a person and must be reserved and paid in advance.

Please send your checks to Martha Equi, 27 Wood Way, Cohasset, 383-0461.

Easton says Vo-tech a bargain

To the Editor:

This is the ninth time I have had the privilege to submit a brief report to the residents of the town of Cohasset on the status of the South Shore Regional Vocational Technical School District.

Everybody loves a bargain, or so it is said, and one of the best bargains I can imagine is to get two quality products for the price of one. An even better bargain would be if the product were to grow in value over the years and enable one to use its increased value to purchase homes and automobiles, afford travel to exciting places around the world, raise a family in comfort and security, and, as an extra measure, add to the economic well being of society. Such a bargain has been available for the past twenty-eight years at South Shore Regional Vocational Technical High School. It is truly "Two Educations Instead of One."

Graduates of South Shore have distinguished themselves in all walks of life. Some have become recognized experts in their chosen career area. Some have entered the political arena and performed valuable public service. Some have gone on for advanced training and college degrees and become the core of our nation's technological resource as technicians and engineers. Others have chosen the teaching profession. Some have gone on to become war heroes. You know our graduates. They repair your cars They build your houses. They cool and heat your houses. They repair your high tech equipment. They have machined and fabricated the products you use every day. They cut and style your hair. And they pay taxes in every one of the communities on the South Shore. They are your neighbors and your friends.

Your community has contributed much to the quality of life on the South Shore by the students you have sent and the support you have given South Shore Vo Tech. In summary, 457 students are enrolled for the 1990 school year,4 of which come from your community. Seventy-six percent of our population are males and twenty-four percent are female. The class of 1989 graduated 97 students, 1 of them came from Cohasset. On the average, 80% of our graduates go directly to the careers for which they have been trained, 15% go on to further education or technical training, 3% go into the military and 2% choose to delay their entry into the work force for a variety of reasons. South Shore does not have a general curriculum. Every student is on a direct path to further career training or immediate employment in a well paying position.

The Honors Program at South Shore is a challenging and rewarding experience for those students who can qualify. This grade 10 through 12 program features advanced study in variety of academic areas with plans under development to expand the program into a variety of exciting technical studies experiences.

South Shore's Continuing Education Program has been offering an expanded number of training and educational opportunities to our citizens for over twenty years. Over 600 adult students yearly avail themselves of a wide variety of evening programs from standard and custom designed technical skills training, to craft courses, academic programs, financial seminars and college credit courses. We welcome your inquiries and suggestions. Continuing Education personnel can be reached at either 878-0424 or 878-8822.

South Shore has been proud to serve your community over the years. We appreciate your support and pledge to continue to deliver the highest quality programs it is within our power to provide to you and to your children with "Two Educations Instead of One."

Applications available for Vo-tech

South Shore Vocational Technical High School is currently accepting applications from students in the regional towns of Hanover,Norwell, Rockland, Cohasset, Scituate, Abington, Whitman and Hanson who are enrolled in grade eight or nine.

Trade areas offered include automotive, auto body, heating/ventilation and air conditioning, welding, precision metal fabrication, machine shop, drafting, carpentry, electronics, cosmetology, graphic arts, marine technology, painting and wall finishing, culinary arts, packaging machine mechanics, merchandising/marketing and management and electrical.

Students at South Shore take a full academic program in addition to shop training and upon graduation receive an academic diploma in addition to a trade competency certificate. Numerous extracurricular activities as well as varsity and junior varsity sports programs are also offered at South Shore.

Applications and pamphlets regarding specific details of the various courses at South Shore Vocational Technical High School may be obtained by contacting the Guidance Office at 871-4153.

"I would be happy to speak with any student or parent regarding admission to South Shore. Barbara Ray, Kate Schwabe or James Harding, Guidance Counselors are also available to discuss our various programs and admission procedures," concluded Titus.

Candidates Corner

Education is Creed's top priority

Pledging to make education his number one priority, Marshfield school committeeman John Creed this week announced his candidacy for the state senate from the Norfolk-Plymouth District.

He is one of four South Shore Democrats who are seeking the nomination for the right to succeed State Sen. William Golden, D-Weymouth, who is running for lieutenant governor. The district includes Weymouth, Hingham, Cohasset, Scituate, Marshfield and Duxbury. At least two Republicans are expected to make the race as well, although only one has announced.

A former chairman of the Marshfield school committee and a member since 1982, Creed was unequivocal in his support for education, saying he would support a dedicated tax increase for the public schools.

"Education is my number one priority," he said in a statement. "We can no longer expect our nation to be competitive if we don't have the commitment to quality education. If that means a one percent increase for K through 16, dedicated to that end, then so be it."

Creed was also adamant in his support for the rights of the unborn – he is for a constitutional right-to-life amendment – and promised he will "demand fiscal accountability from Beacon Hill."

As a member of the school committee, Creed pointed to his success in opening up committee meetings to the public and in steering a sound fiscal course through tough budgetary times. He also noted that he received high marks from both sides for his fairness during contract negotiations, adding that Marshfield's school system has never experienced a strike or a job action during his tenure on the committee.

"Only through knowledge, backed with experience, can we guarantee that all aspects of our educational system will deliver the quality that our students and their parents demand," he said. "The education we provide should gear our young men and women for the career of tomorrow, not the job of today."

Criticizing what he called the "business-as-usual approach of the Beacon Hill professionals," Creed said his own polls show that voters would support a tax increase but only if they "know where and how each penny is being spent."

The Marshfield Democrat said he favors tax credits and incentives for the production of affordable housing and wants a review of the procedures and goals of the Massachusetts Water Resources Authority, noting that "never in my years of public service have I ever seen so much money spent with so little to show for it. The recent action of the legislature in combining our three state police bureaucracies under one administration did not go far enough. There are several environmental agencies which could, and should also be combined for greater savings and efficiency for the tax payers.

John Creed

"Up and down state government, we must reassess, revamp and reconsider our spending priorities, and I do not feel the Beacon Hill professionals can be trusted with this most important task," Creed said.

Creed was honored by the Plymouth County Education Association with its Distinguished Service Recognition Award in 1984. The award was bestowed "in appreciation of outstanding support and interest in public education." His experience covers broad areas of concern. A 1957 graduate of Marshfield High School, he received his Bachelor of Arts degree in Education from Fairfield University in 1961. He has also studied language at the St. Philip Neri School, graduated from St. John's Seminary in 1967, and was ordained a priest the same year.

While assigned to Saugus, he served on the school committee from 1973-1975. From 1977-1981, Creed was advisor to the Silver Lake Regional School superintendent and from 1970-1973 directed the Listen, Inc. program of alcohol, drug and family counseling.

Creed served as a public affairs officer with the Department of Environmental Quality Engineering from 1986-1987 and is currently employed by the Fineberg Companies in Wellesley.

Creed also has an extensive sports background, having been associated with the Boston Celtics for 30 years in a variety of capacities. He was also sports information director at Fairfield University and is currently a sports announcer for radio station WATD of Marshfield.

He and his wife, Nancy, reside at 41 Parish Path, Marshfield.

Other Democrats who have announced they are seeking the senate seat are Rep. Robert B. Ambler and Selectman Brian J. McDonald of Weymouth, and Rep. William J. Flynn of Hanover, who has not yet moved into the district.

Republican Donald Hussey of Hingham, a businessman, has formally announced his candidacy. Robert Hedlund, also of Hingham, has indicated he may run.

Hedlund calls for party loyalty

Robert Hedlund, candidate for the Republican nomination for state senator in the Norfolk and Plymouth Senatorial District, called upon his GOP opponents to pledge their loyalty to the winner of the September Republican party primary.

In a letter which Hedlund sent to Donald Hussey and Christos Mihos, he urged them to publicly state their support for the winner of the primary.

Hedlund reminded his two Republican rivals that in 1986 Hussey contributed to Governor Michael Dukakis' re-election campaign. Hedlund also called attention to Mihos' financial contribution to Democratic State Senator William Golden in 1988 who was challenged by Republican William J. Robinson of Hull.

Hedlund reminded his opponents that during the past twelve years he has never "betrayed my fellow Republican who has had the determination and leadership to run for office."

Golden supports local aid referendum

Sen. William Golden, D-Weymouth, will ask selectmen in more than 300 towns to put two nonbinding questions on the ballot this spring so that taxpayers can voice their support for local aid.

He said their vote would be considered a "citizens' mandate."

The questions are:

• Should the town oppose all reductions and impoundments of local aid?

• Should the state guarantee 40 percent of all personal and corporate income and sales taxes and all of the lottery revenues to local aid?

The second referendum was proposed by the Massachusetts Municipal Association which asks the state to guarantee that cities and towns receive a fair division of state revenue. He also will ask the 40 cities in the state to pass resolutions to maintain state aid to localities in the current fiscal year and to ensure its existence in fiscal year 1991 and beyond.

"We simply can't take any more cuts in local services — such as police, fire, education and public works," said Golden.

Last week he also filed legislation which would protect state aid for public schools.

Golden organized a similar referenda in 1985 in an effort to build grassroots support for the restoration of commuter rail in southeastern Massachusetts.

Flynn sponsors budget bill

Rep. William J. Flynn, Jr., candidate for State Senator for the Norfolk and Plymouth district, announced that he has cosponsored a new budget reduction bill, "An Act Establishing the Massachusetts Budget Economy and Efficiency Act of 1990."

Included in this bill are reductions which would: Create an early retirement incentive for state employees age 55 or older; limit the number of regular employees and "03" consultants that can be hired; close nonessential state offices, such as the Registry of Motor Vehicles, one day a week; cut the number of court officers and State House doorkeepers; centralize the administration of the state colleges; ask the governor to reorganize the executive branch with the abolishment of the Governor's policy offices of human resources, economic development, education affairs and constituent services; prohibit welfare benefits for illegal aliens; provide that cities and towns receive no less than 31% of lottery ticket sales.

Hussey is busy raising funds

Donald A. Hussey of Hingham, a candidate for the State Senate from the Norfolk and Plymouth district, says he has raised more than twice as much money as his closest opponent.

Hussey, who has contributed close to $25,000 to his own campaign said, "For a Republican to win, he must put in some of his own money and be willing to campaign full-time."

Jennifer Hussey, daughter of the candidate, attended the reception and luncheon honoring Vice President Dan Quayle Monday, Jan. 22 at the Copley Plaza Hotel in Boston. Jennifer is an eighth grade student at the South Junior High School in Hingham.

For information on citizens for Hussey, please call 749-5117.

Deer Hill newscast

Following a month of video production instruction and rehearsal at Continental Cablevision's Scituate studio, 21 Cohasset students last week taped their first full-scale school newscast.

The program will air on Continental's community Channel 3 in Cohasset at 6 p.m. Thursday, Jan. 25, and can be seen again by all the town's cable viewers at 6 p.m. on Feb. 1 and again at 7 p.m. on Feb. 8.

"This has been the most incredible experience for the kids," said sixth grade teacher Betty Cisneros, who worked closely with Continental Cohasset Program Director Deborah Duggan to make the whole thing come together.

"The kids loved every minute of it, and we all had great fun," said Continental's Duggan, who taught the students how to run the TV cameras, light the set and operate all the studio control room equipment.

The students wrote and edited their own news stories, made up cue cards for the anchor team, taped remote segments at the school to roll into their reports, conducted interviews and provided their own production supervision and technical crew. Every student had at least one job.

The newscast featured stories on the class' new student teacher, Sarah Hamilton, the Deer Hill School book fair, Thanksgiving festivities and other school projects.

This wasn't Deer Hill School's first experience with cable television production. Last year, another sixth grade class at Deer Hill produced a similar newscast, which won an honorable mention award in last year's Massachusetts Community Television contest sponsored by the Massachusetts Association for Educational Media.

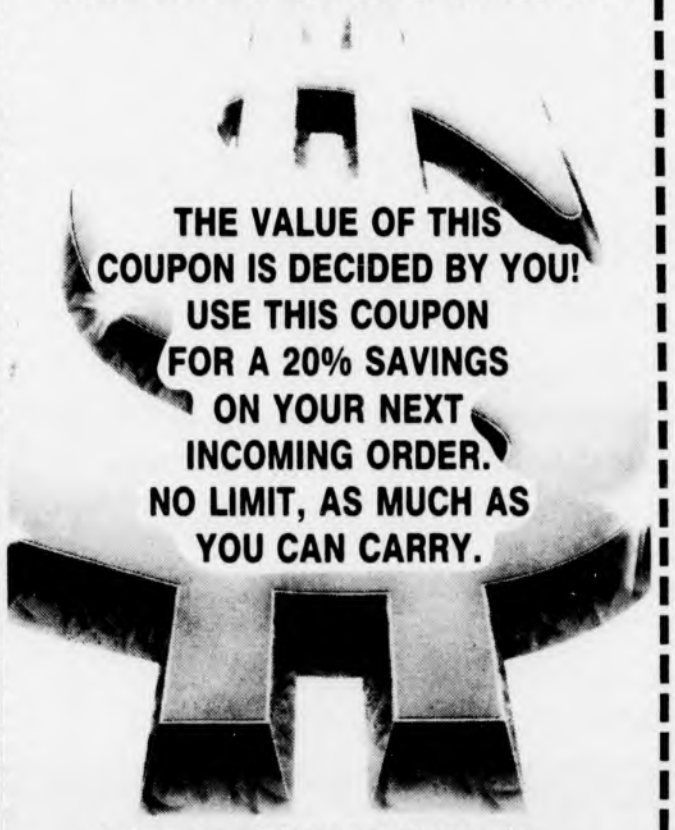
Jr. High math winners

The eighth grade math classes recently participated in the third meet of the Continental Math League. Five meets are held during the year.

In the Pythagorean Division, high scorers were Ann Senechal, Bonnie Krueger, Charles Endres, Sarah Atterton, Scott Theriault and Christa Ansberg.



In the Euclidean Division, high scorers were Wesley DeSantis, Bethany Maciel, Brian Duffy, Andrew Kamatakis and Lindsey Libbetts.

High scorers for the year so far are Christa Ansberg, Wesley DeSantis and Andrew Kamatakis. Two more meets will be held and prizes awarded in May.

Local doctor volunteers time

Dr. Steve Golden dropped in to Mike Gill's Jr. High Health Education classes on Tuesday and Wednesday January 23 and 24. Together, they presented the Junior High health classes with an AIDS education program.

A year of steady improvement for CHS hockey

By John Kinchla
Special to the Mariner

Across Cohasset at 4 a.m., three mornings each week, an alarm clock sounds to wake the 19 boys that represent the Cohasset High Varsity Ice Hockey Team. By 5:20 a.m., the boys are practicing.

Coach Dennis Walsh, a math teacher at Cohasset High, worries about his team. His 12th graders drive the younger players to practice twice a week. After practice, they must report to school before 7:45 a.m.

Hockey parents respect Dennis Walsh. They appreciate the value system he subtly instills in their children. In some ways, this year's team reflects Walsh's own personality. The boys are quiet, eager to learn and respectful of each other.

After careful scouting some specific game situations can be anticipated. Prior to one game this year, Coach Walsh conducted a power play practice session. In the next game, the importance of that practice session became obvious to the boys as they scored two goals.

Under Walsh's careful tutelage, the learning takes place both off and on the ice. The importance of daily schoolwork is stressed. Walsh conducts his own check of the team's classroom performance by requiring each boy to return a mid-term student evaluation on their work from each teacher to him .

Student eligibility does not appear to be a problem despite games or practices five times per week. This year's team is young by comparison to other Cohasset High Ice Hockey Teams. Among the 19 players, 13 will be returning next year. This years team has relied on its five senior starters for leadership. And they have come through.

Senior Joel Reidy, an All American Goalie in Soccer, has been outstanding. Defensemen, John MacDonald and Dave Farrag have played valiantly. Forwards Rick McLaughlin and Joel Whitman have provided the scoring punch. Forward Steve Ritts, though hampered by a knee injury, has practiced every day.

Much should be expected from this team over the next three years since many of the younger players are starters on either the first or second line offense. The team currently has six seniors, four juniors, two sophomores, four freshmen and three 8th graders in uniform.

Two seasons ago, the Skippers were the MIAA Class C Eastern Massachusetts Semifinalists. They fell two victories short of becoming State Champions. The "old boys," as Coach Walsh refers to them, remain loyal. While on Christmas vacation, several of them came back to help with this year's team.

Steady improvement has been noted in practices and the enthusiasm to play is still strong. Wednesday night home games are played at Pilgrim Arena in Hingham at 5:20 p.m. Saturdays the team plays away.

If the Cohasset High School Varsity Hockey Team, after many successful previous seasons, is rebuilding this year under the direction of Coach Dennis Walsh, then next year's team should be even more fun to watch.

CHS gymnasts 'unbelievable' against Carver High

Gymnastics coach Ruth Ann Sargent figured her ulcer was going to act up as Cohasset battled a tough Norwell squad Monday night. But her team clinched a victory which not only saved Sargent's health, but also staked a claim on second place in the league.

"It was unbelievable," a jubilant coach proclaimed this week as Cohasset returned with a 7-2 league record. In a tight competition against the Clippers of Norwell, Cohasset managed a decisive team victory. The score was 115.3 over Norwell's 114.1. For Cohasset, it marked a season's high, as the team inches its way into a possible berth in the state sectional competition.

The Skippers entered Monday night's match realizing that Norwell was a tought team. "The girls were so pumped," Sargent recalled, noting that a standing-room only crowd at the Cohasset gymn only added to their excitement. Sargent wanted to publicly thank the many students and parents who attended this important match.

The Uneven bar competition was an easy win for Cohasset, with three teammates scoring high for the hometeam. Michelle Hartley was first in the bars, with her highest score ever on that equipment. Tara Gallagher was second among her teammates and Laura Andrews finished third with her highest score of the season.

"Going into the beam competition, we had a two-point lead," according to the coach. But a victory was far from assusred as the normally triumphant competitors made several mistakes and some falls. "That nearly killed us," Sargent admitted. Once the event was completed, Cohasset still maintained a slight lead over Norwell.'

"Anything could have happened at that point," the coach explained. "I thought after our disappointing performances on the beam, we actually could lose."

Her intutition was based on the next event. Norwell boasts of several fine vaulters, and Sargent realized that Cohasset would have to perform better in order to grab this victory.

Their performances were strong enough to bring Cohasset into the final event with a small lead. Hartley, Gallagher and Buckley were again singled out for their performances in vaulting.

The final event was floor exercise. And Hillary Proodian sewed up a victory as she gave her best performance of the season. Sargent says she's the most improved gymnast on the team, and applauded her 6.0 effort.

With Proodian's solid performance, Cohasset was almost assured of a win with simply a typical routine from superstar Hartley. As Sargent noted, whatever she does in floor exercise, Hartley is practically guaranteed a score of at least an 8.0. True to tradition, Hartley came through with a 8.7 performance, followed by Gallagher with a 7.85 and teammate Buckley.

Hartley won the all-around competition with a score of 34.4. Gallager was close behind with a total tally of 29.8.

"We finished with one of our highest totals for floor exercise," Sargent said. "It was an unbelievable effort. I thought I'd have a heart attack.

"We've been really pushing to get into the state sectionals. Now it looks like we might just slide in."

In addition to her performers, Sargent credits a lot of the team's success to manager Jemilah Afshar. Jennifer was injured during team tryouts this year, but she had helped the team immeasurably and has attended every competition, Sargent acknowledged.

Next, Cohasset faces a tough Scituate High School team - sole owners of first place. The two teams square off Thursday, Feb. 1 at Cohasset. The next competition will be Cohasset against Randolph on Feb. 7 at Cohasset.

GIRLS' BASKETBALL

The outcome wasn't so cheery for Coach Debbie Bostwick's squad this week. They lost a dreary 43-34 match against Carver High School Tuesday night.

Bostwick didn't want to dwell on the negatives, but she admitted that having five of her players suspended from school, three of them starters, was not an optimistic way to begin a tough match.

The game's only highlight, she stated, was Tonya Peterson's 15 points, and forward Kay Long's 7 points.

Cohasset was out-shot by Carver, 18-10 from the floor. And although Cohasset wa scalled to the foul line 26 times, they could manage only 14 points.

"That hurt us big time," Bostwick noted.

By the end of the first quarter, Cohasset was leading 9-8. By the half they were in the deficit by five points.

The third quarter did them in, as Cohasset could manage only 20 percent of their shots from the floor. It didn't help in the fourth quarter when Moe Long was fouled out of the game. In the end, the Skippers recorded 28 turnovers.

"The girls just weren't into this game," their coach lamented.

Bostwick noted the contributions of some junior varsity players who have been helping out the varsity squad. They are Sara Douglas, a freshman, 7th graders Erin Murphy and Becky Golden, and Renee Prisble, an 8th grade student.

The Skippers will face East Bridgewater Friday night. They lost to the same team earlier this season, so Bostwick is aware they must stop Bridgewater's high-scoring center and point guard.

Cohasset Mariner

Vol. XII, No. 20 | Thursday, February 8, 1990 | 50 cents

Town archivist David Wadsworth takes a long look at one of the oldest books in Cohasset's possession which is now safely tucked away in the town hall vault.

If fortunes rise, so will sewers

By Alison Cohen
Mariner staff

The Cohasset-Hull sewer connection is dead in the water. A lack of money from the state has made it impossible to go forward with the joint waste water treatment project.

But all is not lost permanently-- the town's authorization to borrow will remain in effect unless it is expressly rescinded at town meeting. Cohasset is also near the top of the list if the state's fortunes reverse, according to Selectman Martha Gjesteby.

"We don't want to pursue any other alternatives until we are convinced that there is no hope for this project," said Ted Guild of the sewer commission.

Guild told selectmen this week that the state has run out of funds to bring the project into fruition.

"There is no indication when the state will have funds for the project," said Guild. "It's clear they have no idea."

In May 1988, Cohasset voted in town meeting to get out of the sewer business by sending its waste water to Hull to be treated and discharged. Eighty percent of the cost was to be picked up by the state and the town passed an override article to take care of their share.

Selectman Chairman Burtram Pratt told Guild that if the project was resurrected it should be expanded.

Only 700 to 800 homes were slated for sewering under the project. According to Guild, it isn't eco-

A determined student will travel to the Soviet Union

By Alison Cohen
Mariner staff

Melissa Christoffel is a young woman who knows exactly where she wants to go and what it will take to get herself there. Last week, a new path opened that will bring her closer to her goals.

For a year, she has been angling to be one of a select group of U.S. teens who will spend a year living and studying in the Soviet Union under the auspices of the American Field Service.

A very determined Christoffel applied in September and called AFS headquarters in Springfield on a monthly basis.

Last week, Christoffel received official notice that she would be one of the two New England students chosen to participate in the program.

"I'm so excited. Everybody knows it," she said.

Although she hasn't been assigned to a host family yet, she knows that she will be living in either Moscow or Leningrad for a year beginning in August. In the meantime, she is reading everything she can get her hands on and talking to everyone who has been to the Soviet Union.

No shrinking violet, Christoffel has approached people in airports who have luggage tags written in Russian to ask for information.

In part, Christoffel has to do her own research. to come is an economic guide for businessmen, but the interests, concerns, and needs of a student are very different. It's a gap she hopes to plug by writing a guide based on her experiences and research.

"Not to make money, but just so the next people have more information than I did," she explains.

So far her research has revealed that the U.S.S.R. has a woefully inadequate telephone system. Phoning home will take advance preparation of at least one or two days. Telephone service within Russia is equally bad. There are only 17 trunklines serving Moscow and telephone directories are unknown.

Worse than the telephone glitches is the complete lack of fax machines.

"Filing college applications is going to be very difficult," the high school junior said. Without fax machines, she may have to rely on the snail-paced postal system. The mail takes at least ten days to get from there to here, assuming you can get your

Bylaw prevents dual membership

By Jane Lane
Mariner staff

A little-known provision within the town's bylaws has hit at least two civic-minded residents right where it hurts - in town hall.

According to Section 1, Article 5 of the bylaws, no resident appointed to the town's advisory committee can hold any other elected or appointed position on a town board or committee. A similar provision applies to the personnel board.

That bylaw was apparently not on the minds of the town's appointing authority - the troika- when earlier this week they appointed Wayne Sawchuk to the advisory committee. Sawchuk, who is chairman of the Milliken Field renovation study committee, discovered that he will not be allowed to sit at this week's advisory committee meeting unless he relinquishes his membership on the other committee.

"I'm not sure at this point what I'll do," he said mid-week. Sawchuk said he would be willing to disqualify himself from any discussion regarding the on-going Milliken Field repairs if he was allowed to remain as chairman of that group.

"It just seems to me that perhaps we're penalizing people who have a desire to participate," he added.

The bylaw was recently reviewed by town counsel during a similar incident. Barbara Moore, then-chairman of the police and fire station renovation committee, was appointed to the personnel board. Although she was chairman of the renovation study committee, she had to forfeit that position in order to accept a membership on the personnel board.

Finally, a resting place for archives

David Wadsworth never thought he'd live to see the day. Ditto for town clerk Franny Marks.

But that day has arrived - when the town's vital statistics and irreplaceable historic records are tucked safely away in protective vaults.

Deep within the bowels of the town hall basement there is a walk-in vault which harbors an impressive chunk of this town's heritage. Enclosed within the locked storage area are records detailing the beginnings of this town, and its cautious steps as it evolved into a thriving community.

A second vault is located within the town clerk's office on the first floor. Within that room are years of history as marriages, births and deaths chronicle the history of our ancestors.

Town archivist Wadsworth laughs when he recalls the years it took to find a proper storage space for these important materials. He laughs, but admits there is really no excuse for the deplorable methods used to house these documents in years past.

"I keep thinking this was something I never thought I'd get to see - now Cohasset is finally obeying state law. This is the victory of a 10-year fight," he noted.

Discounts for next year

The board of health will make up for a detail they overlooked this year, by allowing for a senior citizen discount at the transfer station next year.

Council on Aging president Gerard Keating asked the board last month to consider granting a discount in the $52 transfer station fee to Cohasset seniors.

"With the high cost of oil during this severe winter, the increased cost of using the disposal facility is like the straw that broke the camel's back," he wrote in a letter to selectmen.

The health board admitted the senior citizen discount was something they overlooked when they discussed setting a fee for the new transfer station facility. But because the stickers were required to be purchased by the end of January, it is too late to consider a discount for the current year, they noted.

The board decided to implement a discount for senior residents after the current sticker expires in December, 1990.

School budget hearing

Do you, the voters of Cohasset, have questions or comments on how your tax dollars are being spent in education in Cohasset?

Do you want to feel more in control of the issues facing the School Committee?

The public hearing on Thursday, Feb. 8, at 8 p.m. in the Home Economics Room at the Junior/Senior High School is the place to be. The school committee will give the citizens of Cohasset an opportunity to review the budget for FY 91.

Come share your comments and educate yourselves before town meeting.

Republican delegates

At the Feb. 3 caucus held in Hingham, Republicans from the Norfolk/Plymouth Senate district elected 23 delegates pledged to House Minority Leader Steven Pierce and one for former U. S. Attorney William Weld.

The Weld delegate is Arne Gjesteby of Cohasset.

The Pierce delegates are:

Cohasset: Roy Fitzsimmons, Mary Rita Burke, Nancy O'Toole.

Hingham: Helen MacKay, Patricia Hawley, William Wise, Joanne Hedlund, Robert O'Brien, Audrey O'Brien, Kathleen Bishop.

Weymouth: Ann Hilbert, William Kelly.

Hull: Robert Smythe.

Marshfield: Oreste Tramonte, Nancy Comperchio, David Knaab, Jane Johnson.

Duxbury: Kenneth Fortini, Patricia Costello.

Scituate: Marie McEachern, Lilla O'Donoghue, John Emery, Christopher Bowker.

Sharing a secretary

The selectmen hope to realize some savings in the budget for secretarial help.

Remembering the days when commissions were volunteer operations with virtually no paid staff, Chairman Burt Pratt called on the sewer commission and the conservation commission to do some belt tightening. The conservation commission had approached the selectmen looking for additional hours of secretarial services.

"We've got to save some money here," he said. Pratt recommended that the two commissions join with the planning board in sharing a single secretary.

Because no representative was present from the planning board, selectman Martha Gjesteby recommended putting off a decision until they had an opportunity to be heard on the matter.

"I just hope that everybody understands that we would love to be able to wave a magic wand," said selectman Diana Kornet. "We're not trying to be spiteful."

Noonan is acting chief

Sgt. Brian Noonan was appointed to serve as acting chief of police during Chief Joseph Kealey's upcoming vacation. Kealey had recommended the appointment.

The appointment was not without a touch of controversy.

Sgt. Richard Barrow, who is slated to retire in seven months, contacted at least two selectmen to complain that he had been passed over in rotation of this duty. Barrow wanted the selectmen to know that he was willing and able to serve as acting chief.

Selectmen were in some dispute about whether they had officially adopted a rotation of duty policy.

According to Town Counsel Richard Henderson, the debate was meaningless. According to the union contract, the selectmen are limited to approving a candidate recommended by the chief.

Eastern building appraised

Selectmen met this week to try to figure out what to do with the old Eastern Edison building. Eastern Edison proposed selling the building to the town.

"I tried to get it for zip, but he just wouldn't stand still for it," said Selectman Rocco Laugelle.

Chairman Burtram Pratt recommended joining the two structures and using them for storage of town-owned vehicles and equipment.

Currently, vehicles owned by the highway department and the tree and park department are stored in the open.

Although the selectmen were favorably disposed to this sort of use, they decided to postpone any decision until results from an environmental study and building appraisal are completed.

CHS Hockey team correction

The news story published in the January 31 edition of the Cohasset Mariner failed to include the fact that Matthew and Jared Graves have practiced with the team all season.

Matthew Graves is in the eighth grade and plays wing. Jared is in the seventh grade and plays defense.

nomically practical to hook up homes in sparsely populated areas.

Pratt continued to argue that at some point Cohasset would have to hook up all the homes.

"Why not now?" he asked.

Selectman Diana Kornet told Guild that she has been getting calls from concerned residents about outdoor lights at the sewer plant being left on during daylight hours.

Guild said that he would bring the matter to the attention of the contractor who pays the bills. He reassured the selectmen that the town was not paying for the wasted electricity.

According to Guild, the contractor is operating under a flat bid and cannot pass on any increases in utility costs.

Selectmen okay more maintenance projects for harbor

By Alison Cohen
Mariner staff

Selectmen crunched numbers in the harbor budget again, but in the end they voted for the figures that Harbormaster Irving Gadow sent them.

The harbor budget was up $14,000 from last year's budget, for a total budget of $57,000.

Selectmen had hoped that the increase in fees would have resulted in some savings. Gadow proposed applying the revenues to maintenance projects described as long overdue. He also reinstated 79 night patrols, primarily in the peak summer season.

Gadow told selectmen he was trying to get all the work done on the floats and ramps this year. In part, he was doing this so he could put the maintenance work on a rotation basis.

More importantly, he said, "I'm trying to get it all patched up so I don't have to worry about anyone falling through."

Chairman Burtram Pratt asked Gadow about using volunteer labor on his projects.

"They've helped me out quite a bit, but I can't depend on volunteers," Gadow said. "There's a limit on how far they're going to go. I have to get the work done regardless."

Selectmen Rocco Laugelle supported Gadow.

"These gentlemen are sick and tired of donating their time and the materials," he said. "The day has come when we can't rely on people donating their time and their materials."

The increase in his budget for night patrols was also a topic of debate.

Gadow cut out two nights of patrol each week in order to save money in last year's budget. He rotated the nights to keep would-be vandals off guard.

In the fiscal 1991 budget, he restored the night patrols for 19 weeks of the year at a total cost of $7,000.

Laugelle agreed with Gadow's decision.

"We have $5 million worth of boats and yachts moored in the harbor. We have to protect these owners and their boats-- me and my little Whaler included," he said.

It was suggested that perhaps user fees could be set at a level that would offset increases in the budget.

Laugelle protested raising fees any higher, saying, "There's nobody as high as we are."

Laugelle praised Gadow as a dedicated hard-working employee.

Gadow described his work hours as running from 8 a.m. to 10 p.m. seven days a week from May through September or October. In the winter months, he works from 8:30 a.m. to 6:00 p.m. in order to catch up on paper work and to be available "to listen to people complain" when they get out of work.

"I think the budget is very reasonable," said Pratt.

Pratt objected to selectman Ned Tebbets' suggestion that fees be based on the value of the boat.

"You've got to draw the line some where," said Pratt. "We have the highest fee per foot around."

Tebbets placed conditions on his agreement to the budget increase.

"I would support the increase provided the committee will make further steps in raising fees to cover more of the harbor costs."

Increasing fees hinges on passage of a bylaw at town meeting.

Bylaw quandry

It was determined that the bylaw indeed prohibited dual memberships, and Moore resigned her chairmanship.

Looking back at the incident, Moore said she feels the bylaw is actually a good rule.

"I feel very strongly that it's a very good thing," she said. "If I was on both committees and I was reviewing the fire contract for the personnel board, it would be in conflict with my other committee responsibilities. At least that is the way it would be perceived."

Moore said the bylaw also prevents civic-minded residents from taking on too many responsibilities.

In addition, Moore believes she's giving the town better use of her professional abilities, as a former legal assistant and manager for the Christian Science Reading Room publishing division.

Executive Secretary Gregory Doyon noted, "I'm sympathetic to the plight of both individuals who are quality members of those committees. I feel it's unfortunate that people who are willing to serve the town can't serve in both capacities. "

But the bylaw was established, Doyon explained, in order to clearly draw the lines regarding conflict of interest.

Senior Tax Guide available

To assist senior citizens of the Tenth District in filing 1989 federal tax returns, Congressman Gerry E. Studds (D-MA) has announced the availability of a Tax Guide for Older Americans.

The four-page guide, compiled by the House Select Committee on Aging, outlines sections of the Internal Revenue Code of particular significance to seniors.

The guide is available, free from the Pembroke office.

WARNING:

WINTER MAY BE HAZARDOUS TO YOUR CAR.

The facts are hard and cold.

Many motor oils just don't perform in winter weather. And that can lead to friction. Extreme engine wear. Or even extensive damage, or a breakdown that leaves you and your family stranded.

That's why it's so important to take your car or truck to Jiffy Lube now for our famous 14-Point, 10-Minute Oil Change. We'll ensure that your oil is the right weight for your car and the weather. And we'll install a new FRAM or Purolator oil filter, check and fill six essential fluids, lube the chassis, and much more.

Be sure to protect your car and your wallet against cold-weather calamities — by visiting Jiffy Lube today.

Town archives are in a proper resting place

It was way back in the mid-70's when the archivist was notified by the state that their method of keeping town records and statistics was woefully inadequate. The state had certain specifications regulating the storage of the material, and Cohasset was light years away from compliance.

At that time, the town's various documents were stored away in a cellar vault and a "chimney" vault made from brick which was located in the town hall attic.

That clever piece of craftsmanship was designed in 1898 by Newcomb B. Tower, the great-grandfather of today's town archivist. But by the mid-20th century, that vault was considered out-moded.

The town acted quickly in an attempt to comply with the state code, and a new, but temporary vault was established at the high school - in a corner of the boys' locker room.

Wadsworth remembers looking for a document one day as a young student athlete anxiously watched over his shoulder. "Is there any money in there?" the boys inquired as Wadsworth slowly pried open the heavy vault door.

Some historic documents have been soiled, dampened or damaged because of years of improper storage, Wadsworth explained. Fortunately, all significant papers and books are still intact.

Then, when plans were being discussed to build an addition to the town hall, Wadsworth had a brainstorm. Why not include a state-of-the-art vault for the town's invaluable artifacts, he suggested. Little did he know that his idea would take many years to germinate.

Wadsworth was joined by the town clerk, former executive secretary Donald Andrew, architect Benjamin Blake, and former advisory committee chairman Fred Koed.

"We contacted the Secretary of State's public documents division to get the standards they wanted. They're very specific about what they want. And they don't look too kindly on a town for violating those standards," Wadsworth stated.

The vaults, he explained, must be constructed of certain material, with a six-hour fire door providing access to the area. The climate inside the vault is environmentally controlled - the heat and humidity are constantly regulated to provide a safe environment for the delicate paper products within. As Wadsworth explained, the ancient documents inside the vault could be easily damaged or destroyed by too much humidity or heat.

Once the town hall addition was completed, Wadsworth began the inevitable task of sorting through the archives and records and deciding what should be placed where. Documents dating back to Cohasset's earliest days as a parish of Hingham, were stored in cardboard boxes until they were placed in permanent storage inside the vault.

It was during this time that Wadsworth was asked to uncover some tax records that would assist the town in a legal battle against a delinquent taxpayer. After much searching, Wadsworth found the tax books tucked away in a box which clearly uncovered the truth - the property owner had not paid the taxes for many years. As Wadsworth noted, the evidence provided an air-tight case for the town's legal counsel, and the appellate court agreed. Cohasset was awarded more than $100,000 in back taxes.

That book now occupies a space on the neatly-stacked rows of tax collection documents which line a wall of the cellar vault.

An inner section of the cellar vault is reserved for the oldest and most frail town documents. Wadsworth has placed these delicate publications in a locked storage closet within that vault.

Written by hand, these original documents contain the earliest accounts of Cohasset's history. "They're real goodies," Wadsworth exclaims. He cannot resist taking a peek once again at the town's first record book from 1717 which details the annual events of the Second Parish of Hingham.

Wadsworth, an avid cigarette smoker, strictly adheres to the no-smoking policy established by the state. He will not light up once he steps inside the vault - opting to wait until he exits out into the vacuous cellar.

He opens a book recounting the events of the Great and General Court of the Massachusetts Bay Colony. The incorporation of the District of Cohasset is clearly recorded in a journal for the year 1770, and is signed by the moderator Deacon Isaac Lincoln, clerk Daniel Lincoln, and Joseph Souther. All three were Cohasset selectmen.

Some of the earliest documents stored within the vault include a copy of the original journal from 1647 in which the borders between Plymouth and the remaining section of the Mass Bay Colony were clarified.

As town archivist, Wadsworth is responsible for the proper storage of all vital town records, with an emphasis toward the preservation and protection of historical documents.

Included in that vault are tax records, assessors' statistics and all records regarding town employees.

Upstairs, town clerk Marks can now boast of a modern vault in which she stores all election records and materials, along with more than 100 years of vital statistics.

"This is a solution to a serious problem that was on-going for many years," Wadsworth observed. "These vaults will serve the town for many years to come."

Considering the town gets around to replacing them every 100 years or so, that's good news for Cohasset history.

Cohasset can use ALS mutual aid

Cohasset can benefit from the proposed Advanced Life Support ambulance service without voting at town meeting to participate in the three year regional compact, according to Fire Chief Daniel Brock.

The government structure committee had asked selectmen to place an article on the warrant committing Cohasset to the project.

If Hingham voters approve the private ambulance service, Cohasset can tap into the services through the existing mutual aid program, said Brock. Cohasset is one of the five towns being asked to participate in the regional project.

The Advance Life Support (ALS) service would be staffed by paramedics who provide more sophisticated medical services such as intravenous medications, defibrillation of heart patients, and placement of tubes in the windpipes of patients with breathing difficulties.

The service would supplement, not replace, the town ambulance staffed by emergency medical technicians. EMTs are restricted to cardiopulmonary resuscitation and administration of oxygen.

The Hingham-based service will be provided by Norfolk-Bristol Ambulance Service under the supervision of South Shore Hospital. The ambulance company offered to provide the first 18 months of service at no charge to induce the towns to participate. The company expected to recoup the $350,000 annual cost by billing patients' private medical insurance.

"What I want to know is the cost of the thing after that 18 months," said Selectman Chairman Burtram Pratt.

Roy Fitzsimmons, chairman of the government structure committee, had no ready answer.

"No one knows, but it would give everyone 18 months to find out," Fitzsimmons said.

The government structure committee is seeking to develop regional solutions to shared problems.

Selectman Diana Kornet said she and fellow selectman, Martha Gjesteby, supported ALS in theory, but asked, "Is this economically viable?"

Kornet attended a recent meeting on the project. According to information she gathered at the meeting, it takes 750 ambulance runs per year to make the service pay. She questioned whether enough runs could be generated., particularly since Hingham, Cohasset, and Hull combined will only generate 300 runs. Relying on Norwell and Scituate to fill the gap is already questionable.

According to Fire Capt. Robert Silvia, at least one Norwell selectman is not in favor of the service. Negative sentiments have been expressed in Scituate as well. Both towns claim a service based in Hingham cannot reach their towns rapidly enough to make the system work.

Experts say that an advanced life support system must reach a patient within 8 to 16 minutes. Parts of Hull and Cohasset would also be outside the critical response time.

Brock and Silvia question whether all five towns will agree to participate.

"If it takes all five towns (to generate 750 runs), if one, two or three towns bail out, what is the cost?" asked Silvia.

Gjesteby and Kornet agreed on the need for additional information from Norfolk-Bristol and the town fire department in order to make a wise decision. The other selectman agreed.

Assuming Hingham goes forward with the service, Cohasset can utilize the program through mutual aid. Residents already have access to an advanced life support service available from Boston Medflight. In all but the worst weather conditions, the Medflight ambulance can reach Cohasset in five minutes.

Both Brock and Silvia disputed statements by Fitzsimmons about the unwillingness of Cohasset firefighters to upgrade their training.

"The firefighters have always been willing to upgrade their training," Brock said. "South Shore Hospital has been unable to provide it."

Determined student to study in the USSR . . .

mail out of the Soviet Union at all.

Christoffel leaves nothing to chance. She's courting multi-national businesses and CBS so she can tap into their communication and postal services.

"Everybody is networking," she says. She found a teacher in Weymouth who recently spent several months in the Soviet Union, and she has been able to spend some time with Soviet exchange students living in the U.S.

Cultural differences are a challenge she's looking forward to.

So far she's learned that shorts are frowned upon and that she'll have to get used to standing in four lines whenever she wants to buy something-- one line to get into the store, one line to select her items, a third line to pay, and a last line to pick up her package.

She's packing peanut butter, tuna fish, water purifiers and a complete first aid kit in her luggage She figures if the cold cabbage soup doesn't get her, the less-than- world-class medical care might.

Using the Soviet health care system is the only part of her trip that has her worried.

Her studies and conversations have revealed that AIDS is a growing problem in the Soviet Union, largely because they reuse hypodermic needles and are lax about sterilizing them. Horror stories about medical care abound. She figures if she gets sick-- and she's never been sick-- she'll nurse herself or ask to be sent home immediately.

"I want to submerge myself in their culture, but not kill myself in the process," she said.

Gathering items of American culture to share is also on her list of things to do. Although the Soviet government limits tourists to no more than 12 of each item, she will bring such prized American goods as Beatles tapes, American music, blue jeans and make up.

Christoffel is looking forward to finding out how well she speaks Russian by putting it to the test. She has been studying Russian for the past year and a half at Buckingham Browne & Nichols School in Cambridge.

Just getting there has taken a considerable commitment on her part.

"Every Saturday I spend two hours taking the T to Cambridge," she said. It's an investment of time she makes gladly, since the school had the best possible references.

Melissa Christoffel

Some of the kids at Cohasset High are mystified by her decision to "give up" her senior year. Christoffel doesn't see it that way.

"I'm not giving up anything," she says. "I'm exchanging the opportunities here for other opportunities."

Her enthusiasm for the adventure opening up in front of her is obvious.

"I just want to go. It's a great opportunity to learn about another place.

"I want to find out what it's really like. I'd like to break down stereotypes.

"It's such a great time to go, with the walls coming down and everything opening up."

Traveling alone and being so far from home won't be a new experience for Christoffel. Her parents have always encouraged her to be independent and self-reliant. When she was in the fourth grade, she flew to London by herself.

Christoffel says her parents have always encouraged and supported her in whatever she was interested in. They have opened the door on the world for her. But Christoffel has also learned that she has to take the initiative to make her dreams come true.

"I've had a lot of advantages, but I've also sought out a lot of possibilities.

While she waits for August to roll around, Christoffel is busy reading everything she can about U.S. history and foreign policy. She's heard that the Soviets are likely to quiz her on such things.

"They will be shocked by my lack of knowledge of my country and my geography," she said.

As certain as she has been that going to Russia is the right thing to do, she's less certain about her plans when she returns.

"I'm not sure if I'll go directly to college. I may take a year off," she said. "I'm not old enough."

Christoffel may take a year off, but she won't be hanging out at the beach. She has big plans for her off year.

"I would like to work in a foreign policy bureau in Cambridge or serve as a legislative intern," she says.

Ultimately, she would like to have a career in diplomatic service, preferably working with the European Economic Community. The European economy is starting to take off and Christoffel feels she'll be well-positioned for a career when she graduates from college.

She hasn't made any firm decisions about the colleges that she will apply to, but she's seriously thinking about attending school in Canada or Europe. Although she doesn't know where she'll get her undergraduate degree, she knows that she wants to do graduate work at the London School of Economics.

"I'd like a more universal education."

While her parents are proud and supportive, Melissa's grandparents can't help but worry. She suspects that it's hard for them to shake the image of the evil empire. Recent events in Azerbaijan and other regions of the U.S.S.R. haven't eased their minds.

On the other hand, her three younger brothers reacted in stereotypical little brother fashion. As Christoffel recalls it, their top three questions were:

- "Can I have her room?"
- "Can I have her computer?'
- "Does this mean we can't get a new car?"

Matt Brown to speak Feb. 15

Matt Brown, the renowned cartoonist for Building 19, will speak to members of the Cohasset Sixty-Plus Club on February 15.

The club meeting will begin at 1 p.m. at the Unitarian Parish House, 23 North Main Street. The public is invited.

Recreation dept. events

The recreation department is taking registrations for the following classes and events:

Gunstock ski trip - Sunday, Feb.11;

Aerobic exercise classes - Tuesday and/or Thursday evenings, 6:15 to 7:30 p.m.

Dog obediance training classes - Wednesdays, 6:30 to 7:30 p.m.

Indoor golf lessons - March, 1990.

Furniture restoration/refinishing class - Wednesdays, 9 to 11 a.m.

Job opportunity program - Need help or need work? Call 383-6791 for part-time work or help.

March ski trip - details of this early March trip will be announced soon.

Drama workshop - Saturdays, 10 a.m. to noon, for grades 6 through 12; Saturdays, 1 to 3 p.m. for grades K through 5. The latest session began Saturday, Jan. 20.

The recreation department is currently taking registrations for the February vacation program.

The program will be held at the Deer Hill School for children aged three years through 12 years, from Tuesday, Feb. 20 through Friday, Feb. 23.

The program will be limited in number, therefore pre-registration and payment is necessary. Registration must be completed by Feb. 14 by calling 383-6791.

There will be a fullday program for three and four year-olds with an optional half-day program, and a full day program for children ages five through 12.

The fee for this program is $50 for the first child in a family, and $45 for all subsequent family members.

Included in the vacation program is an art project at the South Shore Art Center, movies, a field trip, a library visit, arts and crafts, bowling at the community center, guest coaches and athletes, and a pizza party.

Drama club auditions held

Auditions for the Cohasset Dramatic Club's production of "The Odd Couple," will be held Sunday, Feb. 11 from 1 to 3 p.m. and Tuesday, Feb. 13 at 7:30 p.m. at the clubhouse on Stagecoach Way.

Joseph Doniger, director of the Hull High School theatre program, will direct the production. In a reversal of the original performance, this cast will feature six females and two males. Olive Madison (female Oscar) is a sports-minded slob. Florence Ungar (female Felix) is a hypochondriac. Both characters require good acting talent and an ability to memorize many lines.

There are also four female supporting roles, known as the Trivial Pursuit Players. Living upstairs from Florence and Olive are two fun-loving and good-looking Costazuela Brothers, Manolo and Jesus. They speak with a Spanish accent.

For directions or more information, call 963-2436 or 383-2366.

Register for baseball Feb. 10

The Cohasset Little League and Pony League Baseball Program will be accepting applications for registration in the 1990 Spring/Summer Baseball program at the Cohasset High School Saturdays, Feb. 3 and 10 from 10a.m. to noon.

Enroll your child in the program at this time, since any applications accepted after March 1,1990 will be subject to a waiting list. Children who are 6 years old prior to August 1,1990 through 19 years are eligible for participation at either the Farm, Minor, Major, Pony or the newly created Senior League levels.

Parents and older sibling interested in coaching, refereeing or managing in the program should attend a Parent's Night on Thursday, Feb. 8 at the Deer Hill School at 8:30p.m. Additional meetings will be held at Deer Hill at 8:30 p.m. on the following Thursdays, March 1, March 22, and April 26, 1990.

Applications will also be available at the Log & Line, Good Sport and Leo's Exxon. Applications can be mailed with a check to CYAA., P.O. Box 121, Cohasset, MA 02025.

An Instructional Program for umpires will be conducted on Saturday, Feb. 10, 9:30 a.m. to noon. Any person over age 13 interested in umpiring should attend this session. Please contact Kevin O'Connor or Chris Kulturides (at the Log & Line for details).

Census takers needed

The U.S. Census Bureau is seeking job applicants throughout Plymouth County and has scheduled two days of employment testing sessions open to anyone age 18 years old or over interested in working in 1990 Census operations.

The Bureau is looking to fill nearly 400 temporary full-time and part-time jobs in Plymouth County lasting from a few weeks to a few months. Work will begin at intervals during February and March. Applicants must pass a simple written test designed to measure basic skills required to perform a variety of census jobs.

The list of testing dates and sites scheduled in February include:

- Monday, February 12: The Days Inn, 850 Hingham Street (Rt. 228), Rockland, MA. 9 a.m., 11 a.m. and 3 p.m.
- Wednesday, February 14: The Sheraton Plymouth, 180 Water Street, Plymouth, MA. 9 a.m., 11 a.m. and 3 p.m.

The jobs will be part of the 1990 U.S. Decennial Census, when every household and resident of the United States will be counted as mandated by the U.S. Constitution. Many jobs will be office jobs in the W. Bridgewater Census District Office, but most positions will be for door-to-door census takers. Pay is $7 an hour for census takers and mileage is reimbursed at 24 cents a mile. Employees also will be paid for training.

To apply for 1990 Census jobs or for more information, call the West Bridgewater Census District Office at (508) 580-5597. Advance registration is suggested.

❑ Congratulations go to Jill Shockman this week, she earned herself a spot on the Dean's list at Curry College. Keep up the good work Jill!

❑ Speaking of Dean's List. Jeff Hartwell deserves a round of applause too! Jeff made the Dean's list at Colby College in Waterville, Maine. Jeff is a busy person up there! As well as working hard to maintain good grades he is Vice President of Commons too.

❑ News to report on the Cohasset Community Bloodmobile which turned out to be the most productive one conducted in the South Shore area during the month of January! One hundred and eight potential donors donated 106 productive pints of blood at the Bloodmobile held on Jan. 30 at the Unitarian First Parish House. Chairman Al Odermatt and Coordinator Corrine Cahill wish to thank not only the donors but also the many volunteers who performed the many duties on the day of the bloodmobile, the Red Cross staff and the First Parish House. Thanks is also due to those who promoted the Bloodmobile by signing up donors and publicizing the event. It was nice to see several regular donors over the age of 65 again; especially Lucille McLoughlin (age 81) come to the bloodmobile for the first time and donate a productive pint of blood. There were 18 prior donors and 20 new donors and walk-ins. The next bloodmobile will be held on June 5 at the same time and the same place! Make your plans now!

❑ Congratulations go to Jon and Cindy Harmon! On Dec. 19 at Beth Israel Hospital Alyssa Paige Harmon was born! Alyssa joined her sister Lauren and her brother Grant in time to celebrate Christmas. You can imagine how busy Santa was at their house!

❑ The following Cohasset residents were named to the honor roll at Thayer Academy for the first term: Seniors Peter Izzo and Michael Moyer were named to the honors list.

Freshman Stephen Izzo was named to the high honors list.

❑ Alexander and Anne Rose of Ripley Road are the parents of a son born Dec. 31 at the South Shore Hospital.

❑ Lee Ciciotte of 54 Linden Drive, has been named to the Dean's Honor List for the Fall 1989 semester at Emerson College. To be named to the Dean's List, a student must achieve a minimum grade point average of 3.3 during the semester.

Ciciotte, a member of Emerson's class of 1991, is studying in the Division of Mass Communication with a concentration in radio.

❑ The following Cohasset residents were named to the Dean's List for the fall term at Wentworth Institute of Technology: Sasha Bubanja, building construction technology; Thomas P. Chamberlain, architectural engineering technology; Theodore Jones, computer science; and Mark F. Rattenbury, electronic engineering technology.

❑ Stephanie Endris, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Endris of 46 Black Rock Road, will be studying the Appalachian region for the spring semester of 1990.

The Appalachian Semester Program is one of six off-campus study programs in the United States that is offered through Dickinson College.

❑ Cohasset High School graduate Amanda Church is playing a major role for the Massasoit Community College women's basketball team as they enter the second half of the National Junior College Athletic Association (NJCAA) schedule.

Sporting a 7-7 record,the Massasoit women are being led in two categories by the former CHS star.

"Amanda is great around the basket," noted Coach Dale Snyder.

In 14 games thus far, Amanda leads the Green and White with 15 rebounds per game and scoring with 14 points per game.

"She works hard on offense and is improving on defenese," added Coach Snyder.

Gjesteby seeks second term

Selectman Martha K. Gjesteby is seeking a second three-year term on the board of selectmen.

Gjesteby has served in numerous capacities over thirty years. The board of selectmen appointed her as its representative to the South Shore Coalition. Additionally, she has served as treasurer of the Massachusetts Area Planning Council (MAPC) for the past four years, and is a member of the MAPC's executive board, currently serving on the Joint Regional Transportation committee.

Former elected offices include the planning board and two terms on the school committee; she served as secretary of both boards, and served as chairman of the communication council steering committee for Cohasset schools.

Gjesteby served on the capital budget committee and the tri-town commission, the citizens' advisory committee to study the feasibility of restoration of the Old Colony Railroad, and the Joint Regional Transportation Committee.

Her civic memberships include the Cohasset Community Center, of which she is a former director of membership; the Community Garden Club of which she is a former board member; Cohasset Historical Society, and Friends of Paul Pratt Library.

Gjesteby holds a bachelor's degree in chemistry from Simmons College, with graduate work at Harvard University. She was employed by Dana Farber Center and Harvard Public Health. She has served as clerk of the board of a family-owned business for many years.

During this past year Gjesteby initiated and implemented the formation of a drug and alcohol committee which is in the process of delivering its final report to selectmen.

Gjesteby said: "Local government has become increasingly subject to numerous state and federal regulations which impact almost every aspect of service to the community."

She feels her most important contribution to the board of selectmen is her purview of town government, culled from a long history of service. Additionally, she feels the creation of a drug study committee, which she initiated, will have a far-reaching and positive effect on the community.

Gjesteby and her husband Arne reside on Old Pasture Road, where they raised four children.

Rep. Murray supports new tuition program

Rep. Mary Jeanette Murray recently supported a new state program which insures a family's tuition savings against rising college costs.

The College Opportunity Fund, a first-in-the-nation program, encourages families to save for college by guaranteeing that those savings will keep pace with tuition increases, Rep. Murray said.

During its first year, the program is expected to help thousands of families save for participating public and private colleges in Massachusetts, she added.

The College Opportunity Fund allows families to purchase tax-exempt, municipal minibonds in amounts as low as $50. The bonds are worth a predetermined percentage of a college's tuition. This predetermined percentage will remain fixed — locking in tomorrow's tuition costs at today's prices.

Attend budget hearing

The school committee will be presenting its proposed budget to the public tonight, Feb. 8 at 8 p.m. at the high school.

This is an opportunity for all voters to take a closer look at the budget for next year. Remember, unless you take an active part in reviewing and questioning this budget now, your comments and opinions later will bear little significance.

We have heard some grumbling about the "lack of cooperation" from the school department in complying with a level-funded budget request. The fact is, they have prepared a level-funded budget for next year. But it is one they will not support.

On several occasions individual members of this school committee have said that for the good of public education in Cohasset, they cannot support a budget that will eat away services and staff.

The budget they are proposing, one that will likely require some level of Proposition 2 1/2 override, will simply retain many of the services that were slashed last year. There are no new programs added into this proposed "growth budget" for the next fiscal year.

Before we all scatter into opposing corners, it would be wise for the inquiring minds of Cohasset to attend Thursday night's public hearing. It promises to be informative, and it may provide the taxpayers of this town good reason to spend more money. On the other hand, people may be convinced that this is an unrealistic and unfundable budget.

We will attend this session, and will make our opinions known in future editions.

This is an opportunity for all residents to become more knowledgeable about the operation of their town government - to become aware of where our tax dollars are spent. We congratulate the school committee for scheduling this public hearing and for publicizing the event well in advance.

It will be interesting to see how many residents attend this meeting. We wonder if those residents who "grumble" in private will be part of this public event.

Continental Cablevision is broadcasting selectmen's meetings as they happen on local cable Channel 3.

Alzheimer's benefit Feb. 11

Saporito's Florence Club Cafe in Hull will sponsor "A Very Special Sunday Brunch" to benefit the Alzheimer's Disease Support Group of the South Shore on Sunday, Feb. 11.

The menu will feature four courses of Italian regional specialties beginning with a champagne cocktail and including a wild mushroom tart with grilled shrimp, frittata with leeks, sausage and red peppers, basil cured salmon with Mascarpone cheese and caviar, wild rice crespelle with asparagus, proscuitto and cheese, wine and cappuccino.

The ADSGSS, Inc. is a nonprofit charitable organization dedicated to providing information and support to families dealing with the problems of Alzheimer's Disease. The group holds monthly meetings which are free and open to the public.

Reservations are required for the noon or 2 p.m. seatings for "A Very Special Sunday Brunch". Call Saporito's at 617-925-3023 for availability of space. The donation of $50 per person is tax deductable.

Hurray for the smoke-free skies

Letters

To the Editor:

Beginning Feb. 25, we are free to fly the new smoke-free skies thanks to the courage of Congress and the overwhelming support of the general public for a prohibition on smoking on airlines.

It is important to remember that a majority of smokers and nonsmokers support this prohibition. Americans have come a long way in our understanding and intolerance of the evidence that the tobacco industry has been denying for so long — that the connection between smoking and heart disease, lung cancer, and emphysema is irrefutable. Former Surgeon General C. Everett Koop called smoking the single most preventable cause of disease and death in our society. Reports from the Surgeon General and the National Academy of Sciences also attribute 5,000 deaths per year to the hazards of breathing secondhand smoke.

On airplanes, where passengers have traditionally resigned themselves to the strictures of close quarters, poor air circulation, and reduced air supply, the elimination of the hazards of environmental tobacco smoke is more than a welcome relief — it may be a life saver.

Just ask any of this country's 80,000 flight attendants who, up until now, have had to inhale — on a daily basis — toxic compounds and carcinogens contained in tobacco smoke. It was this environment that led one flight attendant to testify before Congress, "We are trained, ready, and able to risk our lives each day for the safety of our passengers, but we are not willing to risk our health or our lives so someone can smoke on an airplane."

We shouldn't forget too quickly the dramatic impact this landmark law will have on our health. Smoking still kills almost 400,000 Americans each year — more people than are killed by AIDS, alcohol, drug abuse, auto accidents, fires, murders, and suicides combined. The tobacco industry continues to decry all anti-smoking policies as an infringement on individual rights, and it continues to advertise and promote tobacco products to our young people here at home and in ever-expanding overseas markets.

The new law is a victory for all airline passengers. We commend Congress for its bold step in support of the rights of all Americans to breathe healthier air; and let the prohibition serve notice to the tobacco industry that we won't stand for its continued profiting from death and disease.

Signed,
Joseph Godzik, V.M.D.

Norfolk County-Newton Lung Association

Highway Dept. is not overstaffed

To the Editor:

As an elected official, I feel compelled to address what may mildly be termed misleading information about my recent meeting with the advisory committee.

This year, as did other departments, I reduced funding levels in a number of line items of my budget as directed by the advisory committee. This was intended to allow for a cost of living allowance for my personnel and still level fund my total budget.

At the recent meeting to discuss my budget, the fact that no major resurfacing of streets may occur, an erroneous assumption was made — that I am overstaffed! First, resurfacing projects are state funded and subsequently put out to bid. My staff is not an integral part of that work.

Our mission is to maintain, sweep and plow the 37 miles of town approved streets, 11 miles of private ways and the sidewalks in this town. We clear and repair the 1100 storm drains and culverts throughout the community. To do this, I have four loyal, hard working dedicated people on a full-time basis. My part-time secretary handles numerous office procedures, telephone calls and radio dispatching which frees all of the crew and myself for a part of the week.

I further feel that this letter of explanation would be considered unnecessary by most, but to the few that would read I'm overstaffed and believe it, I"m far from it!

Harold W. Litchfield
Highway Surveyor

SHINE volunteers help with Medex

The new Medex rates will soon take effect and the increase in premiums will force many seniors to reevaluate their supplemental insurance coverage.

Deciding on a policy that best meets your particular needs can be very confusing. The Executive Office of Elder Affairs has volunteers trained to assist individuals in comparing policies and choosing one that provides adequate coverage.

Before you make any decisions about your current Medex coverage, talk to a SHINE volunteer. These volunteers can be reached through your local Council On Aging Offices or by calling Pat Ryan at the Cohasset Council on Aging, 383-9112.

This service is free of charge and provided by the Executive office of Elder Affairs, in conjunction with South Shore Elder Services.

Cohasset recycling news . . .

This week's article was written by Jennifer Longley of the recycling committee.

Do you ever feel like you're buying more packaging than product? More plastic than panty hose? Sometimes I wonder what happened to paper and cardboard and miss buying candy bars in paper wrappers. It has been estimated that 50 percent of the trash we throw away is packaging-often unnecessary. In 1988, Americans spent $32 billion just on food packaging, up from $28 billion in 1986. Packaging is out there, enticing shoppers with claims of convenience, durability, stay-freshness, and with colors, and often, creating the illusion that the product is bigger than it really is.

The need to reduce wasteful and hazardous packaging is being recognized by the environmental community and solid waste managers for a variety of reasons. Solid waste disposal is now an expensive business. Most landfills in Massachusetts have reached capacity and communities are turning to alternatives such as incineration and recycling. Cohasset pays $60 per ton to cart our non-recyclable trash away to the incinerator. By reducing the amount of packaging we throw away, we can save a lot of money.

While excessive packaging can be both misleading and costly to the consumer, I think the greater problem is the danger to the environment and the public's health from plastic packaging. The production of plastic packaging uses, and releases, a broad range of toxic chemicals and heavy metals,many of which are known human carcinogens. Later, the incineration of plastics contaminates the air not only with hazardous chemicals, but heavy metals don't combust at all and have been found in the emissions and the ash from incinerators. Cohasset residents should keep this in mind when choosing items to buy since all of the plastic we throw away at the RTF, except soda bottles, is incinerated.

Degradable plastic is a popular new issue and a hot new marketing tool. Don't fall for it. It doesn't work yet in the sense that none of the so-called degradable

Cohasset Agrees

CARE

to Recycle Everything

plastics are biodegradable. They all leave behind a "plastic dust" or tiny bits of plastic, when, and if, they degrade. Secondly, they won't degrade in landfills, the ocean, or incinerators.

Many communities are taking action by banning certain types of packaging. For example, Nantucket has prohibited island merchants from using non-biodegradable packaging to wrap their wares, with some exceptions for fresh meat and vegetables. Cambridge has also adopted a similar measure. The state of Maine has banned so-called "brick pack" juice boxes because the multi-material packaging is not recyclable. Berkely, CA has banned polystyrene (Styrofoam) products and packaging, and Minneapolis has banned most plastic packaging altogehter.

There are a lot of steps individuals can take to help reduce excessive packaging. The following is a list. Keep it on hand to refer to.

* Don't purchase over-packaged products. This serves to boycott irresponsible packaging, and to support manufacturers who package responsibly and in an environmentally sound manner.

* Don't purchase plastic packaging if there is an alternative available to you. Buy glass when available. Manufacturing glass with recycled glass uses less energy than using virgin materials.

* Bring your own bags to the supermarket, or ask for paper bags and bring them back with you next time you go shopping until they wear out.

* Re-use any packaging that can be. For example, deli counter containers, plastic vegetable bags, jars.

* Support legislation designed to reduce packaging. Call Jennifer Longley (383-0796) for a list of current bills.

* Write or call manufacturers (some have 800 consumer #s printed on the packages) to ask them to change their packaging, to express support for their good packaging, or to tell them why you won't be buying a particular product in the future.

* Buy packages that have been made from recycled materials. Identify these by looking for the recycle symbol or a written note saying the package is made from recycled fibers.

* Avoid "mirco-wave dish enclosed" products. Instead use micro-wave safe dishes you already have.

* Buy and cook in bulk, in large quantities. Then freeze most of it to heat up in the future.

* If you don't really need a bag, tell the clerk. Save bags you do get and, if you accumulate an excess, donate them to a thrift shop, a church bazaar, or other organizations that sell things and need bags.

* Don't buy polystyrene (Styrofoam) especially coffee cups. Ask the shop to switch to paper cups. Buy things like whole chickens so you don't have to buy the polystyrene under the chicken parts packages. Ask the grocer to use cardboard for meats.

Tip for the week

We no longer need to use plastic bags to bag our trash since it all goes into the dumpster in the blue house. You can now use paper bags!

Troubleshooting at the RTF

Never throw away electric appliances. The RTF will accept them for a $10 fee that covers the cost of disposing of them properly. Or, if they still work, drop them off at our "boutique" near the blue house where everyone can drop off any unwanted items and maybe find something you want yourself, such as a lamp, jigsaw puzzle or flower pots.

Cohasset Chamber of Commerce news . . .

By Paula Knowles
Publicity Chairman

The Cohasset Chamber of Commerce has received much publicity in 1989 for its many programs, both new and old. The most widely publicized and appreciated seemed to be the school committee forum held in September, and the "Little Piece of Home" care packages sent out this fall to all of our 1989 high school graduates. Both of these programs were new for 1989, and the Chamber intends to make these programs part of our yearly schedule.

Another event introduced this past year was the Bill of Rights art contest for our Osgood School third grade classes, and the Constitution Picnic on the Common in July, which began with the awards ceremony for the art contest winners, and ended with a rousing band concert. This, too, we hope to repeat in 1990.

These programs were a lot of hard work to put on, but the appreciation received from the public made them all worthwhile; and the money spent on them was certainly justified. But what about 1990? What's up for this year?

In 1989, we at the Cohasset Chamber of Commerce were dedicated to expanding our efforts to fulfill that part of our charter that states that we are an organization that must, in part, work to the good of our town. We feel that we have taken some good and inventive steps to that end; and we will continue these programs, along with the many other charitable and community-oriented programs that we have always been involved in, for 1990 and in the future. But in this new year, we also feel that it is time to work on the other side of the Chamber of Commerce. Namely, it is time to give something back to the business community that has supported us and our town since the Chamber first came into being.

The first step in our 1990 plans for the business community is to publish a Cohasset Chamber of Commerce Business Directory. All Chamber businesses will be listed under the categories of their choice; and this directory will be available to the public, free of charge. The listings and the directory itself will be published using funds from the membership dues, and will not cost the member businesses anything extra.

Free publicity is the least that we feel we owe to those businesses who join and work with us throughout the year. And we are now exploring ways to put together an information and tourist office or service, where we can get the business and retail information directly to anyone who would like it on a drop in basis. At this time, we handle this service only by phone or mail requests. We would like to have the opportunity to pass on our members' names and service information, in person, to anyone who wants it. Cohasset businesses are service oriented, and the Chamber would like to reflect that to the public.

If we ask you to shop Cohasset — and we do — the least we can do is tell you what we offer. In 1990, we plan to do just that.

CHS students to present a Cabaret

If you are looking for a way to celebrate Valentine's Day with your sweetie, check out the Valentine Cabaret.

The Cabaret is the annual fundraiser sponsored by the Cohasset Arts Boosters Club. This year it will be held on Feb. 13 at Kimball's Restaurant.

For $10 you get a light buffet supper, an opportunity to bid on pottery and jewelry made by Cohasset High School students, and a cabaret show put on by the talented musicians at the high school.

The students have concocted an intimate evening filled with romantic atmosphere. There's something to please every musical taste from classical to top 40 love duets.

And, of course, what's love without laughter? Inquiring minds have discovered that comedian Peter Kasperowicz, fresh from the comedy clubs of Boston, plans to make a return visit.

The evening is cheaper than a box of Godiva chocolates and all the money goes to support the talented artists and musicians at Cohasset High School.

So quick call 383-0461 to reserve your tickets and put a big red heart around Feb. 13 on your calendar.

Let the rehearsals begin! (L to r) Ted Graham, Karin Story, Jim Cedarstrom, Maggie Moore, Jody Kehoe, Katie McNamara, Meredith Hansen, Barbara Migliaccio, and choral director Bryan Marks rehearse for the Feb. 13 Valentine Cabaret. The show, which will be presented at Kimball's By The Sea, is sponsored by the Cohasset Arts Boosters.

6th Grade Writing Contest

The sixth grade at the Deer Hill School is having a writing contest. It will last for four weeks. It is entirely confidential. This is because each class's papers will go to another class, for them to choose the 1st, 2nd and 3rd places.

Each week we get a new topic. For example, the first assignment was to write a composition on a person we know and admire. The stories must be at least one page long.

The current standings, for the 1st assignment are: 1st place—Tafana Fiore, Heather Littlehale, Chris McKenna, and Jennifer Cullivan. 2nd place—Jessi Flynn, Simeon Ketchum, Jennifer Ripley, and Lauren De Vito. 3rd place—Katie Medinger, Holly Pereira, Laura Slotnick, and Eric Henry. There were also sixteen teachers' awards given.

Written by Megan McNamara

SOMEONE SPECIAL

Out of all of my best friends there is one that is very, very special to me. I admire and look up to her for the way she does things. She cares not only for herself but mostly for others. She is very pretty and kind. You could never find someone as agreeable as her. Her short dark brown hair shines in the light. And her bright blue eyes twinkle when she smiles.

Each time I am with her we always have so much fun. I admire her because of her style and the way she turns glum things into happy things. For example, we always get into mischief and we get the fun out of it! She is very courageous and mischievous. We're either raiding the refrigerator and the next minute short-sheeting my sister's bed. She is helpful and supportive. Hopefully our wonderful friendship will last forever.

If you are ever in a jam she is always there to lean on. If I needed help with any kind of a problem she is there. Even her smile mends a patch. Words do not describe her.

MY HERO

On June 30, 1988, my uncle died. He had been suffering from cancer for three and a half years.

I remember being so sad and confused when my parents and cousin, (my uncle's only child) shared the news with me. I rushed over to my cousin and we hugged for a long time. My mother assured me that my uncle was finally at peace and that our memories of him would follow us throughout our lives.

It was very painful walking through the days after my uncle's death, as it still is today. One special memory I have about my uncle is when he taught his daughter and me how to ski. I loved how he was so patient on the chair-lifts and on the mountains. Another fun time with him is when he took his daughter and me down to Pennsylvania each spring vacation to visit our cousins.

My uncle was always there for anyone in the family. He was a very thoughtful, generous, and loving man. That is why he was very special to me.

My family and I would visit my uncle almost every day, and it was so painful to see him grow thinner and thinner and weaker and weaker.

I remember praying each night that he would live another day and keep strong and healthy. My prayers never came true because each day my uncle got sicker and sicker until he had to walk with a cane. I realized that God had another plan for him.

My uncle and I had a very good relationship, and loved each other very much. He was not only an uncle to me, but a very good friend.

Blue was always my uncle's favorite color, so whenever my family and I see a blue jay, or a blue jay feather we always think of it as a sign from my uncle saying he's in a perfect peace.

Before he died he gave me a picture of a sailboat. He had always loved sailing and knew that his daughter and I had been taking sailing lessons together that summer. Whenever I look at the sailboat picture I always think of my wonderful uncle.

Whenever I hear "The Wind Beneath My Wings," from "Beaches" I always cry and think of my uncle. . .especially the line that says, "Did you ever know that you're my hero?" because my uncle was my hero.

by: Jennifer Cullivan

MY SWISS FRIEND

My person whom I admire is a man named Beat Hutmacher. He is a great person because he is nice, kind, makes you laugh and loves to ski.

He has been my friend for about 6 years.

He is tall, over 6 feet 2 inches and is the strongest skier I know. He is in his late 20's. His nick-name is "Yeti" which means "The Abominable Snow Man." He owns a skiing travel and mountain guide service called "Yeti's Tiefschnce Abenteuer." He is a very good ski guide and has been skiing for many years since childhood.

His family has been friends with my father for a long time. They own a hotel near the mountains in Interlaken, Switzerland.

Whenever you are feeling down Yeti always cheers you up.

I admire his ability to always know what is best to do and where it is best to ski in the mountains.

He is the mountain guide for the Swiss Army in Switzerland.

He is also the only man in the world to climb the Eiger Mountain which is 3,970 m (13,026 ft.) two times in three days non-stop. .

WONDER DAD

The person who I admire the most in my life is a hard working lobsterman and part time carpenter. He appears to be quiet and is gentle with a warm smile. His easy going attitude and devotion to his family is what I admire the most.

This admirable man happens to be my father, John, who has lived in Cohasset all of his forty-seven years. His work day begins at six a.m. and never seems to end.

During his free time, he likes to read the paper and relaxes with his dog. He takes my sister and me for walks and even helps my mother around the house.

I owe a lot to my father for teaching me everything I know. Someday, I hope to follow in his footsteps and be as loving and caring as he is to me!

GRAMMA JANE

I have many interests and most of them come from Gramma Jane. She is 82 and still very active. Gramma Jane has influenced me to pursue art, gardening, music and many other things. Nature is a big thing too. My father says that she can spot a bird from 40 yards away, tell you what kind it is, its scientific name and if it migrates. If it does, she'll tell where.

Gramma Jane's hobby is doing crossword puzzles. Gramma Jane's dog, Fredrick is company, a companion and a walking mate.

Gramma frequently works out on her Nordic Track and walks 2-4 miles a day. Golf is another activity that she enjoys. Speaking of activity, she is very active in her community. She works hard on the fundraising fair every year. Gramma Jane also gets together with her neighbors to play bridge. On the walls in our house are her water color paintings.

Gramma Jane is a great person to talk to if you have a problem, but mostly she is just fun to be with because she can teach you things on many subjects.

MY DAD FRAN

My dad Fran is the chief engineer on the Bert Rinoure. He goes from Braintree to Bangor, Maine with a few stops in the middle. My dad might be the best engineer in the U.S.A. Dad goes away on the ship for three days or more but we get to see him when he is in port.

Dad has spent his life by the sea and has a tremendous amount of knowledge about the sea and other things. Dad is also very good around the house and there is just about nothing he can't fix.

This summer, I went on three trips on the ship with him and saw many different sea animals. My dad is very strong. He has been around the world on ships and has been to places including Kenya, South Africa, the Ivory Coast, Azors, Portugal, Mexico, the Caribbean, England, Amsterdam, Spain, Japan, Guam, Seychells, Nova Scotia and many more.

I love my dad. He is the best father in the world.

by Andy Collins

GRANDPA TED

This is a story about my grandfather. I call him Grampa Ted. He comes at least twice a month on Tuesday nights for supper. Everyone in my family likes it when he comes from Cape Cod to see us. When we were younger we used to color in coloring books or draw with him. Sometimes we still do. Now my brother tries to teach him Nintendo, and we show him our current school work and art.

The best times are when we go to his house because we have six cousins and quite a few aunts and uncles. We usually go on holidays. It's fun because we have countless games of hide and seek and tag, but sometimes there are a few tears.

After supper the children usually put on some sort of skit, but this Christmas we put on a fashion show because we all got new clothes.

Wherever we are or whatever we are doing, we enjoy seeing Grampa Ted and he enjoys seeing us.

Chiropractic for Health

by Dr. Debra M. Tranberg
Chiropractor

WHIPPED OUT OF SHAPE

Although whiplash is an injury that will not always appear on an X-ray, the pain can be felt acutely by its victims. This type of injury is often experienced as the result of a rear-end automobile collision. Just after impact, the muscles and ligaments of the neck go through hyperextension and then hyperflexion. The result is a neck injury that may not always be immediately apparent to the patient. In fact, the injury may not be felt up to hours or days later. Even so, an immediate chiropractic examination is necessary to help evaluate the present condition of the neck, and help prevent significant spinal derangements. In the meantime, drivers should be sure to adjust the headrests in their cars so that the head does not move backwards more than four inches from its upright position.

For such types of sudden injury or similar conditions where discomfort results, we urge you to come to SCITUATE HARBOR CHIROPRACTIC, and experience the benefits of chiropractic applications. Utilizing a natural drugless approach the origin of your problem and discomfort can be effectively addressed. Located at 80 Front St., Scituate Harbor. Tel. 545-7388. By appt. Early morning and late evening appts. Workers Comp cases, VISA, M/C and most insurance plans accepted.

HINT: Longterm pain from whiplash often stems from an unhealed disc in the neck.

Great T.V. Turn-Off Week

The P.S.O. has joined other South Shore Communities in "The Great T.V. Turn-Off Week." The designated week is February 5-11.

This is strictly a voluntary program and we would like to encourage you and your family to participate at whatever level you are comfortable. You may wish to limit viewing to specified times or programs such as only watching the news or one program per day. Try a T.V. black-out for the week.

Participation at any level will help promote responsible viewing as opposed to "habit" watching.

We will have a "Turn-Off Handbook" and cover letter ready to go home with the children later this week.

Judith Black, a storyteller, will come to all elementary schools on Tuesday, Feb. 6.

The program is intended to be fun. Please enjoy it.

Apple Update

PSO President Pat Baird reports that she has ordered three more Apple II GS Computers for the Cohasset Schools this week. Please keep those slips coming in. We have only six more weeks to go!

P.S.O. news

Do you know that the Osgood School PSO holds frequent Room Mother Meetings to discuss concerns and happenings at Osgood. If you have any questions or concerns please contact your Room Mother.

The PSO still has a few Osgood Sweatshirts left. . . Adult Large Crewneck and Child Large Crewneck and Hooded. . . Call Linda Keller (6873).

Kindergarten registration

Kindergarten registration will continue daily from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. daily. Children who will be 5 years of age on or before December 31, 1990 are eligible to attend Kindergarten in September 1990. A birth certificate must be presented at time of registration if not on file in the Cohasset Town Hall.

A class outing

Mr. McDonald took the whole class out on a walk into the woods. It was peaceful, cold, quiet, beautiful and there was snow everywhere.

By Maren Cameron

Our walk in the woods was very pretty! We saw birds and snowflakes. It was very peaceful and sort of cold. When the snow falls down your back, it's freezing. I think it's very neat!!!

By Derek Bugley

I was walking down a path in the woods. It was cold. There was snow everywhere. It was very peaceful and beautiful. Everything was white.

By Eric Wenmark

I walked in the snow and heard a sound. It was a bird above my head. I looked up at it, it flew very high. I sort of made a sound and it looked at me.

By Matt Lewis

As I walk among the snowy trees, and my hair ripples in the icy breeze, the snow cast a tiny glow, upon my face and hands so cold. As quiet as mice the snowdrops fall, and the wind whispers a silent call. The woods so peaceful, and so free, make enchanting feelings well up in me. I feel so happy, as I stand, in that winter wonderland.

By Alexandra Creighton

Mid-Year reminders

When visiting the Osgood, even when "just dropping something off," please remember to check in with the office first! It can be very disruptive to classes to have people popping in unannounced, especially since it happens quite often.

It appears that the bus situation is here to stay for a while. Just a reminder that children may not switch bus routes for any reason this year. We appreciate your follow through with regard to this request.

Health course offered

Michael Gill, Health Coordinator for the Cohasset Schools, is offering a graduate level course to the teachers in Cohasset entitled A Comprehensive Approach to Wellness and Drug Free Youth. This will be a three credit graduate level course offered through Bridgewater State College.

The focus of the course will be on investigating ways to improve elementary school health education in Cohasset. The plan is to involve as many elementary school teachers as possibe in the course. The course will also provide learning experiences in areas of human health and behavior which may better enable staff members to favorably influence not only the health of their students but also their own health. Therefore, the course will be open to all Cohasset faculty and support staff.

Sixth grade assistant

During the month of January, Mrs. Cisneros has had a teaching assistant in her sixth grade classroom. Her name is Sarah Hamilton, who is currently a sophomore at Colby College in Waterville, Maine.

Miss Hamilton is studying education and thinking of possibly pursuing a career in teaching. As part of her course work in education, she is working as an apprentice in the sixth grade at Deer Hill School. During her stay she has been observing in different classrooms, working with reading and math groups, and teaching some of the sixth grade Language Arts classes.

Much of her time has been spent helping Mrs. Cisneros' class prepare a television news program. For this project, Miss Hamilton helped students write and edit news stories, and prepare video-taped segments for the program.

Both Mrs. Cisneros and all her students agree that having Miss Hamilton has been a wonderful opportunity. Everyone has benefitted from her help and enjoyed her warm, pleasant personality.

Swim team results

The Cohasset High Swim Team, took part in a meet January 30 involving swimmers from Duxbury, Sandwich, Scituate and Cohasset.

Cohasset's relay team was first in the 400 meter free relay and second in the 200 meter medley relay. Chris Henderson was second in the 100 meter butterfly.

The four-man relay team consists of Henderson, Chip Anderson, Dave Leahy and Niki Hawks. Cohasset's times qualify them for the Sectional Finals and State Finals in February.

The boys' basketball team is playing a better technical game than they have all season. They're playing good, consistent ball, according to their coach, and they're just beginning to mesh together as a team.

But, Arnie Reppucci says their greatest personal attribute becomes a drawback on the court. It is the very reason they can't seem to pull out a victory in the tense final moments of a match.

"They're too nice," Reppucci says. "They're wonderful, nice kids who have great temperaments. But that's not what they need when it's down to the final crunch in a very intense game. They crack with the pressure."

But their consistency gets them started and kept them motivated for a good part of both games last week. In fact, Reppucci believes if they only continued their tremendous efforts, they could have pulled out two wins, rather than coming home his week with dual defeats.

The first game last week was against Carver High. It was a close game as both teams entered the fourth quarter with 30 points.

But, as the coach recalls, Carver took their intensity and ran with it. They trapped and pressed Cohasset, who couldn't respond to the pressure, Reppucci says.

"Their level of play has risen throughout the season," Reppucci says. "But they have a problem with pressure. I've explained that to them."

Tri-captain Linc Marsac was high scorer for the Skippers with 19 points, while tri-captain Mike Ellinger managed eight points.

Their next match was against a tough East Bridgewater team, and the tallest player in the league, six-foot, 11-inch Bob Peterson.

Going into the fourth quarter, Cohasset was down by two points. The game against the league's fourth place team went down to the wire, but Cohasset was upset in the end, 53-47.

Some credit for East Bridgewater's win must be given, at least in part, to the "hoop God." According to Reppucci, in this instance it was some unexpected and exceptional shooting from a second string guard.

As for Peterson, the Skippers did a magnificent job of holding the giant down to human level, Reppucci says. And although there were several college scouts in the crowd that night, their conversations quickly changed from Peterson to Cohasset's Marsac, who scored 26 points in the match.

The coach believes a lot of Cohasset's misfortunes could be blamed on bad calls (or non calls) by the game's ref's. "I was quite disappointed with the referees," he says, "and I made my case known to them. For a team to take only two foul shots in a game is not fair."

Certainly not, considering East Bridgewater gathered 23 points from their foul line.

"We're not playing like a last place team," according to Reppucci. "And every coach has said that to me. They know when they play against us, it's not an automatic win for them.

"At the beginning of the year I said this team doesn't have a lot of 'horses.' It was our goal to be competitive, and I think we're just beginning to hit our stride. In our last ten games, it's been anybody's game. Now we're going to take the spoiler's route."

Cohasset will be meeting three of the top four teams in the league, and two will be on home court. Reppucci believes the team is playing well enough now they could pull off a couple of upsets down the stretch.

This week, Cohasset was scheduled to meet first place Norwell at home. On Friday, the Skippers travel to Hull, a team which should be in either first or second place by that time.

"The kids' attitudes are great and I'm very pleased with that," the coach says. "It has not been an easy season for them."

GYMNASTICS

Cohasset didn't expect a win last week against number one-ranked Scituate High, and they didn't get it. What they also didn't expect was a season-high team score for the Skippers, nor a season-ending injury for their tri-captain, Michelle Hartley.

As coach Ruth Ann Sargent explains, it was a real mixed bag for Cohasset. Although they lost to Scituate, they gathered a team score of 117 - they're best ever, in Sargent's recollection.

But they paid dearly for the high score. During a vaulting routine, Hartley suffered a dislocated knee and will be out for the remainder of her senior year season. Hartley is wearing a knee brace, because her doctor suspects some ligament damage, a dejected coach reports this week.

But Sargent remains optimistic for the second-place Skippers, who managed their 117 team score without the complete services of the traditionally best all-around, Hartley.

"Overall, we had a great night, with the exception of Michelle's accident," Sargent says, noting that all the top four teams, including Duxbury, Scituate and Hanover, have sustained serious injuries.

In the uneven bar competition, Carrie Ripley and Liz Buckley scored their personal bests. The top three Cohasset scorers in this event were Hartley, Tara Gallagher and Buckley. "This was our high for the season. Every girl hit everything in her routine," Sargent says.

On the balance beam, Hartley was number one among the Skippers, followed by a personal best from Gallagher, and the third highest performance by Ripley.

Cohasset had a great night in vaulting, despite the accident. Hartley finished top among the Cohasset competitors, with Gallagher in second place and Buckley in third. Justin Muir and Marnie DeMichele also hit personal high scores in this event.

Following Hartley's injury, the team continued to persevere. Incredibly, every one of Cohasset's floor exercise competitors performed personal bests in that event. It was, according to Sargent, " a superb effort."

Based on the results of last week's match, Gallagher still maintains a chance of making it into the state competition. She needs some extra attention on the vaulting, but Sargent believes this hard worker will make it. Her all-around competition against Scituate netted Gallagher a personal high score of 30.85. Teammate Liz Buckley also recorded a personal high score in that event.

Next Saturday, Cohasset will compete in the All League meet at Carver High.

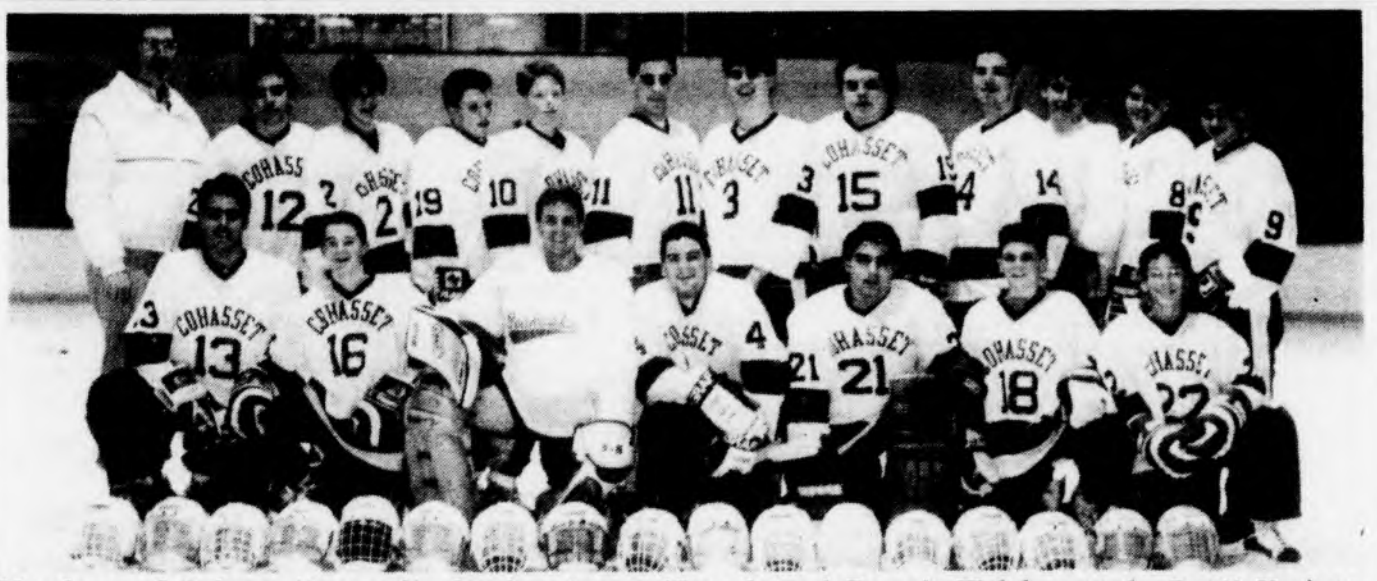
Although Cohasset is in second place this week, they could drop to third if they lose two out of their final two matches. Wednesday, Cohasset was scheduled to meet a tough Randolph team at home. On Feb. 12, Cohasset will meet Carver. Although the Skippers were victorious over both these teams early in the season, Sargent believes it will take a total team effort to grab a victory this week.

"It will be really close," she predi ts. "A fall on the beam could lose the match for any o us."

WRESTLING

Like many other Cohasset teams this season, the wrestling squad is simply trying to hold its own in this year of rebuilding. Despite two setbacks last week, Coach Torin Sweeney believes his team is making significant strides.

"These kids are young - some are very young and inexperienced. But we knew that going into this season," he said. "But we feel they're all doing very well. They're gaining valuable experience with each match."



Some of that valuable experience was given last week to nine members of the junior varsity squad who participated in the South Sectional JV tournament.

Two wrestlers, Steve Harrington, and Jed Terry, qualified for the state JV competition on Feb. 18. Harrington, who placed fourth, is a freshman and Terry, a thirdplace finisher, is a sophomore. They both qualified in the 122 lb. weight division.

The other junior varsity participants included Chris Stevens, who won one match in the 110 lb. class, Brandon DeVoe, who won a match in the 103 lb. class, and Ryan Freeman, a 7th grader who won in the 95 lb. division. Sweeney also applauded the efforts of Max Nivaud, Wess DeSantis, Danny Baird, who won a couple of his matches, Ben Chittick, who scored two victories, and 8th grader David Zadel.

In last week's varsity action, Cohasset lost to a very strong Randolph squad - a team that has yet to lose in a dual match.

Bill Baird scored a victory in the 130 lb class. and Pat Conroy won in the 189 lb. division. Both wins were by pins, according to Sweeney.

On Saturday, Cohasset was downed twice - by King Phillip High School, 36-29, and by North Attleboro, 38-28.

In the King Phillip competition, Greg Nourie was victorious in his 112 lb. division. Baird won by pin, along with teammate Conroy. And Oliver Nivaud scored a victory in the 152 lb. division.

In the North Attleboro match, Carlo Lagrotteria won his first varsity match by a pin. Josh Muir wrestled to a tie in the 140 lb. division. Teammate John Bowen was tied in the 145 lb. class, while Nivaud and Eric Theriault won by pin.

This week, Cohasset was scheduled to meet Sharon High - a team Coach Sweeney is not familiar with. On Wednesday of this week, the varsity wrestlers were slated to meet a tough Carver High team. Both matches promise to be tough and competitive for the young Cohasset athletes, Sweeney predicted.

HOCKEY

It wasn't a great week for the varsity hockey team, but Coach Dennis Walsh credits his players for refusing to play dead.

The team lost last week to a strong Whitman-Hanson squad, 5-1.

"It was a close game for a while," Walsh said. "But Whitman-Hanson has a pretty good team. They were tied for first with Hanover.

"But with our inexperience, we eventually broke down with mistakes," he added. "That's been our big problem throughout the season."

Despite their inexperience, the team is a hard-working group, according to Coach Walsh. "I have to give them a lot of credit. They keep trying all the time. They never give up."

Cohasset also recorded a loss Monday night against Hull. The final score was 6-0.

The Skippers' Joel Reidy looked good in goal, with a number of great saves, Coach Walsh commented.

"Again, this was a game which was closer than the score indicates," he said. Although both teams played evenly, Hull took advantage of some Cohasset mistakes to score two quick goals in the first period.

His "young line" of Mike Reynclds, Chuck Endris and John Murphy was solid against the Pirates, while Kevin Mulcahy was credited with a good defensive effort.

"At this point, we're just trying to make the most of a learning year," Walsh stated. "Next year, they'll be a little older, and a little wiser."

This week, Cohasset was scheduled to play first place Hanover on Wednesday night. On Saturday, the Skippers go against Abington at Rockland at 7 p.m.

There will be a special junior varsity game against Hull on Friday, Feb. 9 at 3 p.m. at the MDC rink in Weymouth.

Fitness in the 90's - If it hurts, don't do it

By Normandie Nigh
President, Fit For Success
Cohasset

Great news!! The old adage 'No pain, no gain' is no longer the measure of a successful fitness program. The fitness craze of the past 10 years has been replaced by a much more civilized attitude about fitness in the 90's — no more agony and aching muscles!

Who is telling us this great news? Are we merely telling ourselves this because we want desperately to believe that it doesn't have to hurt to be doing us good? Are we simply tired of struggling with exercises that don't seem to be getting us anywhere? Perhaps, but it is true that the latest research now tells us that we can improve our fitness levels, reduce stress, and improve our sense of well-being simply by exercising moderately (this includes walking). Consistency is much more important (and beneficial) than intensity. We don't have to run marathons, bounce off the walls in aerobics, or 'pump up' with a room full of men and women who must be from another planet! (How do they get their muscles so big anyway, and do we really think that's attractive??!!)

I have had the great fortune to work with two exercise specialists. Drs. Peter and Lorna Francis of San Diego State University. Peter is a bio-mechanist who works with the US Olympic Committee and has done much research on safe and effective exercise. Together we traveled to many countries around the world and presented workshops and classes for fitness instructors, health club employees, and doctors involved in sports medicine. The message they gave to me is the one I share with you...as far as exercise is concerned, it doesn't have to hurt to be good for you.

I, for one, am thrilled to know that some movement is better than none at all, and maybe even better than moving too much. The possibilities are much more promising now for all of us to stick to a routine if the routine is supposed to be pleasurable, consistent, and moderate. Even daily stretching, which actually feels great, can do much to contribute to our general health and well-being.

Does this attitude of moderation seem strange coming from one who teaches seven aerobics classes a week? Probably, but the actual fact is that I promote fitness, not aerobics. I simply enjoy the music, movement, and fellowship in an aerobics class. But aerobics is not for everyone! (You may agree if you've tried it and were surprised to find that you have two left feet!)

If aerobics is great for some, but not the ultimate activity for every body, what is the key to fitness in the 90's? The answer is plain and simple — 'move your body'. Whether it be slow and gentle stretching or something faster paced, such as brisk walking, almost everyone can benefit from moving. The goal is to wake up the body, mobilize the muscles, and learn just how good it can feel to become active and alive.

As a personal trainer, my job is to help people find the fitness activity that best suits their abilities (based on a fitness assessment), lifestyle, time restrictions, and fitness goals.

For more information, read the book If It Hurts, Don't Do It by Drs. Peter and Lorna Francis, published by Prima Publishing, or call FIT FOR SUCCESS (617) 383-2515. Best wishes for a healthy and happy 1990.

Normandie Nigh is the President of the fitness consulting firm FIT FOR SUCCESS, Director of Educational Services for the Information Network, and the host of the California Fitness Connection TV show.

Cocaine, guns, cash and cars seized

Police nab four in Pond Street drug raid

By John Magadieu
Mariner staff

One Cohasset man and three Hull residents were arrested late last week as a result of a drug raid at 223A Pond St.

In the raid, police seized cocaine, cash, shotguns and rifles, and cars, according to Michael McGorty, assistant district attorney for Norfolk County.

David Amabella, 28, of 223A Pond St. was arrested at his home and charged with trafficking in cocaine and conspiracy to traffic in cocaine. He pleaded not guilty at his arraignment in Quincy District Court Monday.

Karen Hann, 29, of 15 Q St., Hull, was arrested as she walked along Nantasket Avenue in Hull. She was charged with conspiracy to traffic in cocaine, and pleaded not guilty in Hingham District Court Monday.

A Hull couple, Gisella and Pantaleone Narda, both 31-years-old from 7 Oceanside Dr. in Hull, also were arrested as a result of the Pond Street raid.

Gisella Narda was arrested at her home and charged with conspiracy to traffic in cocaine and possession of a class B substance (cocaine) with intent to distribute. She also pleaded not guilty in Hingham District Court Monday.

And Pantaleone Narda was arrested while walking along Nantasket Avenue in Hull, and charged with conspiracy to traffic in cocaine. He also pleaded not guilty at Hingham District Court Monday, McGorty said.

Bail was set for each of those arrested at $2,500, and McGorty said he believes all four are now out on bail.

"These arrests were done as part of an ongoing investigation by the Norfolk County Drug Task Force in conjunction with the Cohasset police and the Hull police," he added.

McGorty would not say whether he expects any more arrests as a result of the Friday afternoon raid at 223A Pond St.

Irving Gadow has the best job in the world

By Alison Cohen
Mariner staff

Irving Gadow thinks he has the world's best job.

Gadow's office is a snug little cabin on a hill overlooking Cohasset harbor. From his desk he watches the boats sail in and out.

Watching them and watching over them is his job, because Gadow is the town harbormaster.

Gadow took over the office on the hill in November 1988. Before coming to work for Cohasset, he spent 30 years in the Coast Guard.

An easy-going man, he isn't one to brag about himself. If you ask him about his experiences in the Coast Guard, he'll shrug off the questions.

"I just enjoyed working with the public," he says.

In his 30 years, he went out on a lot of search and rescue missions. He also worked drug patrols off Florida and New Jersey and covered the Mariel boat lift from Cuba.

About as much as you'll get from him is that he participated in plenty of boardings of suspected drug runners.

Gadow joined the Coast Guard right out of high school. He'd gone down to enlist in the Navy, but the recruiter didn't have any slots open for him. He walked across the hall to the Coast Guard recruiter and left his life as a Maryland farm boy behind.

He describes life as Cohasset's harbormaster as pretty peaceful.

"This harbor is mostly a Ma & Pa harbor where they take the kids out for a ride or to the beach."

His job calls on him to patrol Cohasset's coast. He is responsible for enforcing the law and protecting and assisting boaters who enter Cohasset waters.

Last year, he assisted 54 boaters who experienced engine trouble, general breakdown or the embarrasment of running out of gas.

Irving Gadow

When a boat is in trouble, Gadow or one of the part-timers who assist him in the summer will tow it into the harbor.

Towing is getting difficult. The harbormaster's work boat is a 17 foot Boston Whaler that is more than 10 years old.

"It's served it's useful life," he says. When the Selectmen mull $4,000 cutback in harbor budget

By John Magadieu
Mariner staff

Selectmen said Monday they are considering reopening the harbor budget so they can reduce it by $4,000.

Selectman Martha Gjesteby cited the tight budget and reduction of state aid to cities and towns as reason for trimming the harbor budget.

Specifically, Gjesteby would like to see a $2,000 reduction for night patrols and a $2,000 reduction for maintenance.

Not all selectmen agreed with Gjesteby's proposal. Rocco Laugelle said he disagrees "100 percent."

Chairman Burt Pratt suggested the board wait until the advisory committee goes over the harbor budget.

Selectman Diana Kornet agreed, but sided with Gjesteby about reducing the budget, adding "It's not that we feel we don't need it."

Selectman Ned Tebbetts said the harbor budget represents 360 townspeople, 15 percent of the town's population, and that it would be "unreasonable" to expect the majority of the citizenry to go along with the budget as it is currently proposed.

Laugelle queried how the harbor is any different from the schools.

"It is a town resource," he said.

Tebbetts suggested a larger portion of the cost should be paid by the users.

Gjesteby agreed, saying the fees could offset the amount that would be cut from the budget.

"If we could raise another $4,000 in fees, I would

School committee is not happy about level budget

By Alison Cohen
Mariner staff

Following a sparsely-attended public hearing, the Cohasset school committee unanimously voted for a level-services budget with a price tag of $5.6 million.

The vote came as no surprise to residents who had followed the budget deliberations of the school committee.

"We are not happy with this budget. This is a budget that this school system can live with this year," said Chairman Barbara Bliss in presenting the budget that had been dubbed a "treading water budget" at the public hearing.

Although the advisory committee had requested that all town departments submit level-funded budgets, the committee opted for a budget that is 5.1 percent higher than last year's.

The committee will present their budget to the advisory committee February 14.

"The level-funded budget is not a budget we could submit to the town," said Superintendent Stephen Hart.

To counteract a perception that Cohasset provides a lavish education, Hart compared Cohasset's per pupil costs to the state average.

"Each year, Cohasset is still at two percent above the state average," said Hart. "There is nothing else Cohasset residents would want to be only two percent above state average-- not their salary, house value, car . . .

"Why do people choose to live here? For the quality of life," said Hart. "And the quality of life is enhanced by the quality of education."

Hart said Manchester, Mass., a town described as being very similar to Cohasset, spends $6,000 per pupil, compared to Cohasset's $4,200.

The crowd of approximately 30 residents and teachers was supportive, although some suggested other budget priorities.

Leonora Jenkins of 198 Jerusalem Road questioned the decision to keep class ratios at 20 or 21 to one at the early elementary level. Concerned about overly large classes in the seventh grade honors program, Jenkins claimed current educational theory found no detrimental effect with classes of 28 children in second through sixth grade.

Hart pointed out that there were different theo-

Family flees house fire

An early morning fire forced a family to flee their home Sunday, February 11.

No injuries were sustained in the blaze that caused heavy damage to the living room and electrical system at 427 South Main Street.

It took firefighters from Cohasset and Scituate from 5 a.m. to 7 a.m. to put the fire out.

Fire Chief Daniel Brock said the cause of the fire appears to be a gas-fired heating unit that ignited an adjacent wall.

No dollar estimate of damage was available.

Senior citizens' exemption

After a two-year battle, the state legislature last week hiked the limit on earnings senior citizens can make and still file for tax exemption, assessor James Lagrotteria told selectmen Monday.

At Lagrotteria's urging, selectmen re-opened the town meeting warrant Monday to insert an article asking voters whether they wish to adopt the "Clause 17 C-1/2" tax exemption.

Previously, senior citizens could file for exemption if they made $60,000 or less. Under the new clause, seniors who bring in up to $150,000 could file for exemption.

"This is very important to senior citizens in Cohasset," Lagroterria commented.

New user fees

As the state's fiscal crisis and Proposition 2 1/2 erode town budgets, the push for user fees will escalate. Last year, high school athletes bore the brunt of user fees, this year boaters are being asked to ante up.

In Cohasset, boats tied up to existing town moorings have been charged $4 per foot. The harbormaster has recommended increasing the fee to $5 per foot for fiscal 1991.

Individuals tied up in privately-owned marinas or dock had no fees assessed to cover the services of the harbormaster. If town meeting approves, those boaters will have to pay $5 per foot in fiscal 1991.

Harbormaster Irving Gadow emphasized recently that boats tied up to moorings will not have to pay the new user fee.

According to Scituate harbormaster, Elmer Pooler, boats tied up to moorings are currently charged $3 per foot. No increases in that fee are planned.

Boats in the 85 slips at the town marina are currently charged $51 per foot. An increase by $4 to $55 per foot is not expected to reduce competition for the rare openings at the marina, according to Pooler.

In an effort to make the harbormaster's department more self-supporting, a user fee of $3 per foot has been proposed. Pooler said all boaters will be assessed the user fee.

Scituate's proposed user fee will be discussed at an upcoming public hearing.

"Legitimate" gripes come first

The assessors have received 617 abatement applications— from a record number of residents who are disenchanted with their property valuations.

James Lagroterria, chairman of the Cohasset Board of Assessors, told selectmen Monday that the assesors are concentrating on those applicants who appear to have "a real gripe."

Selectman Rocco Laugelle asked how the assessors know who has a "legitimate squawk" and whether all applications should be treated the same.

Lagrotteria said the complaints assessors view as legitimate are based on numbers that "jump right out at you."

If a resident bought his house for more than the value for which it was assessed, that is a legitimate cvomplaint, he explained.

Although the assessors intend to look at all the abatement requests, Lagrotteria said the board has a review deadline to consider and all the legitimate complaints have top be dealt with first.

Voters decide leash bylaw

Selectmen accepted a citizens' petition Monday to place a leash bylaw question on the annual town meeting warrant.

The citizens, whose signatures were gathered by Elizabeth Warren of 11 Sankey Rd., will ask that any resident who fails to keep his dog on a leash should be fined.

The current law, passed at town meeting last year, called for a $10 fine. The citizens are looking for fines of $25, $35 and $50.

At the same time, selectmen also voted to increase the dog officer's budget by $143.04 to pay for dog tags and licenses.

No water, no photos

The Belmont Spring Water Co. was in Cohasset last week looking to use the town common in its advertising campaign. But hold everything!

Executive Secretary Greg Doyon was on the scene and shooed them away, saying they would have to pay Cohasset a $500 fee before they could use the common as part of a commercial message.

The Belmont crew rode off to Scituate, saying they would return later. They didn't.

At their Monday night meeting, selectmen told Doyon he should call the company and see if it would be willing to donate a water cooler and a year's supply of water to town hall for the privilege of using Cohasset Common in their ad.

Doyon figured that would vbe an even better deal for the town; last time he had looked into getting a water cooler for town hall, he said, the price was $800 or $900.

U. S. Rep. Gerry Studds

Studds-sponsored fisheries conservation bill passes

A fisheries conservation bill sponsored by U.S. Rep. Gerry Studds, native of Cohasset, has been passed by the House of Representatives.

It is being hailed by the congressman as "the strongest fisheries conservation bill since the enactment of the 200-mile fishing limit in 1976."

The bill will encourage conservation, Studds said, by putting an end to large-scale driftnet fishing in U.S. waters, calling for international efforts to prevent the overfishing of swordfish and extending U.S. fishing jurisdiction to include tuna, and toughening the penalties assessed against those who violate U.S. fisheries laws.

Mary McDonald looks back on 100 years

By Marilyn Jackson
Mariner staff

When Mary MacDonald, formerly of Cohasset, was born Feb. 14, 1890, the South Shore was a lot different.

Folks traveled the narrow dirt roads by horse and buggy, and houses, shaded by elms, dotted the main thoroughfares where small businesses now stand.

"At night in bed, I try to remember the names of all the families from the (Christ) Episcopal Church to Granite Street" in Quincy Square, she said.

Mrs. MacDonald, née "Molly" Starr, celebrated her 100th birthday with her family Sunday at Scituate Ocean Manor.

And, Wednesday at the rest home, where she has lived for the past 12 years, the residents celebrated her birthday as well as Valentine's Day.

"To think I have to live this long to have such a party!" she exclaimed, clapping her hands.

The community room was festively decorated with colored balloons and streamers, and most of the family members were wearing party hats.

Mrs. MacDonald was wearing a sapphire blue dress with a name tag, "We love Dumma. Happy 100 years."

She has been called Dumma since the late 1940s, when her first granddaughter couldn't say "Gramma."

Both sons, John "Bud" MacDonald of Duxbury and William MacDonald of Weymouth, were there as well as her six grandchildren and nine great-grandchildren.

John's family includes Jane Mellor of Amherst and her two sons, William and Ian, Daniel MacDonald of Cohasset and his daughter, Courtney, Judy Collasanti of Petaluma, Calif., and her daughter, Sarah, and David MacDonald of New York City.

William's family includes Peter MacDonald and his five children, Christopher, Sean, Jason, Daniel and Nicholas, and John "Jack" MacDonald, also of Randolph.

Mary McDonald

Mrs. MacDonald was born in East Braintree but she grew up in Quincy, attending Quincy High School for just a year.

She worked at the Fore River Shipyard in Quincy before her marriage to Fred MacDonald in 1919.

Then she stayed at home, keeping house and rearing three children. Her daughter, Mary, died about 25 years ago.

When Mrs. MacDonald's husband, a chipper at the Boston Naval Shipyard, died at the age of 53 in January 1942, just after Pearl Harbor, she began to work outside the home as a hotel housekeeper.

"I worked at hotels between Florida and New Hampshire and in New York State," she said.

In the wintertime, she worked at the Palm Beach Biltmore and attended Mass at St. Edward's where she used to see the entire Kennedy clan at worship.

Asked who her favorite President was, she replied without a pause.

"President Kennedy, of course. I remember when he was born!"

In her 100 years, Mrs. MacDonald has seen a lot of changes. But, when she was asked about them, she did not focus on Quincy's changed landscape of skyscrapers and office buildings.

"There have been a lot of changes, and not for the better,' she reflected.

"All this dope," she said, shaking her head. "And, everybody works," fathers and mothers.

Although her hands are now arthritic, Mrs. MacDonald was an extraordinary seamstress in her younger days. She made her granddaughters' clothes, including a prom dress.

But she outdid herself when she made not only the wedding dress but the bridesmaids' gowns for granddaughter Judy.

"And, she made 30 aprons for the annual Christmas fair at Ocean Manor," added her son, "Bud."

"It was 22," she corrected.

Nowadays she spends her time reading, favoring biographies. "I just finished Pat Nixon's," she said.

Before moving to Scituate Ocean Manor, Mrs. MacDonald had lived in Cohasset with her son, "Bud," for about 10 years.

But his children were grown and he often traveled, and I would be alone.

The children would make arrangements to come and stay, but I didn't want that.

"I came down here for a visit and decided I would like to live here.

"I like to be with people."

Just then, more visitors stopped by to wish her a happy birthday.

School committee not happy . . .

rists with varying theories.

"It's important not to play off the seventh grade honors program against elementary children," cautioned committee member Ralph Kidder.

Jenkins also asked why the school system couldn't hire a principal with a counseling background for Osgood School to save the cost of an adjustment counselor.

Hart explained that the principal who will replace John Creamer when he retires at the end of this school year, will combine both the principal and curriculum development functions at the elementary school. The school committee and administration felt this was the best combination.

Paula Knowles of 15 Border Street asked for clarification of what was included in the budget for the business office. She asked why the budget didn't breakdown the expenses in a more understandable way.

Knowles was told that the complete line-by-line budget was available in the town library, but space considerations did not allow that kind of detail in the town report.

"We've been told they want to cut the number of pages in the town warrant," said committee member Nancy Sandell.

Knowles was also concerned about the lack of additional resources for health education and computer curriculum.

Several residents wondered why the school couldn't use volunteer help in areas like computer instruction and individualized math instruction.

For Linda Gardner, 320 N. Main St., the loss of home economics and business education staff was troubling.

Committee member Christopher Ford shared those concerns.

Ford conceded the numbers of students weren't there to justify retaining the staff, but emphasized that the programs served an important need for many students.

"We are losing the comprehensive nature of our school system," he said.

When Ann Whiteley, 35 Pond St., asked the committee what they would do to improve the school, Bliss told her they had prepared a nine percent growth budget.

"We didn't spend a lot of time discussing it," she said.

Increased regionalization may be the only way to expand opportunities for Cohasset students, said Bliss.

"I can't help think how much fun it would be to be a school committee member in Manchester with their millions to spend. You could really do some fun things!" said Ford.

Committee member Russell Reidy added, "It's a discouraging seat to sit in when you don't have the funds to do it right."

Advisory board likes new police-fire station proposal

The Cohasset advisory committee is leaning toward endorsement of a new $397,000 proposal for renovating the police and fire station complex on Elm Street.

According to advisory committee Chairman Ray Kasperowicz, the committee thinks the new plan is more feasible than the previous plan, which would have required an outlay of more than $500,000 to $700,000 .

The police and fire station renovation committee submitted two new plans for the advisory committee's perusal, one for $250,000 and the other for $397,000.

Kasperowicz said the $397,000 proposal would provide locker facilities for female officers, as well as accessibility for the handicapped, and would bring the building up to code, while not doing anything "too sexy."

The $250,000 proposal would mean having to knock down walls later for further renovation, thus increasing future costs, he said.

The committee has not yet taken a vote on the proposal, but Kasperowicz said the mood regarding the new plan is "optimistic."

In other news, the committe is concerned about fire department overtime expenses, and will seek a meeting with selectmen on the subject.

The budget for fire overtime is $42,000, and only $2,000 remains to cover the town's fire overtime expenses through June.

The advisory committee meets tonight, Thursday, at town hall, to discuss the school budget.

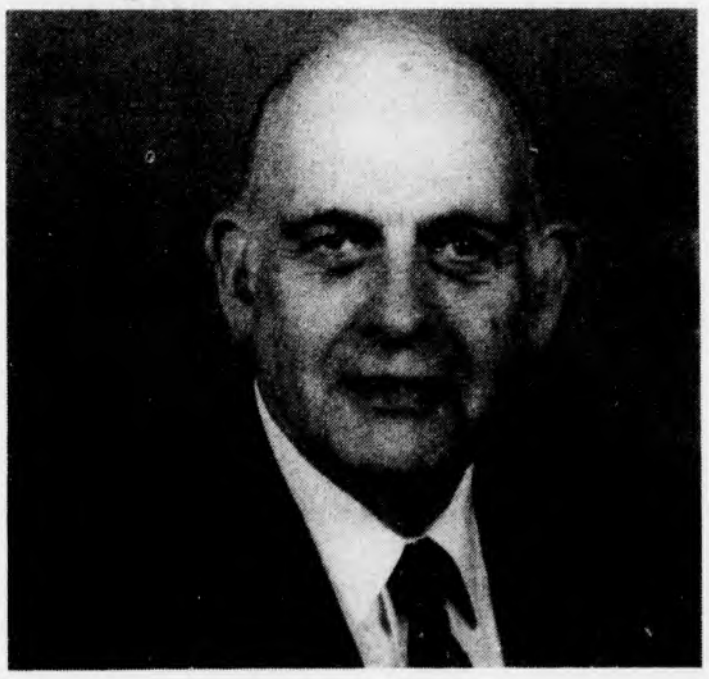
Pratt seeks another term

Selectman Burtram J. pratt has named a seven-member committee to direct his campaign for re-election to a three-year term

Frederick L. Good Jr. of 20 Nichols Road, has been selected as chairman; Gordon E. Flint of 21 Clay Spring Road was selected treasurer; and Marie Higgins of 211 North Main St. has been selected secretary.



Pratt also named his son, Peter J. Pratt, a resident of Somerville, as campaign manager; Donna McGee of 27 Hill St., election day co-ordinator; Jacqueline B. Clark of 23 Highland Ave., communications director; and Annette Sawchuk of 423 Beechwood St., mailing supervisor.

Pratt, who is in his second year as chairman of the board, stressed his long service to the community in positions of leadership.

"I have chaired the planning board, the 1970 bicentennial committee, the board of registrars and the board of selectmen," he said, "and in addition, have served as a member of numerous other public bodies.

"A selectman today must have the ability to take a reasoned and objective approach to the many tough problems which town governements in Massachusetts are facing," he concluded.

Pratt lives at 75 Ripley Rd. with his wife, Helen, a real estate broker. They have two children, Peter and Joy. He retired two years ago from a career in printing and advertising.

Burtram Pratt

Nawn to head Gjesteby committee

Selectman Martha Gjesteby, a candidate for re-election to the Cohasset Board of Selectmen, has named Joanne Nawn of Dolan Lane chairman of her re-election committee.

Nawn is director of the Quincy and Weymouth housing authorities and was elected last year to a five-year seat on the Cohasset Housing Authority.

Other committee members are: Joan and Joe Busk, Peter Guild, Terry and Chris Duggan, Barbara Dillon, Robert Bowman, Keith Knowles and Judith Fitzsimmons.

Judy Volungis was named treasurer of the re-election committee.

Cohasset's severe budget squeeze may result in reduced town service

By John Magadieu
Mariner staff

The citizens of Cohasset may have to settle for less in the way of town services because of the "severe budget squeeze," selectmen warned Monday.

The board voted to shift secretary Pat Walsh's duties so that she will spend 25 hours per week on conservation commission work and 15 hours on work for the sewer department. That means she will have less time open to assist the public.

The conservation commission had hoped for more help. Jeff Waal, chairman of the conservation commission, told selectmen the commission could keep a secretary busy 35 to 40 hours a week.

He was not completely pleased with the selectmen's decision to increase Walsh's time for the conservation commission by only five hours, while reducing her commitment to the sewer department by five hours.

"It's better than 20 hours," he said. We're willing to see how the 25-hour work week goes.

"If we're restricted to 25 hours a week," he added, "one thing that is going to be hurt is her ability to help people; she will be more involved in doing the things the commission is required to do.

"We need the support of the public," he said. "They did not pass the Proposition 2-1/2 override, so that's it."

Selectman Diana Kornet said, "That is something the public will just have to cope with. She will have a less amount of time for the public, but they'll have to adjust."

Selectman Martha Gjesteby said, "We'll have to think about that with all boards."

Chairman Burt Pratt agreed. "I served on the planning board for 10 years and we never had the office open four or eight hours a day.

"We had a part-time secretary and the builders knew when the board met; they would come in then," he explained. We should think about going back to that."

Kornet said she would be concerned about cutting that drastically because of increased regulation from the state Department of Environmental Protection.

Gjesteby argued that town board's are getting less business nowadays because so much of the land in Cohasset that has not been developed is "marginal." But she agreed that the state's regulatory requirements do make demands of town boards.

Money available for first time buyers

Despite statewide cuts, the Cohasset Housing Partnership has been informed that there is still money available for the purchase of affordable housing by first-time home-owners.

Special consideration would be given to families who are native to Cohasset or who work here, if the town cooperates in the affordable housing development process.

At a recent meeting with selectmen, the Partnership was urged to continue to educate the public-at-large on issues involved in affordable housing. Selectmen also said that they would attempt to help the Partnership locate possible affordable housing sites.

The Cohasset Housing Partnership is seeking town boards' advice on its mission statement and guidelines. It recognizes its need to clarify its role as advocate and facilitator of the development in Cohasset of suitable family units that could be made affordable for purchase by new home owners.

Harbor budget . . .

support that," Tebbetts added.

Kornet said she thinks taxes are better than fees because they can be deducted from federal taxes.

Tebbets argued that going for tax money could be a problem because the proponents would have to pin their hopes on an override.

In the end, the board held off on reopening the harbor budget. The motion was denied 3-2 with Gjesteby and Tebbets dissenting.

around town

• Christine Rooney was named to the Dean's List of the School of Nursing, the University of Vermont for the fall semester 1989.

Christine is the daughter of Paul and Mary Rooney of 60 Lantern Lane in Cohasset. Christine is a freshman at the University

• Yes there is a reason why Marie and Gene Price are smiling more than ever these days! His name is Alexander Arron Price and he is the brand new son of JT and Wendy Price.

Alexander was born on Feb. 7, and joins his sister Jennifer Marie. Wendy's mom (and Alexander's maternal grandmother) Vivian Franks has flown in from Canada to be with the happy family for a while. Best wishes to all of you!

• Debra Bates has been appointed mortgage originator of Salem Five Mortgage Corporation. She has worked for GMAC Mortgage Corporation and was a summa cum laude graduate of Northeastern University.

• Congratulations to Joyce Hoffman, who has joined the company of Hunneman and Company and will be working at the Cohasset office!

• Although they have lived in Scituate for a long time now, Laurence and Dorothy Hoogeveen were often spotted around town. It won't be as frequent now because they have moved to Bowdoinham Maine.

We all wish them success in their new surroundings; boy have they chosen a winter to move to Maine!! Hope they bought super shovels!

• Registration is continuing at the Spring Tree Nursery School located on Beechwood Street in Cohasset and run by Julie Hassen. If your child is 3-, 4- or 5-years-old, he or she has found a school! Julie has pre-kindergarden for 5-year-olds also. Give her a call at 383-1354 for more information.

• There are only five more weeks to go...that's all the time that is left for the town to take advantage of Stop and Shop's spectacular computer program

Be sure to keep saving your receipts from Stop and Shop,then turn them in to any PSO member!

The way that our town has rallied and worked to get all of the computers is wonderful; we are the talk of the South Shore! Hats off to all of you hard working PSO members and all of you "shoppers" for making it all possible. The students thank you too.

• A standing ovation goes to the CHS relay team who was first in the 400 meter free relay race and second in the 200-meter medley relay.

The team is made up of Chris Henderson, Chip Anderson, Dave Leahy and Niki Hawks. Their winning times qualify them for the sectional finals and the state finals in February. Chris Henderson was also second in the 100 meter butterfly.

• We'll bet that Mrs. Cisneros and her class miss Sarah Hamilton who was a teaching assistant for the month of January at the Deer Hill School.

Sarah is a sophomore at Colby Cllege in Waterville Maine, and is studying education.

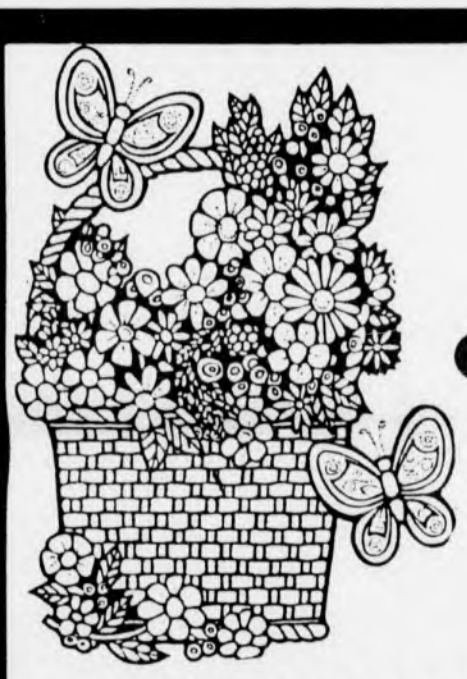
We are sure that this past experience will excite her even more in the teaching field, and from all accounts she will make an "awesome" teacher.

• As the winter sports season closes, it is unbelievable to report that captains of every team are injured! Here's hoping that they all mend real fast and that they remain that way!

❑ Cadet John F. Buckley, son of Joseph and Eileen Buckley of Brewster Road, has been placed on the Dean's List at the State University of New York Maritime College as a result of his academic average earned in the Fall Semester 1989. He has distinguished himself by achieving an average of 3.4 after completing at least 15 credits during the semester.

At Maritime, John is majoring in Marine Transportation/Business Administration. He is a recent graduate of Tabor Academy.

• Imagine how excited Melissa Christoffel is to be selected as a student who will spend a year studying in the Soviet Union!



What an exciting time for her with all of the changes going on! She will be able to write volumes on what she experiences! Hope that you keep in touch with the Mariner, Melissa, and let us know what your feelings and thoughts are!

Other lucky CHS students will take advantage of the AFS program too!

Andrew Ross will be in either Australia or New Zealand in an outdoor adventure program; Melissa Rousseau will be participating in a cultural studies program in Italy, Doug Moe will be part of the summer homestay program, hopefully in Iceland, and Sophie Redfield has been selected for a homestay program, aiming for either South America or Central America. Good luck to all of you and keep us informed.

That's the news for this week, please let me know what is new in your house! With February vacation coming up, there should be plenty!

Dwyers Cleaning Spot

The Spot for all of your cleaning needs

Welcome to Osgood "Dinoland"

The children finished the following story with their own ideas:

One day, a dinosaur was walking down the street. As he passed by a tall building, he saw a secret path.

The dinosaur rode his bike down the path where he met an old man. He asks the old man,"Do you know if someone lives down the path" The old man says,"There is a grasshopper that lives down there." The dinosaur goes back home and tells his parents about the grasshopper who lives down the secret path.

Tara Mangan

At the beginning of the tunnel he sees a boat. He jumps into the boat. The dinosaur went down a waterfall in the boat. He landed on a whale's water spout. They swam along the river until they came to an underwater circus. They ate popcorn and had lots of fun. After the circus it was bed time so they swam home. The next day they woke up and they went to the zoo.

Skyler Ralston

The dinosaur sneaked in the window inside the secret path. Only the dinosaur knew where the window was. The window was covered with a blanket to keep it a secret. The dinosaur runs quickly down the path. He covered the secret path with a blue and yellow blanket. He covered the path because he didn't want anyone to know it was his house.

Rebecca Hardin

The dinosaur walked down the path and met Tyrannosaurus Rex. Tyrannosaurus Rex tried to kill the dinosaur because he is a dinosaur eater. The dinosaur was alive. He went back home. He never went down the path again because Tyrannosaurus was there.

Kristofer Peters

The dinosaur was a Tyrannosaurus Rex. He ran very fast down the secret path. At the end of the secret path the Tyrannosaurus Rex found a treasure of gold. He carried the gold back up the path to bring home. He shared his gold with everyone.

Brian Lewis

He went down the path. He met a friend. They found gold. They brought it back to their house. They showed the gold to their other friends. Their friends wanted some gold too. So the dinosaur took his friends down the path. They all found gold. They took it home and counted the gold. They had enough gold to buy bikes for everyone. The end.

Joel Carpenter

He went down the secret passageway until he came to a cave. In the cave he found a treasure. There were lots of paper dollars. The dinosaur dragged the treasure box out of the cave. He brought the whole box of paper dollars to the bank. He put the paper dollars in the bank to spend another time.

Peter Whoriskey

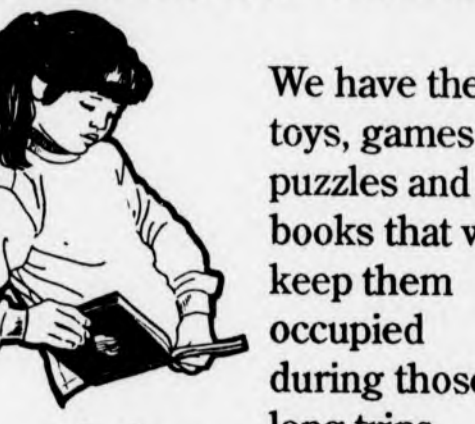
The dinosaur creeped slowly down the path until he came to a dead end. He turned around and walked back home. When he got home it was night time. The next morning he walked to school. On the way he saw the secret path again. He went back in again and it was different. It was not a dead end anymore it now led to under water. He swam down until he swam to an island. He climbed onto the island and lived forever.

John Schindler

He waited by the secret path for a friend to come. His friend Stego came along and they went down the path together. They were unhappy because they did not find anything.

Nicolas Bolster

He went down the secret path to go see Stegasaurus. When he saw him they played together. They played with a lamp and they played Duck, Duck. Goose. The end.



Tina Scarpaci

He went down the path and fell into a trap. While he was in the trap he found gold. The gold was magic. When he touched the gold he got out of the trap. He ran back home. He kept the gold a secret. He never showed his magic gold to anyone. The end.

Editorial

Changing the guard

It's difficult to begin this editorial, because in reality it is an ending. Goodbye's are so finite, I have been advised to avoid them.

Then this, I have decided, will be my feeble attempt to thank the town of Cohasset for six years of some pretty hectic and incredible experiences. And I thank you for all the friends I have made - people I will never forget.

I am going on to some new experiences, filled with much hope and considerable trepidation as I wander into unfamiliar territories. I have been given the charge of editing the Marshfield Mariner, our flagship newspaper, along with three of our newest "babies," in Pembroke, in Kingston and in Carver. To say this will be challenging is an understatement - I have yet to locate that fourth community.

I expressed a desire to leave Cohasset. Six years was a long time for a reporter to stay in one town. You make friends, a few "opponents," and people perceive you to be unalterably aligned with one group over another.

And if the truth be told, I suppose I did develop some close relationships with some people which jeopardized my objectivity to others. That was never my intention, and I regret that it may have occurred.

As much as I loved Cohasset, I felt it was time to continue my journey away from this community I know so well.

I would love to mention the names of everyone I have relied on for the past six years - people I have known through my professional association and people I will never forget - even if I ever find my way to Carver. But to name you all would be impossible - from the wonderful teachers I have met in brief interviews, to others, like Marie Price, I have come to know as friends.

I thank Supt. Stephen Hart for being the most cooperative school official I have ever known, and I bid goodbye to the members of the school committee - wonderful, caring people who dedicate hours in the name of education.

I will think back to my days in Cohasset and remember a host of honorable town characters - people like Clark Chatterton and his wife, Sally Ann, historian David Wadsworth, Wigmore Pierson, Martha and Arne Gjesteby, Don Staszko, Ron Goodwin, Rep. Mary Jeanette Murray, and Selectman Rocky Laugelle, who will never be accused of being a politician. There just isn't enough room to mention his entire clan - but Polly Litchfield has to be one of my favorites.

Then, there's Police Chief Joseph Kealey whose men toil in one of the most decrepid departments I have ever seen (with the possible exception of Hingham). This column wouldn't be complete without mention of Judy Volungis at the community center and my dear friend Kathy Bryanton at the senior center.

These are the people who make Cohasset different from any other community in this area. (I wonder if I'll ever say the same about Carver?)

I will remember some of issues which affected the residents of this town during my tenure as its newspaper's editor - The Witches of Eastwick, the incredible basketball teams, the never-ending saga of Proposition 2 1/2, the proposed marina at the Cox estate, the repair of the meeting house pond, the yet-to-be-100-percent-complete addition to the town hall, the development along Rte. 3A, the hiring and firing of former Fire Chief Martin Dooley, and a host of others.

I remember that after about a year in Cohasset, my publisher, David Cutler, forbid me to place another sewer story on the front page. "Isn't there anything else happening in that town?" he wondered. I suppose just to be spiteful I published my last edition of the Cohasset Mariner last week with a front page story on the still-stalled sewer plan.

I guess in many ways, things have not changed much in six years.

I can not bid you farewell. I will always consider you friends - from Paul Barry and his family, to Franny Marks and her crew at town hall. From the members of the PSO, to my comrade Molly Hochkeppel, to Ann Leonard at the senior center.

These are the people I came to know well on my journey through Cohasset.

Selectmen are wrestling with the problem of how to raise harbor revenues through additional fees and assessments even though Cohasset charges the highest fee per boat foot in the South Shore.

'Tax assessments are too high'

Letters

To the Editor:

On Jan. 4, Fred Quelle, with the support of dedicated volunteers who attended our meeting on Dec. 3 held at the Unitarian Parish House, completed the arduous tabulation by hand of statistics covering the 1986-89 assessment and tax compared to the 1990 assessment and tax for properties located in the following areas:

Jerusalem Road, Nichols Road, Beach Street, Atlantic Avenue, Joy Place, Gammons Road and selected commercial statistic.

Fred also used data provided by County Home Data which records all sales of residential properties in Cohasset for the same period. The results of this data are as follows:

1. The median sale price of residential property in all of Cohasset from 1986 to 1989 increased by a factor of 1.60.

2. The median assessed valuation of residential property of Cohasset from 1986 to 1989 also increased by a factor of 1.60.

3. The median sale of residential property in the areas described above increased by a factor of 1.60.

4. The assessed valuation of property in the areas described above, excluding from Forest Avenue and Jerusalem Road to Jerusalem Road at West Corner, increased by factors of 1.8 to 2.0.

The conclusion of our study confirms the concern we expressed at the Dec. 3 meeting. In fact, the tax bill rendered to all homeowners who own property in the above areas, again excluding Jerusalem Road from Forest Avenue to West Corner, was $236,328 above the tax bill that should have been rendered if the assessed value for these homes had been increased at 1.60 times and the 1990 tax rate was applied.

It is our conclusion that these homeowners were disproportionately assessed. The median assessment factor on Jerusalem Road from Forest to West Corner was 1.61.

We presented this information to James Lagrotteria at a conference with Jim, Bob Sturdy, Eli Manchester and David Weltman held Jan. 18.

At that conference, all our data was given to Jim, and we asked the assessors to provide us with additional computer-readible material so we could expand our study to include the entire town. The assessors tell us they are attempting to comply with that request.

We will appear before the assessors Feb. 22 at 7:30 p.m., which will be an open meeting to which the public and press are invited to hear our presentation and the assessors' response.

We hope you will be present. In the meantime, if you are asked to appear before the assessors, please contact David Weltman at 383-9189 for supporting information.

Thanks for your help.

'Thank you' for help with the town census

To the Editor

Town Clerk, Frances L. Marks, and her staff wish to thank everyone who returned their census in such a timely manner.

Anyone who still has their census form and dog form should return them at once.

This has been a blue ribbon year. At this time 90 percent of the census has been returned and 450 dogs have been licensed as of Jan. 31,1990. Again, thank you.

Francis L. Marks,
Town Clerk

Correction

In a letter sent out last week by the Cohasset Chamber of Commerce to local businesses, one of the telephone numbers listed to call for information on the 1990 Chamber of Commerce Business Directory was incorrect.

The Correct numbers are: Peg D'Onofrio of Colpitts Travel at 383-1566 or Paula Knowles of ATC Window Fashions at 383-6266 or 383-1331.

We apologize to any businesses that were inconvenienced by our error, and also to Dr. Susan Emmer, whose number we inadvertantly included.

For those businesses that were unable to contact the Chamber because of this error, here are the steps to take to join the chamber in time to be included in their directory:

1. List your business name and address, along with your phone number, type of business and up to two (2) categories under which you wish to be listed on a piece of paper.

2. Mail this along with your check for the 1990 Chamber dues ($100), to: Cohasset Chamber of Commerce, Box 336, Cohasset, Ma. 02025.

If you have any questions, please call the numbers listed above. You may also drop your check off at Colpitts Travel on South Main Street or at Cards and Shards. But don't delay. March 1, 1990 is the deadline for inclusion in the directory.

Hey, Cohasset -- just say 'no' to termites

By Ralph Kidder
Special to the Mariner

Commentary

When the school committee met in the spring of 1989 to vote on the list of cuts that would be necessitated by reliance on the resources available to the town from the 2.5 percent increase in the levy limit plus new growth, we were very clear in indicating that FY90 was a crossroads, NOT a crisis.

We said that last year's budget marked a watershed, a line which, when crossed, would rightly be considered a crisis.

The level-funded budget which we have spent weeks debating is just such a crisis.

In reviewing the level-funded budget, however, many of our fellow townspeople may not see a crisis. The committee has engaged in no histrionics, no melodrama—we have not eliminated the entire athletic program, nor have we cut whole programs in academics or the arts.

We have not engaged in the kind of brinksmanship so evident in the state administration's threats to local aid payments. Therefore, the crisis of which we speak is not necessarily obvious to the casual observer.

But let me ask you to ponder for a moment the lowly termite.

I submit to you that the budget of the Cohasset public schools is rapidly developing an advanced case of termites—a slow, insidious but largely invisible dismantling of the foundation of quality education in Cohasset.

A piece of an art program here, a little home economics and shop there, a user fee, an aide in the Deer Hill math lab—the budget termites inexorably chomping away at the body and soul of education in Cohasset.

This committee has spent months talking about sacrifice. Should we sacrifice an English teacher or the football team? Should we sacrifice an administrator or the comprehensiveness of our program? the adjustment counselor or the music program?

But who is being asked to sacrifice? In my judgment, it is the children of Cohasset of whom we are demanding sacrifice.

Many of us here are products of parents who lived through the Depression era. They knew about sacrifice. They knew how to do without today so that their children would have a better tomorrow. Have we lost this fundamental American value?

I would like to ask: What are the citizens of Cohasset willing to sacrifice in order that our children might have the quality of education that life in the 21st century will demand? Instead of asking what the children (and, I might add, the teachers, administrators, and staff members) will do for us, why not ask what we will do for the children?

Will we sacrifice a new set of golf clubs? a ski weekend or two? a case of good scotch? buy fewer desserts or skip the doughnut with our morning coffee?

We need a new vision of the value of education—and we need to value education as a community.

The level-funded budget is a crisis. The level-services budget that we will consider again tonight avoids that crisis—but only marginally.

With the level-services budget, we will be true to the Hippocratic demand of "Do No Harm," but the termites will simply be in a holding pattern.

It is my urgent desire that the people of this community join with us and Just Say No to termites.

Tara Hetsrom is all concentration as she prepares an African mask in Mrs. Atkinson's class at the Osgood School. That's Meredith O'Hayre in the background; she's working hard, too.

Nursing Home obligation

The Massachusetts legislature has passed a new law requiring the spouses and children of nursing home residents covered by Medicaid to pay 2% percent of the State's cost.

If there is a spouse, he or she will be billed on a monthly basis. If there is no spouse, then the Department of Public Welfare will send the bills to children (if any).

If there is more than one child, the bill will be divided among them.

Those whose household is below 300 percent of the poverty line are exempt from this copayment. Failure to pay the bills will have no effect on the nursing home resident's Medicaid eligibility.

This is the first time spouses or children of Medicaid recipients in nursing homes have had any legal obligation to pay for their care.

The law does not state whether they will incur any penalty or legal liability for not paying the bills.

The purpose of this is to raise badly needed funds and to make the relatives of Medicaid recipients aware of how much the state and all of us are paying for their care.

This information was provided by Elder Law, 10 Winthrop Sq. Boston, Ma. 617-482-2929. If you have any questions, please call them.

Benefits from home sharing

Who couldn't use a few extra dollars each month?

Who wouldn't like to have some help with vacuuming or snow shoveling?

Who wouldn't enjoy sharing a meal once in a while or conversation over tea at the kitchen table?

Project Homeshare is a service of the Protestant Social Service Bureau serving seniors on the South Shore. The program carefully matches Senior Citizen homeowners with appropriate homeseekers who are willing to do chores, provide rent and companionship.

If you would like to discuss homesharing, call Linda Palmer, Project Homeshare Coordinator at 773-6203.

Citizens have duty to be informed

By Paula Knowles
Special to the Mariner

Election and town meeting time is almost upon us again. Local newspapers are starting to run updates on candidates who are taking out nomination papers, and what offices will be contested or uncontested.

Budget hearings are being held for town departments, and the school committee has sent out a glossy three color mailer extolling the virtues of our schools — perhaps the beginning of an override campaign.

And that word, "override," is cropping up already all over Cohasset. And "override," of course, means "taxes." This is not new. It is not unexpected. It is not even unusual anymore.

With the state of our economy, and the taxpayers' new found interest in fiscal responsibility in all areas of government, it is becoming routine. And it is about time.

If small towns and municipal services and school departments are to stay solvent and still serve the people that they are accountable to, they must be ready to answer truthfully and completely those questions and concerns voiced by the public.

They must be open to new ideas, and must be willing to explore and study any new idea or alternative suggestion that is brought before them, no matter what their own first reaction or personal belief. This is their duty as elected officials.

But we, the voting public, have duties also. It is our duty to know what we are talking about when we espouse one cause or another. It is our duty to form opinions based on fact, and not solely on hearsay. It is our duty to study the past records of elected officials and town boards to form an educated opinion as to whether we believe that that person or board is serving the best interests of the town of Cohasset — not just one segment or group, but the majority.

If we believe that an incumbent has done a good job, using these guidelines, we should cast our vote to reflect that belief. If not, it is our duty to vote for someone else. And to do this, you must find out what each candidate for office believes. Go to candidates' night, read the newspapers and political literature, watch your local cable TV shows. Call the candidates by phone, if necessary, to find out where they stand. And remember the issues that caught your interest over the past 12 months.

Remember the town boards that have incensed you with their actions, or that have made you feel that the town was, indeed, in good hands.

Attend town meeting to hear and vote on the money issues for the coming year. Do whatever you have to do to become an informed voter. And then pass on your information and beliefs in the voting booth . . . in town meeting . . . in conversation with friends and family . . . in working for the candidate of your choice, if you feel strongly enough.

But take the time to be an active participant in your own future in Cohasset. You can't affort not to be anymore.

(Paul Knowles is a member of the Cohasset Chamber of Commerce—Ed.)

Irving Gadow keeps tabs on 'Ma and Pa' harbor

waves are running high or he has to tow one of the bigger boats, he's had to borrow something from the local yacht club. They've been helpful, but he can't rely on them always coming through.

He's asked for capital improvement money to replace the work boat with something a little bigger. Since money is tight, Gadow is prepared to make do.

Gadow is accomplished at making do and getting contributions of volunteer labor and supplies. A good deal of the work that has been done on the harbormaster's office and the town floats and ramps has been done with little cost to the town.

He would like to see the floats and ramps repaired or replaced as quickly as possible. The damage done by wind, water and minimal maintenance worry him.

Most of the time, the only person watching over the harbor is Gadow. Assistants are strictly a summertime thing.

Gadow's job description calls for him to work a 40 hour work week. He's invariably there from early in the morning past dinnertime.

"People want to come when they get out of work to sign up for a mooring or complain," he said.

People also seem to like to share a cup of coffee and talk in the cozy office during the times Gadow is off the water and in the office.

If the building is weathertight, it's because Gadow, a jack of all trades, resided and reroofed it last year. He also built a deck.

Now he'd like to tackle the interior. Some of the cupboards are verging on ramshackle and the institutional-green paint does nothing for the view.

That project will probably have to wait until he is done shepherding his department through the budget process.

If Gadow gets the increase in the mooring fee and the town approves a user fee, the harbormaster's office will be close to self-supporting in a no-frills sort of way.

No matter what happens in the budget process, Gadow will still be responsible for the 350 or so boats tied up or docked in Cohasset as well as all the casual boaters, jet skiers and windsurfers who come into his domain.

As he says, "If it floats, it's in my jurisdiction."

If Gadow could get out two messages to Cohasset's boaters and would-be sailors, they would be:

- Reaffirm your position on the town mooring wait list on or before June 1.
- If you have a mooring, pay your mooring fee by April 1.

As easy going as he is, he gives no quarter when it comes to paying mooring fees. If the payment is late, the mooring is gone. Gadow has to be a stickler— 245 people are on the mooring wait list-- some since the early '70s.

Gadow says there is no easy way to learn to be a harbormaster. There are no schools or training programs. Of the current crop of harbormasters along the South Shore, several are former Coast Guard or Coast Guard reservists, others have years of experience.

There isn't a lot of turnover in the job either. Gadow isn't planning on going anywhere for a long time.

"I enjoy everything about my job," he says.

TNT's 'Baby' is professional entertainment

By Diane Manuel
Special to the Mariner

"Baby" is a bouncing Broadway musical that celebrates parenthood with stylish wit and appropriate awe.

As it's delivered by That New Theatre – with help from Cohasset's talented Sarah deLima – "Baby" guarantees the kind of professional entertainment that South Shore audiences increasingly expect from the ambitious Norwell-based company.

TNT has won consistent critical praise for this season's productions of "Follies," "Children of a Lesser God," and "The Rink," and with "Baby" the performing troupe takes another artistic step f orward .

When it opened on Broadway in 1983, "Baby" was hailed as a "blessed event" by New York critics who saw in its captivating book and score a "tribute to the ordinary issues that animate ordinary people .

Set on a college campus, it tells the stories of three immediately identifiable couples as they make their way through nine continually surprising months.

TNT's production of "Baby" is on stage at Norwell 's Cushing Center, 673 Main Street, Feb. 22 through 25. The curtain rises at 8 p.m. Thursday, Friday, and Saturday, with a 7 p.m. performance on Sunday. Tickets are $10 and can be ordered in advance by calling 878-1298 or 826-7983. They can be charged to MasterCard or VI SA.

deLima, a member of the Cohasset Drama Club, has appeared in "Cinderella," "Present Laughter," "The Importance of Being Earnest," "Table Manners," and "Dangerous Corner."

She worked in professional theater in London before settling in Cohasset 16 years ago and also performs with the renowned, Hingham-based Broad Cove Chorale.

Over the years, she has appeared with most local musical theater groups. deLima's credits alone make for entertaining reading: "Chicago," "Peter Pan," and "Follies" with That New Theatre; "The Mystery of Edwin Drood," "Oliver," and "Anything Goes" with Hingham Civic Music Theater; "Gypsy" and "Company" for Curtain Call Theater; "Fame" with Company Theater; and "The Odd Couple" with Christo's Dinner Theater.

deLima credits soul-mate Judy Holmes, currently directing "Blithe Spirit" at the Nickerson Theater in Norwell, with bringing her back to the stage after a 10-year sabbatical.

The offstage mother of four children who range in age from 11 to 19, deLima says her character, Arlene, in "Baby" is the closest she's ever come to playing herself: a fortysomething married, Arlene discovers she's about to become a parent again, after raising three grown daughters .

"Everyone in the cast thinks it's frightfully funny," she adds with delicious British wit. "They keep asking me if, at my age, I found out that I was expecting — would I slit my throat, or what? And I tell them, 'No, I'd be thrilled to death.'"

Swim team qualifies for sectionals

The Cohasset High Swim Team, took part in a meet January 30 involving swimmers from Duxbury, Sandwich, Scituate and Cohasset.

Cohasset's relay team was first in the 400 meter free relay and second in the 200 meter medley relay. Chris Henderson was second in the 100 meter butterfly.

The four-man relay team consists of Henderson, Chip Anderson, Dave Leahy and Niki Hawks. Cohasset's times qualify them for the Sectional Finals and State Finals in February.

Coalition to meet

The South Shore Coalition will discuss Clean Harbors' proposed incinerator and the possible closing of the South Weymouth Naval Air Station when it meets at 7:30 p.m. Thursday at Norwell town hall, Route 123.

In addition, the members will discuss the upcoming meeting with the solid waste management consultant and the observance of the 20th anniversary of Earth Day.

Use cloth diapers, do environment a favor

Tip of the week: Use cloth diapers; anything else is trash.

Parents will be glad to know that there are machine-washable diaper wraps that are as easy to use as disposable diapers into which you insert the cloth diaper.

If you don't have the time or interest to wash diapers—hire the diaper service.

You will be diapering your baby over 2,000 times at least, so make the diapering area convenient (near water) and attractive for yourself. Get a pretty diaper pail; hang a painting that you like to look at near the area. Most of all, relax and enjoy this time with your baby. It will be over very soon.

I should know; we're on cloth baby number three. We have taken cloth diapers on trips, and occasionally to work, and yes, occasionally, we have used throw away diapers.

Cloth has not interfered with our busy lifestyle, and we preferred using a product that is simply cotton and simply reusable. . .I think that you will too.

Diapers. I didn't think that I would be tackling this issue, but the Proctor and Gamble coupon ad that ran recently in my Sunday paper, really made me mad.

Many of you felt the same way, as I got plenty of mail on this subject.

It said "Join LUVS and Pampers in Supporting Recycling." I thought that this would make for interesting reading when throw-away diapers make up 2 percent of the solid waste stream. Nationwide throw-away diapers equal 5 million tons of trash a year: that breaks down to 1 ton (used) of trash per child per year.

Sadly, however, the diaper and its contents have little chance for breaking down. A landfill is no place for human waste and can cause serious health threats.

How could a company that creates that much incentive for waste be promoting recycling? Read on, concerned citizen. The ad continued that it would donate 50 cents per redeemed coupon to the City-Wide Parent Council to purchase playground equipment totalling up to $25,000 made from recycled plastic. (When we start recycling HDPE plastic here, it most likely will be made into these "plastic timbers").

Cohasset Agrees CARE to Recycle Everything

You didn't expect them to set aside 50 cents per coupon to recycle your dirty diapers did you? However, the ad would LEAD you to think that they might be recycling dirty diapers.

The two-page ad continues with an environmental insert above the coupon explaining the EPA's vision of waste management: reduce, reuse, recycle, then compost, burn and lastly landfill.

It went on to explain that P&G was practicing this strategy. Recycling: P&G has teamed up with Pabanco Corp. in Seattle, Wash. which was started by a trash hauler who was appalled by the volume of throw-away diapers he was collecting.

P&G has underwritten a small pilot program to pick up at curbside from approximately 1,000 households,take the diapers to the recycling center where the components are separated: plastic (liner and interior), wood pulp, then sanitized and made into flower pots, dry wall backing, and computer paper.

P&G says that they have reduced the volume of the diaper by 50 percent. When I called customer service, I was told that this was achieved through taking out some of the wood pulp and replacing it with polyachrylate gel "a totally natural substance" I was told.

Of course the gel that they added only complicates the recycling process. Lastly,the package is no longer cardboard but plastic bags. We are not able to recycle any of these items on the East coast, so for our purposes this product is not recyclable. (Its cloth alternative is, and the human waste is disposed of properly.

Disposable single-use diapers are big business: $3.5 billion per year. P&G's market share is $1.65 billion per year. They also are expensive to dispose of—$300 million last year alone. Carl Lehrburger, author of "Diapers in our Waste Stream" said 'We have been sold on the idea of disposability without the full recognition of the social costs associated with the convenience."

Source reduction is our personal responsibility. We must all remember that Disposable = Trash. Trash is an expensive commodity in our community. Enticing you to buy a disposable diaper to pay for someone's playground is really a far-fetched misuse of the EPA's strategy:reduce, reuse, recycle.

This ad tried to make an environmental link. As the Minnesota Attorney General, Hubert H. Humphrey III said when he admonished members of the American Advertising Federation, "The selling of the environment may make the cholesterol craze look like a Sunday school picnic. So I offer you a challenge: let's stay out of this one."

Troubleshooting at the RTF

Aluminum. People seem to be throwing chairs and coat hangers into the aluminum bin. One simple way to know if your item is aluminum is by testing it with a magnet.

If it's aluminum it will not stick to a magnet. Even a refrigerator magnet will be able to tell you. Please only put aluminum in the "aluminum only" bin.

Plastic jugs. Coming soon, we will have a chipper/shredder for plastic bottles. You can start saving all plastic jugs (topless please) in your home. Watch for next week's article explaining this further.

Dinosaurs come to Mrs. Moody's kindergarten class at Osgood

He went down the path. On the path he saw a pteranadon. There were tons of palm trees on the path. The sun went down and it was getting late. The dinosaur turned around and went home.

Trevor Hardie

He did not go down the secret path because he was going to school. When he got to school he told all the little dinosaurs about the secret path he saw. At school the teacher tells him that the bad dinosaurs come to school down that secret path. After school he hides in a garbage can that is next to the tall building by the secret path. From the garbage can he sees the big bad dinosaurs taking the secret path home.

Henry Roth

The Stegosaurus crawled down the path on his knees. Down the path he meets Allosaurus coming the other way. The scientist that lived in the tall building ran down the path and captured the two dinosaurs to study them. Allosaurus found a crack in the building wall and the scientist fixed it.

Alex Etkind

He went down the path. He saw a big chunk of gold. He picked it up and he went back home. When he got home he showed it to his mother. She said "That gold would make a beautiful statue." The end.

Jake Morgan

He yells "Mother. Mother, home!", but when he gets home his mother is taking a walk. Soo...he just goes and finds her. He says "Mother I found a path I'll show you where it is, come on." On the path they see a big building. They went inside. Their uncle is there. He takes them out to lunch at McDonalds. The end.

Ashley Leahy

The path was covered with rocks. The dinosaur went down the path. He saw a house. Vampires lived in the house. The vampires were afraid of the dinosaur. The vampires went down the secret path to another building and never went back to their house again. The end.

David Ellis

THE TRIAL COURT
THE PROBATE AND FAMILY COURT
Norfolk Division
Docket No. 90P0283E1

Estate of JENNIE MATSON
late of COHASSET
In the County of NORFOLK

NOTICE

A petition has been presented in the above-captioned matter praying that the last will and codicil of said decedent be proved and allowed and that DANIEL S. CAMPBELL of COHASSET in the County of NORFOLK and ALAN BERGQUIST of BELMONT in the County of MIDDLESEX be appointed executors named in the will without surety on the bond.

If you desire to object to the allowance of said petition, you or your attorney should file a written appearance in said Court at Dedham on or before 10:00 in the forenoon on March 14, 1990.

In addition you should file a written statement of objections to the petition, giving the specific grounds therefore, within thirty (30) days after the return day (or such other time as the Court, on motion with notice to the petitioner, may allow) in accordance with Probate Rule 16.

Witness, Robert M. Ford, Esquire, First Justice of said Court at Dedham, the fifth day of February, one thousand nine hundred and ninety.

Advisory board backs increase in school budget

By John Magadieu
Mariner staff

The advisory board gave its initial endorsement last week to the school committee budget that represents a 5.1 percent increase over last year's budget.

Advisory members stressed that most likely they will have to pare the $5,568,768 school budget, but said they wanted to voice their support for the school committee by taking the higher figure and trimming it rather than taking the lower figure and adding to it.

It is the school committee's position that level funding does not equal level education—that if they are forced to go with the level-funded budget of $5,294,783, 10 or more school employees will be put out of work.

The difference between the two budgets is about $270,000, and school committee members were hopeful that some of that need could be filled with the $300,000 to $400,000 that will come into the town in revenue over and above Proposition 2-1/2.

The advisory board had bad news for them. Much of the "extra" revenue will be eaten up by what they called "uncontrollable expenses," such as pension and insurance payments on the order of $160,000.

And the board still has to review some major budgets—police and fire—and take cost of living allowances into consideration.

Advisory chairman Ray Kasperowicz also voiced concern about the possibility that the state may not make its June aid payment to cities and towns, and that Massachusetts citizens may roll back taxes in November; that would affect state revenues and the allotment to cities and towns.

Supt. Stephen Hart told the board that he has tried to maintain the educational advantages Cohasset students have enjoyed over the years, and noted that many families choose to settle here because they won't have to send their children to private school.

The school department, he noted, has implemented several cost-cutting measures, including student fees and the elimination of some programs.

The department also has been studying the possibilities of forming a five-town region to provide certain classes and programs that a single school might not have the money for or the number of interested students to support.

There has been a decline in enrollment, he added, but at the lower levels—kindergarten and first grade—the population is burgeoning,. The administration is looking at adding another section of first grade.

Hart said he would like to continue to improve the low drop-out rate and high test scores, and enhance the curriculum and the in-service training for teachers.

During this "very difficult" period of tight finances, he said, the school department has been trying to straighten out its priorities.

"There are a lot of programs that cut into educational time," he explained, "things such as health education, which everyone sees as a necessity."

Nowadays, he added, the schools are more involved than ever in "family support." Teachers have

The affordable housing dilemma

By Alison Cohen
Mariner staff

Cohasset is one of several communities in Massachusetts under pressure to develop affordable housing.

It hasn't been an easy process.

In the past two years, the town has seen affordable housing projects come and go with apparently little trace left in their wake.

The two biggest developments— Crystal Woods and Deck Point— washed out primarily because of problems with drainage, septic systems or neighborhood antipathy.

Some wonder whether Cohasset can even approach the goal set by the state.

The magic number is 10 percent of the existing housing stock. According to Cohasset's executive secretary Greg Doyon, Cohasset had 2,512 units of housing according to the 1980 census. He assumes that Cohasset would need to build 250 to 275 units to reach the state-imposed goal.

Barbara Clain, executive director of the Cohasset Housing Authority, said that elderly and handicapped housing counts toward the goal. At the present time, Cohasset has 64 units of elderly housing that can be applied against the target number.

The good news is that the state has guaranteed funding for two projects that Cohasset has been working on: a 12-unit family-housing project and a 2 unit project for people with mental retardation.

"We are very happy about this," said Clain. "So many towns were not able to get this funding."

According to Clain, the family-housing project to be built on land formerly owned by the school department behind the Super Stop & Shop on Rte. 3A is in the very early planning stages.

"It's too premature to say when we might break ground," she said. "We're hoping to proceed right along, though."

The other project, planned for Elm Street, is further along in the planning process.

"We're actually into the working drawings now," Clain said, although she would not venture a guess about a construction start-up date.

Progress is apt to go faster for this project since the state has standard blueprints for the units. Clain described them as appearing like a ranch house containing two separate units. Each unit contains private bedrooms for four clients.

Assuming that the two new projects go forward, Cohasset is still short by at least 170 units. Building those units may be nothing short of miraculous.

Overcoming the lack of buildable land is one ma-

Duke says, "Get the railroad done"

By Tom Henshaw
Mariner staff

What do you do when the boss contradicts you in public?

If you're Stephen Polechronis you smile and say, "That's an aggressive goal he has set for us. We'll certainly try to adhere to it."

Gov. Michael Dukakis told members of the South Shore Chamber of Commerce at a breakfast meeting last week that he expects reconstruction of the Old Colony Railroad to get underway sometime this summer.

"I hope to break ground this summer on the first phase of the Old Colony restoration," Dukakis said.

If that came as a surprise to Polechronis, the project manager who has been forecasting a late December start, he didn't show it.

"We will try hard to meet the governor's charge," he said. "But a lot depends on the kind of instructions we get back from state and federal environmental reviewers and the comments by the public.

"Sometimes that can be done quickly," he said. "I'm sure we can accomplish the groundbreaking by the end of the year but we are going to try to do better."

The sometimes-controversial plan to restore commuter service on three Old Colony lines from Boston to Middleboro, Plymouth and Scituate took a step forward the other day with the release of a draft environemental impact statement on the project.

The draft, which raises the projected cost of the job from $391 million to $561 million, is currently in the hands of the citizens advisory committees for review.

Under the law, Polechronis said, "we are required in terms of 1992, or midpoint, dollars. The federal government will pick up half the tab.

The 1986 figure, he said, has already increased 18 percent to $461 in terms of 1989 dollars and will increase another 15 percent to 18 percent by 1992.

"We feel good about the estimate," he said. "We are

Earth Day Festival

Plans are underway for an Earth Day festival in Cohasset Sunday, April 22.

The committee being formed seeks to include schools, business and civic groups, churches, seniors, scouts, gardeners and residents.

If interested, the first planning meeting is scheduled for Sunday, Feb. 25, at the Unitarian First Parish House, 23 North Main Street, at 1 p.m. Call Sharon Becker, 383-1971, for details.

Gulf Association to meet

The Gulf Association will next meet Wednesday, Feb. 28 at the Parish House, First Parish Church, Cohasset 7:30 to 9:30 p.m.

Joseph Godzik, V.M.D., Cohasset health agent, will advise members on the proper care and feeding of septic systems to minimize potentially polluting outflow to gulf waters and on how to keep grass green without adding nutrients on which summer algae thrives.

Lori Thayer, South Shore regional coordinator for Massachusetts Coastal Zone Management, will tell how other citizens groups are protecting the vulnerable environments of watershed areas and what the state can do to help the association save the gulf.

Also, Gulf Association officers will report on association plans and programs for water testing, public information and membership growth in 1990. Your comments, questions and suggestions will be welcome.

The Gulf Assocation, Inc. is a non-profit organization incorporated under Chapter 180 of the Massachusetts General Laws and was formed for the following purposes:

1. to work for the preservation, restoration, maintenance and conservation in their natural state, of the waters of the tidal river known as the Gulf, which ultimately flows under the Mill Bridge and into Cohasset Harbor, together with their related natural resources, including tributaries, wetlands and watersheds thereof and their related bird, animal and marine life, all as located in Scituate and Cohasset, Mass.;

2. to acquire land or rights in land for conservation purposes and to assist and encourage other organizations and public agencies to do the same within the watershed of the gulf;

3. to establish and promote programs of public information and education and scientific research related to the purposes of this corporation;

4. to find and disclose sources of pollution and to seek to bring them into compliance with applicable law;

5. to seek enforcement of safe and legal operation of power boats on the Gulf;

6. to encourage and maintain membership in the corporation and to solicit financial support of its operations;

7. to keep members of the corporation informed of all proposed building, development and legislation which could adversely affect the gulf or be detrimental to the corporation's purposes;

8. to engage in any and all lawful activities necessary or incidental to accomplish the foregoing purposes, except as restricted herein and as limited by the provisions of Section 501(c)(3) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954, as amended.

Communications regarding The Gulf Association, Inc. should be directed to it c/o John F. Hartshorne, Vice President, 115 Border St., Cohasset, Ma 02025.

The affordable housing dilemma

jor hurdle.

The problem is the inability of the soil to support a septic system adequate for multi-unit construction, according to town experts.

When the the Cohasset half of the Crystal Woods project fell apart, planning board chairman Alfred Moore said that if Cohasset had a big sewage treatment plant it would open up thousands of acres of land that are currently undevelopable.

He didn't think it would happen soon.

"We'll probably all be very elderly before we see a sewer system," he said.

Moore said that Cohasset would need to find more creative ways of meeting the state's affordable housing goal for Cohasset. He suggested scattered site, single-family housing as having the greatest chance of success in a homogenous community like Cohasset.

Many of his sentiments were echoed by Chartis Langmaid of the housing partnership committee.

The housing partnership committee has been heavily involved in the affordable housing projects proposed in Cohasset. Members of the committee have been particularly interested in developing opportunities for home ownership rather than rental housing.

Recent history has convinced them that large multi-unit developments are not likely to be successful in Cohasset.

The housing partnership committee hopes to work closely with the selectmen on a variety of projects involving single-family or duplex units.

The committee has expressed an interest in the Bates Building, the town-owned property on Government Island and homes that may be taken for non-payment of taxes.

Langmaid had hoped that a developer with new and creative ideas might have approached the committee with plans for the Curtis Estate on Jerusalem Road. Apparently, no one is interested in trying to develop the property for affordable housing.

Jack Hurley isn't surprised about the lack of interest shown by developers.

Hurley spent two years trying to develop Crystal Woods, a joint affordable housing project for Cohasset and Scituate. His experience was not a happy one.

"There is no future for affordable housing in Cohasset," he said recently. "There's no cooperation other than a selected few on the housing partnership board. It's pretty much an uphill battle."

Crystal Woods was scaled down to a Scituate-only project when hydrogeological testing proved that the property could not support an adequate septic system.

The Scituate part of the project comes up for its comprehensive permit Feb. 22. Hurley is optimistic that he will get his permit and begin construction this spring.

When asked if he would developing any other affordable housing projects on the South Shore, Hurley said emphatically, "Never!"

For families earning less than $30,000, it remains highly unlikely that they will be able to buy a home in Cohasset anytime soon.

WARNING:

WINTER MAY BE HAZARDOUS TO YOUR CAR.

The facts are hard and cold.

Many motor oils just don't perform in winter weather. And that can lead to friction. Extreme engine wear. Or even extensive damage, or a breakdown that leaves you and your family stranded.

That's why it's so important to take your car or truck to Jiffy Lube now for our famous 14-Point, 10-Minute Oil Change. We'll ensure that your oil is the right weight for your car and the weather. And we'll install a new FRAM or Purolator oil filter, check and fill six essential fluids, lube the chassis, and much more.

Be sure to protect your car and your wallet against cold-weather calamities — by visiting Jiffy Lube today.

Building inspector Bob Egan fits right in to Cohasset

By Alison Cohen
Mariner staff

Cohasset residents who plan to build or remodel are sure to meet Bob Egan sooner or later— if they don't, they just may have run afoul of local bylaws.

Since October, Egan has been Cohasset's building inspector.

It just so happened that when Egan was ready for a change of career, Cohasset was looking for a building inspector.

It wasn't hard for Egan to fit into his new job. Although he isn't Cohasset born and bred, he has summered on the South Shore every year since 1956. For the past 15 years he's been a resident of Hingham.

As the building inspector, Egan has two distinct functions.

First, he issues the permits that allows construction, renovation or remodeling projects to happen. As part of of the permit process, Egan has the responsibility to inspect the premises and order corrections or changes.

Egan's other "hat" is zoning enforcement officer.

Cohasset adopted its first zoning regulations 35 years ago.

"They've added to them yearly ever since then," Egan said. "It's a town's way of controlling growth and preserving the atmosphere it wants."

Controlling growth isn't a major problem for Cohasset.

"Cohasset is pretty much out of land," Egan said. Pretty much out of buildable land, anyway. In the past few years, a subdivision with more than four houses would be considered relatively "big".

The only big subdivision in the pipeline is planned for Lambert's Lane— and that has been inactive for as long as Egan has been building inspector and probably longer.

Robert Egan

The problems faced by that subdivision are the problems faced by every would-be builder and developer in Cohasset. If it's not lousy drainage, then the soil won't support an adequate septic system.

Drainage and septage aren't in Egan's bailiwick. Those are problems for the board of health and the conservation commission.

"The building department doesn't really stop much construction," Egan said.

Most of Egan's time is spent checking to make sure that projects don't violate the zoning laws. That could change in the spring when construction projects traditionally begin.

Then again, things could stay the same.

Egan said, "It's slow. The downturn is statewide."

Most of the work that Egan is supervising is remodeling and renovation.

Knowing when you need a permit can be tricky. Egan suggests that people contact his office before beginning any project.

No construction or renovation work can escape Egan's notice for long.

"Cohasset is so small that within two days I'm on every street," he said. "It's hard to do anything in this town without a permit."

Egan also pointed out that an occupancy certificate is necessary before anyone can move into a new building or one that has undergone major renovation. That requirement applies to both residential and commercial property.

According to Egan, some of the reasoning behind what requires a permit and what does not isn't so much to restrict construction as to disseminate information "to the assessors in particular," he said.

The permit process can also benefit the homeowner or business owner, he said.

now at 30 percent of the design stage. The figures are based on a lot of engineering work and a contract price with the car builder."

The MBTA has on order from Kawasaki, the Japanese firm, a total of 75 double-decked cars for the existing rail lines. Two of the cars will be ready for testing this summer.

"As part of the contract," Polechronis said, "we also have an option on cars for the Old Colony line, rolling stock for which we are budgeted for $145 million."

State and federal funding for the Old Colony project are about as committed as they can be without having all the cash in hand.

"We have a $195.8 million bond authorization from the state," Polechronis said. "It is still in place. It cannot be used for other projects.

"Under the Federal Urban Mass Transit Administration (UMTA) funding process, we cannot ask for the money until the environmental reviews are completed. We expect to submit a grant application in the summer.

"We have an agreement in principal with UMTA to allow us to use the rail money it gives the MBTA to cover half the Old Colony costs. The MBTA regards this as a commitment."

Polechronis said the project will begin with the Middleboro and Plymouth lines because they are the easiest to implement and both end at the Red Line station in South Braintree.

"We are aware that the Greenbush line is the most controversial because it will go through the most congested corridor," he said. "It is possible we will have to have an additional environmental impact report on Greenbush if it becomes clear it needs significant additional analysis."

The Old Colony project, 80 miles long through 23 communities, has encountered relatively little environmental difficulty because it follows the old road beds that were abandoned for passenger service more than 30 years ago.

"There have been fairly few environmental impacts," Polechronis said, "and those can be mitigated.

"We found only 34 residential properties where the noise impacts exceed allowable standards. We plan to build noise walls near 14 of them. The others don't qualify for noise walls, but we will do things like in-

(See page 7)

"We can help people avoid unnecessary expenses, let them know about changes in energy requirements and handicap access laws," said Egan.

Most importantly, through the permit and inspection process a home or business owner can avoid doing something that has to be changed.

Zoning bylaws cover lot size, setbacks, signs and parking spaces. Many homeowners are surprised to learn that siding and roofing work require permits.

If you thought you had it all figured out, Egan is quick to throw in "general repair doesn't require a permit."

On the other hand, in Cohasset fences require a permit. The operative bylaws change with the height of the fence.

Egan explains: If your fence is five feet high or less, you can put the fence right on your property line. Anything higher is considered a permanent structure and must abide by the setback requirements, which could be 15, 20 or 30 feet from the property line.

Considering that the standard stockade fence is six feet high, the setback requirements can be a real problem.

Egan said that enforcing the zoning regulations can be the hardest part of his job.

"Someone who hasn't done something consistent with the bylaws isn't a criminal," Egan said. Unfortunately, they often feel as if the system is treating them that way.

If the bylaws say no way, a variance may be the solution, said Egan.

To get a variance, the applicant must prove that there is something unique about the lot, that a serious financial hardship would ensue if the applicant followed the letter of the law and that the desired project is consistent with the neighborhood.

Egan says keeping tabs on new construction is the easiest part of his job.

"The big jobs are being done by real pros," he said. "I enjoy going out to see what they're doing.

Egan's appreciation of master craftsmanship comes from his own long career in construction. Egan spent many years building in the Hingham, Dedham and West Roxbury area.

He also spent 13 years as a teacher, 10 of them at Boston Tech.

Egan and his wife, Virginia, are the proud parents of 16-month-old Katie Egan.

Hingham's Dan Daly aims to unseat Sen. John Kerry

By John Magadieu
Mariner staff

Last December, columnist Peter Lucas of the Boston Herald likened Hingham's Dan Daly to the comic book alias Clark Kent.

By then, the Republican National Senatorial Committee had been wooing the tall, broad-shouldered, gregarious businessman for more than a year, hoping that beneath that blue, pin-striped suit was a Superman who could knock Sen. John Kerry, a Democrat, out of office.

Daly, who has been a prominent fundraiser for the Republican party and a strong supporter of President George Bush in Massachusetts, announced his candidacy for the U.S. Senate last month.

Since then, he has been canvassing the state—faster than a speeding bullet—seeking support among the 6,000 delegates to the Republican state convention, which will be held in Boston next month.

His credentials alone should impress them. Daly, 46, was born in Boston, grew up in Milton, and has lived in Hingham since 1970. He is a 1965 graduate of the Harvard College of Economics, and served in the U.S. Navy from 1965 through 1968; in 1967 and '68 he commanded a patrol boat in Vietnam. His war decorations include a purple heart.

In 1968, he married his wife, Nancy Quincy Dempsey, and between 1968 and 1989, Daly started three businesses in the personnel placement field, an executive search firm, a secretarial placement agency and a temporary help agency.

At the time Daly & Company, Inc. sold its temporary help firm to Lifetime Corp., a Boston-based, publicly-held corporation last August, the company was bringing in $6.5 million annually, had 300 employees and five locations in greater Boston, including an office in Braintree.

Now, Daly is concentrating on the task at hand, winning the Republican nomination. He has to beat out Republican contenders Jim Rappaport and Mildred Jefferson for the right to take on Kerry, and that may be the easy part; Daly said that of 2,400 delegates polled, 50 percent are uncommitted, however he leads among the others 38 to 8 percent.

Daly has built a campaign committee that is top-heavy with South Shore talent, including eight from Hingham, two from Milton, and one each from Cohasset, Marshfield and Westwood.

Dan Daly

Daly said he will spend $300,000 trying to win the nomination, and will really pour it on against Kerry; he has budgeted $3.5 million for that campaign. On Feb. 27, he hopes to add another $25,000 to $30,000 to his war chest with a fundraiser at the Lantana in Randolph.

But for all Daly's muscle, it may be that the traditional political climate of Massachusetts is all the kryptonite Kerry will need to keep his job in Washington.

Daly said he would represent "family values" on Capitol Hill, but promoting that image may not help him get there. This, after all, is home to the electorate that time-and-again has voted for the likes of Edward Kennedy and Gerry Studds, career politicians with serious blotches on their records.

That southern conservatives refer to this state snidely as "the People's Republic of Massachusetts," and that George Will, a political commentator for ABC-TV, has described the Massachusetts Republican Party as the "Chernobyl of American politics," underscores the left-leaning, one party nature of politics here, and perhaps tells us as much about Daly's chances in November against Kerry, who has kept himself a relatively obscure member of the Massachusetts delegation.

But Daly said he sees Kerry's obscurity as a vulnerability that he can take advantage of.

"John Kerry is a formidable opponent," Daly said, "but he is vulnerable because he is not well-known, and people feel he has been sitting on the sidelines while the Massachusetts miracle was evaporating."

Daly said he believes Massachusetts residents are growing tired of the one-party domination both on Beacon Hill and in the U.S. Congress.

"That (one-party domination) affects us, especially with a Republican administration in the White House," he said. "I want to change that by representing Massachusetts in Washington and working with a strong Republican in the White House."

Daly characterizes the two men who represent Massachusetts in the U.S. Senate as career politicians who have never had jobs in the private sector, "have never had to meet a payroll and have never created a job."

stall double windows to cut the noise."

Wetland impacts, he said, are very minor. In fact, construction of the old road bed more than a hundred years ago changed things so radically that to restore the area to its pristine quality in the last century would now be environmentally unsound.

Polechronis concedes that there are still pockets of opposition to restoration of commuter rail service, one of them being the city of Quincy where the trains will pass through without stopping.

"The City Council and the new mayor (James Sheets) continue to see it as unattractive to Quincy," he said. "It will have no impact on Quincy, except to reduce the amount of air pollution by decreasing the number of automobiles on the highways.

"The Old Colony will use the existing right of way next to the Red Line and the highway, Newport Avenue and Burgin Parkway. If the appropriate elected to give the (committees) a 30-day review period, which ends March 10." After that the committees' comments are added and it (the draft) is sent to Washington for review. That should take about two or three weeks.

"The public review period will start about April 1," he added. "There will be public hearings around the end of April. That tells us what to do for the final Environmental Impact Report."

Polechronis said the first actual work on the rights of way, which are already in existence, will not be visible to the public. It involves upgrading the bridges and the road beds, which run through woods and marshland for the most part.

"By the end of the year," he said, "we should be breaking ground on the Braintree to Middleboro and Braintree to South Hanson sections of the lines, starting with bridge work, then track reconstruction and then station and intersection work.

"Our aim is to get the Middleboro and Hanson lines up and running to Braintree by the end of 1992. There will be a temporary transfer service to the MBTA Red Line at Braintree station.

"By mid-1991 we hope to break ground from Braintree to the north, including the Neponset River Bridge, and from Hanson south, including the new station in Kingston.

"By mid-1992, we will break ground on the Greenbush (Scituate) line with a goal of completion by 1994, when commuters will have a one-seat ride all the way to South Station."

Polechronis said the increase in the 1986 cost estimate of $391.7 million is due to inflation, both past and future, and is pretty well frozen at $561 million officials want us to look at a station site in Quincy we are willing. They haven't asked yet."

"Sometimes," he added, "it is easiest to listen to the loudest voices."

He noted that the people of Quincy, Weymouth and Hingham all had a chance to vote recently in nonbinding referenda on the railroad and "in each case our position was supported" by a good margin.

"What politician would be unhappy with 65 percent of the vote?" he asked.

Dan Daly seeks U.S. Senate seat...

Kerry and Kennedy, he said, spend more time thinking about El Salvador and foreign affairs than they do about Massachusetts.

"What do either of them know about small businesses?" he said. "Nationally, 80 percent of the population works for small businesses; the percentage is probably higher in Massachusetts."

Daly said he wants to bring the experience he gained building his businesses to government. "What I'd like to do as U.S. Senator is prepare to make America competitive in the '90s."

With the Eastern European markets opening up and the people of those countries clamoring for the products they have gone without for so many years, Daly predicted, the competition to grab ahold of those markets will be fierce.

Japan is already there, he said, and a reunified Germany will be an economic force to reckon with," Daly said. "If America is competitive with a strong economy, Massachusetts has got potential to be a part of that."

Daly said he believes the government can help America sharpen its competitive edge by cutting spending and increasing revenues without raising taxes.

The government can encourage business growth—and the creation of jobs—through a "research and development tax credit and a tax loss carry-forward, things that will say to the small-businessman, 'We want you to take a risk.'"

Daly said that if the government can reinvigorate the U.S. economy and make America the world leader again, then we will have the resources to deal with problems such as crime, drugs and education.

If he does get elected, Daly said he will keep in mind the South Shore and the issues of concern to residents here, issues such as the environment and the commute to Boston (what to do with Route 3). He hinted there might be a role the federal government could play in solving the South Shore's transportation problems, and that he would press for federal assistance.

When he is not stuck in Route 3 traffic, Daly can be found at his Mast Hill Road home with his wife, Dorothy, who is an active member in the Garden Club of Hingham and is a C.C.D. teacher in the Resurrection parish.

They have two boys. Dan, 19, is a sophomore at Villanova, and Mark, 16, is a sophomore at St. Sebastian's in Needham.

Daly's sister, Ellen, also lives in Hingham with her three children.

Chiropractic for Health
by Debra M. Tranberg

AN UNEVEN STORY
If a person were to have his entire skeletal structure X-rayed, he would very likely find that a bone on one side of his body would be shorter than the corresponding bone on the other side. Even if this were not the case, a curvature of the spine may lead to a difference in leg length. While any difference in leg length up to a half-inch is usually compensated for by the feet, pain can be an unwanted by-product. This pain may show up anywhere from the arch of the foot, up the leg, to an area anywhere in the back. If leg unevenness brings on such pain, it is best to find its underlying cause. Whether the culprit is a curved spine or uneven bone length, a chiropractic examination may well be the best place to start to pinpoint the cause.
Pain is a symptom and a signal that prompt action is prudent. SCITUATE HARBOR CHIROPRACTIC will utilize such signals in determining the source of your difficulty and applying the appropriate chiropractic techniques. For the chiropractic exam that will make the difference you desire and deserve, call SCITUATE HARBOR CHIROPRACTIC. Located at 80 Front St., Scituate Harbor. Tel. 545-7388. By appt. Early morning and late evening appts. Workers Comp cases, VISA, M/C and most insurance plans accepted.
HINT: An over-compensating foot arch is often the cause of back pain.

Around town

With Sallyann Chatterton

❑ Congratulations go to Greg and Kim Byrnes this week! Greg and Kim are the brand new parents of Kayla Nicole Burns, born Feb. 12, 1990 and weighing in at 7 pounds 3 ounces.

Needless to say, both grandmothers Mary and Polly are beside themselves and cannot wait to get their hands on Kayla.

And if you think that's special, what about Kayla's great-grandparents Cecilia and Parker Malley! Thrilled doesn't even describe how they are! Best of luck to all of you, and enjoy that baby!

❑ John Donnelly has been appointed President of the DEMCO Sign Co., Inc. of Boston. DEMCO makes signs and scoreboards for various locations, including Fenway Park.

❑ Our town will certainly miss Louis Watson. He was a true legend! We always will picture him "around town" with his faithful dog and he going for rides every day; for his caring manner with others; for his ready smile and friendly greetings...the list is endless. Louis was a gentleman; he will be remembered with love.

❑ This month there will be a celebration of a former priest's 25 years of service, and we are sure that many of you will remember him. Father William Mullin began his priesthood at St. Anthony's 25 years ago, and he was here for three years.

One big event that happened during his stay at his first parish was laying the

Sally Schwartz to wed Timothy Higginson

Mr. and Mrs. Alan G. Schwartz of Highland Park, Ill. announce the engagement of their daughter, Sally Roslyn Schwartz, to Timothy Bowditch Higginson, son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Higginson of Cohasset and Washington, D.C.

Mr. Higginson is the grandson of the late Charles Higginson, a founder of Scudder, Stevens and Clark; and Dr. Andrew D. Osborn, formerly of Harvard University.

His father, formerly with the State Department, is an international consultant with Transat Associates, and his mother, Genevra, is director of special events at the National Gallery of Art.

He is also a descendant of Nathaniel Bowditch, navigation author and discoverer of the Bowditch Curves;* and of Thomas Wentworth Higginson, an American author, who accepted command of the first black regiment in the U.S. armed forces during the civil war and later discovered and encouraged the poet Emily Dickinson.

The future bride, a graduate of Highland Park High School, received a bachelor of arts degree in English literature from Dartmouth College in 1985, and a master's degree in education from Northwestern University in 1989.

Ms. Schwartz was assistant photo editor of Woman's Day magazine in New York and the photo editor of Outside magazine in Chicago. She is currently an English teacher at Highland Park High School.

The prospective groom graduated from Phillips Academy at Andover, Massachusetts, and received a bachelor of arts degree in government from Harvard College in 1981.

Mr. Higginson worked at the International Energy Agency in Paris and at the Hughes Aircraft Company's Space and Communications Group in California.

He expects to receive a J.D. degree from the University of Chicago Law School in June, 1990, after which he will be associated with the firm of Debevoise & Plimpton in Washington, D.C.

The wedding is planned for early May.

❑ Shona Hislop, Erin McAllister, Marisol Perry, Jim Herzog, Jessica Connor, Jerome Marion, Mike Cisneros, Matt Silvia, J. Gaston, Dudley Bryan, Andrew Ross, Doug Moe and Kasey Smith all have reason to be proud artists.

They are participating in the Boston Globe Scholastic Art Awards at the Boston Center for the Arts.

Dudley Bryan really did himself proud; he won the highest honor at the Boston Globe Scholastic Art Awards Show! The prize was a Gold Key, and he won it with his self-portrait drawing. Congratulations go to all of you.

❑ Everyone is anxious to hear the results of the great T.V. turn-off week; we wonder how it went! Did you take part in your house? Someone should have kept a diary of what he or she did for a week with no television. I bet it wasn't easy in some houses!

❑ Dan Pompeo's name was in the Globe sports page again this week; he is having another outstanding year in hockey...He even wows them at the college level. Congratulations Dan, we sure are proud of you!

❑ It certainly is nice to see the Rev. Stephen Hall walking around town these days! The Rev. Hall had a bad accident from which he is now recovered, and it is nice to report that all is well with him.

❑ Finally, good bye to Jane Lane and we wish her the best of luck in her new ventures. She sure will be missed around town!

I had the good fortune to meet the new editor of the Cohasset Mariner, John Magadieu, last week and found him to be very nice, likable and full of good ideas.

Let's all be sure to help him and let him help us, so that we can keep your Mariner the way you like it.

That is all the news from here, call me with your vacation news!

Blue and Gold fun

Pack 38 Cub Scouts celebrated their Blue and Gold Dinner in "Mardi Gras" style.

The den leaders and cubs colorfully decorated their dinner tables with festive centerpieces and placemats.

The Old Mills District Executive, Jerry Kazanjian, enjoyed the evening.

The delicious spaghetti and meatball dinner was catered by "The Canteen" with Mark Mackey.

The highlights of the evening were those scouts who earned their badges. Cubmaster, Jeff Forsdick, presented the following:

Wolf Badges: Den 4, Stephan Vanderweil, Mario Bruzzone, Joseph Nicynski and Alexis Mincolla. Den 5, Robert Butman, James Simon and Brian Hurley.

Bear Badges: Den 1, Kevin DeVito, Gold and 3 silver arrows; Greg Boyne Bear, Gold and 2 silver arrows; Todd Bestick Bear, Gold arrow; Ben Ketchem Bear, Gold arrow; Luke Caldwell Bear, Gold arrow; Andrew Sorrentino, gold, 1 silver arrow; Ronald Nicynski Bear and gold arrow.

Den 2: Mike Baird Bear; gold, 1 silver arrow, Mark Equi, gold, silver arrow; Greg Parkinson Bear; gold arrow; Sean Parkinson Bear, Robert Morgan Bear; gold, Erick Hanian Bear; Gold and 1 silver arrow.

Den 3: Ben Smoot Bear; 1 gold, 3 silver.

Webelo: Dan Preston, Webelo badge.

The scouts and their parents and relatives were thoroughly entertained by Creepy, Crawly & Co. with Bonnie and Fred Silva. She had a Macaw which chattered and talked constantly.

She showed her three turtles and lizard. She brought a Prairie dog and not too many scouts had ever seen one.

One cub said it was like a rabbit with no ears. Its fur looked so soft.

The surprise was covered in a big case. When it was uncovered Bonnie's husband, Fred assisted a python out.

Andrew Sorrentino's sister, Alicia was brave enough to step forward and displayed the snake on her shoulders.

He was very friendly and seemed to enjoy looking around at his captive audience.

Those who thought that Python was long, were astounded by the next visitor, who was 11 feet long. Linda Bramblett held this Python as her son, Tony, looked on at a fair distance.

The scouts had the opportunity to touch all the animals, bird or reptiles. Some were surprised to feel the Python and realize its skin wasn't slimy—it was smooth.

The unique stories behind Bonnie's pets were each reptile, bird or animal had some type of handicap. She nurtured some back to health or some were born with deformities. Each creepy crawley adapted with its handicap to live a happy life and with Bonnie's loving care it's no wonder.

Chris Lucas (top) learns to "love a lizard and tickle a turtle" courtesy of Creepy Crawly & Co. of North Weymouth. The scouts were captivated by the show during the Blue and Gold Dinner festivities.

Hello Cohasset

This past week has been like a homecoming for me. When I started with Mariner Newspapers back in 1986, I was working as a reporter for Jane Lane in Cohasset and Hingham.

In 1987, I went to Marshfield. Then, they made me editor of the Pembroke Mariner. Now, I'm back in Cohasset as editor trying to remember everyone's name and which street is where.

As author of the Mariner's "Cohasset Heights Landfill Chronicles," among other other contributions, I got to know the town and many of you.

I look forward to bringing you the news and information you need to make the important decisions that affect your life and your town, as well as entertaining features about interesting individuals and places here.

If by some chance over the next week or two I mention the "Pembroke" something-or-other when I mean to say "Cohasset," don't mind me. I'm just getting back my sea legs.

-John Magadieu
editor, Cohasset Mariner

Recycling news . . .

By Jennifer Longley
Special to the Mariner

Recycling tip for the week:

Start saving your plastic containers for recycling, not just food containers. Read on for more information.

What does a newpaper and an empty bottle of NyQuil have in common? They now can both be recycled in Cohasset.

It always seemed like such a waste to throw away strong, durable plastic containers once the product they held was used up. Well, now we can recycle many of those plastic bottles, jugs and tubs that have taken up so much space in the trash.

Start saving all your plastic containers; milk jugs, margarine tubs, laundry detergent bottles, salad dressing bottles, bleach bottles, mouthwash bottles, spring water bottles, etc...

Cohasset now has a new plastic shredder machine which reduces the plastic to flakes that can be recycled into a variety of useful products such as plastic lumber for outdoor structures, clothes hangers, toys and other permanent items.

The board of health this week signed a five-year contract to obtain the shredder free of charge from Waste Knott recovery services of Sandwich, who will then buy back the plastic flake material from Cohasset for $20 per ton.

Because empty plastic containers take up an estimated 15 percent of space, by volume, in the trucks that transport our trash to the SEMASS incinerator in Rochester, we will be saving a substantial amount of money in transportation costs since fewer trips will have to be made.

Our new shredder only will be taking two types of plastic; Polyethylene Terephthalate (PET), the same plastic of our "bottle bill" soda bottles, introduced in 1978, and HighDensity Polyethylene (HDPE), introduced in 1957.

Nevertheless save and bring all plastic containers to the RTF, because the staff there will separate the PET and HDPE from the non-recycable plastic.

Plastic recycling is not new. Manufacturers have, for years, routinely recycled, or reintroduced, scrap plastic back into the process.

Plastic recycability is reasonably feasible when items are made from one generic type such as PET or HDPE, and collected as such, and by the same token, recyclability is severely curtailed when containers are made from several different types of plastic, or worse, plastic mixed with other materials.

Some types of plastic are not at all recycable because they can not withstand the high temperatures. Recycled plastic can not be reused as food containers or packaging because the plastic can't be heated to such a temperature that will guarantee that it will be free of contaminants. That guarantee is required by the U.S. Food and Drug Administration.

Troubleshooting at the RTF:

For both glass and plastic bottles, remember to take off all lids and plastic labels (if possible), paper labels are o.k.

Lagrotteria clears up the confusion

Letters

To the Editor:

I take pen in hand to write this letter in hopes that it will clarify several mis-quotations in the local papers recently concerning exemptions.

The request by the board of assessors to place an article on the town meeting warrant was in reference to an exemption under Clause 17c of Section 5, Chapter 59 of the General Laws of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts. And if accepted by the town at town meeting, the provisions of Section 17 will no longer be applicable.

Clause 17 is a provision by the General Laws to provide a.) a surviving spouse or a minor whose parent is deceased and b.) a person 70 years or older. The requirements for qualifying for the exemption are:

a.) surviving spouse or minor child -

1. Real property must be owned and occupied as a domicile on July 1 of the year to which the tax relates.

2. The whole estate cannot exceed $40,000 exclusive of the mortgage and exclusive of property exempt under Clauses 12, 20 and 21 (relating to burial rites, household personal property and livestock respectively).

3. Additionally the first $150,000 of value in real estate occupied by such person as his/her domicile would be excluded.

b.) persons over 70 years of age -

1. Persons over 70 years of age on July 1 must meet qualifications (1), (2) and (3) set forth above and in addition must have owned and occupied the subject property as their domicile for not less than ten (10) years.

Those meeting the requirements above are privileged to receive the exemption which cannot be denied by the Assessors. The dollar amount for each of these classifications is equal to $175 of the actual taxes due.

Application for each of these categories must be made yearly on an approved form and filed no later than December 15 of the year to which the tax relates.

I have tried to make this as concise as possible without jeopordizing any of the facts. Anyone not understanding my explanation may call the Assessors office and request to receive by mail a brochure printed by the Department of Revenue which explains all exemptions under Chapter 59, Section 5.

I take this opportunity to urge all townspeople to vote affirmatively at Town Meeting the Article which will allow the Town to accept the provisions of Clause 17c.

Sincerely,
James W. Lagrotteria,
Assessor

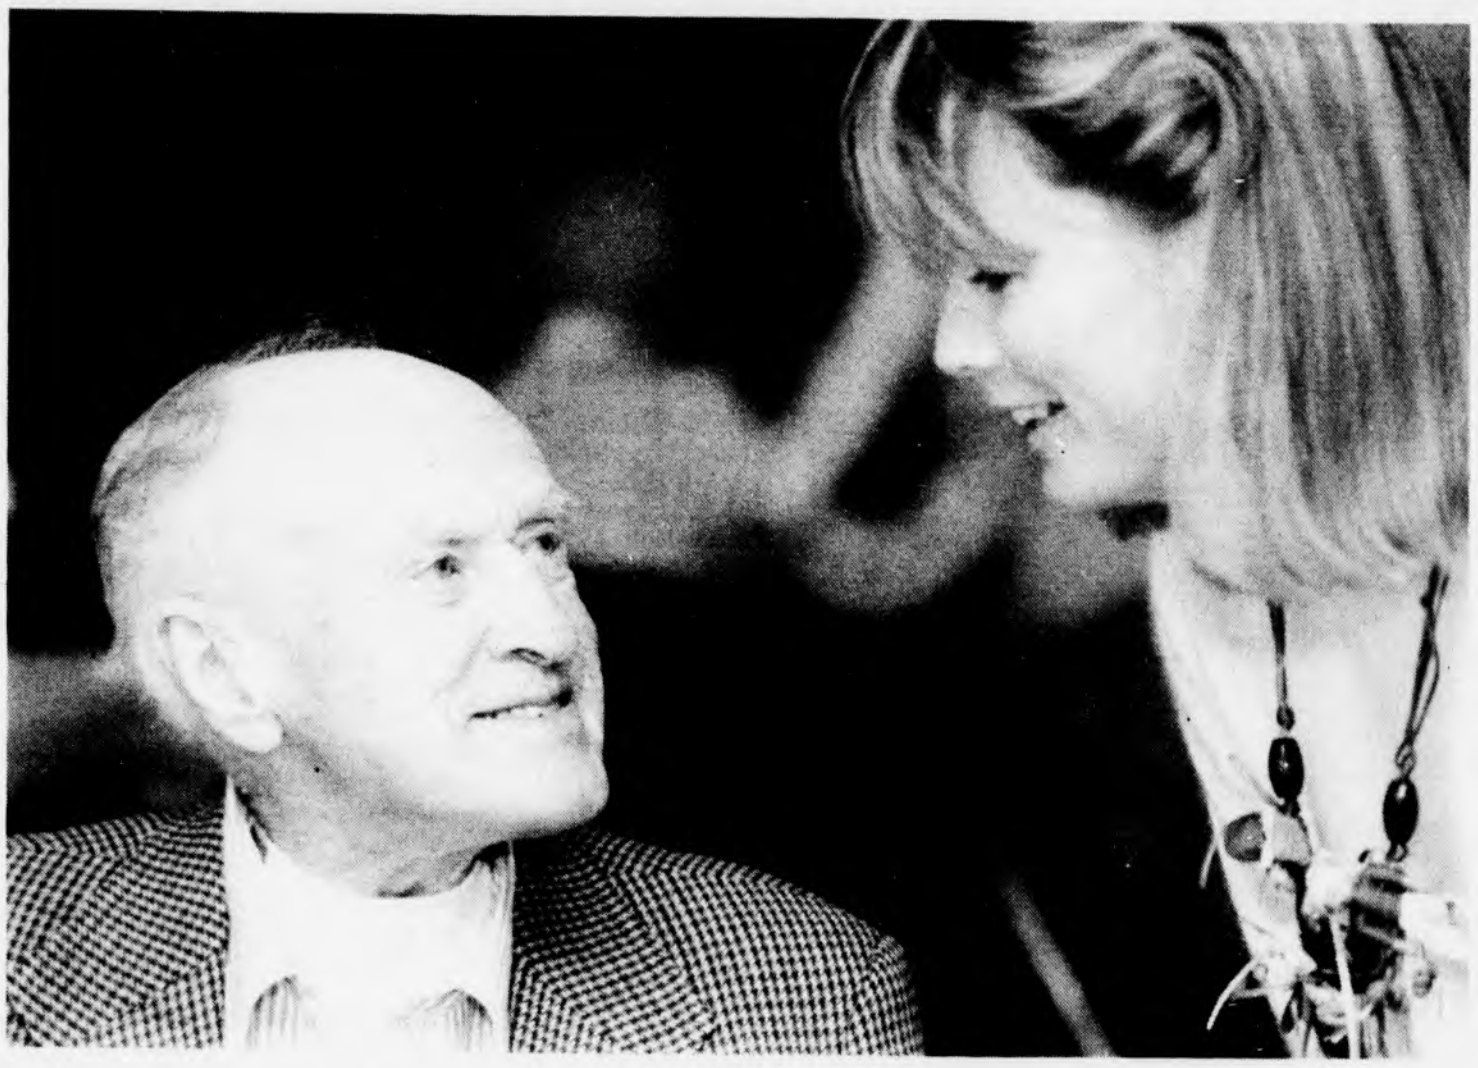
Handicap commission a good idea

To the Editor:

There will be an article in the warrant for the town meeting to establish a Commission For the Handicapped, in accordance with the provisions of section J of Chapter 40 of the Massachusetts General Laws.

The functions of the commission include coordination of programs and facilities, assisting the town in recognizing and implementing its responsibilities under the law, acting as an information resource center, and helping establish a registry of handicapped persons in the town.

It is hoped that a supporting group, with some such name as "Friends of the Handicapped Commission" would be formed for such activities as fund raising from private sources, and generally to provide additional hands and minds to help ensure that the services and facilities are in place to ensure realization of the full potential of the handicapped.



One important task is to identify all persons in the town who should be served in some manner, through programs or facilities for the handicapped, and to assist the fire department in knowing the location of all handicapped persons.

Of course, not all needs can be satisfied at this time, but first it is necessary to identify the quantity and quality of the needs. It also is necessary to ensure that the handicapped are aware of the services that currently exist, from government and non-government organizations.

Please contact Michelle Buckley, 247 Forest Ave. 383-0304, who is Chairperson of the Task Force for Handicapped Persons, the precursor to the Commission.

Yours very truly,
R.M. Campbell
secretary

Juniors may try Coast Guard

The U.S. Goast Guard is inviting high school juniors to try academy life. Every August, the Coast Guard's civilian volunteer armsends a select number of students to the U.S. Coast Guard Academy in New London, Conn.

Students will sample every facet of academy life, from sailing sloops to marching in close order drills between classes. There will be lectures, movies, athletics and instructions in seamanship for the 200 youngsters chosen to attend.

Local Coast Guard Auxiliary units are interviewing prospective candidates during February and March. Candidates must be high school juniors from 15 and 18 years of age and have a good scholastic record (upper 25 percent of class or PSAT score of over 1,000), strong in math and science. They should have good health and 20/20 eyesight or 20/20 correctable eyesight.

Students from France

Thirty students and four teachers from Lycee Professional Nemours, France will visit Cohasset and the Northeast from April 7 to April 19.

The students are from 16- to 19-years old.

They will visit Cohasset High School as well as tourist attractions in the Boston area from the 7th to the 12th. The school is looking for volunteers to provide lodging for these students and their chaperones during those six days.

After their stay in Cohasset the students will visit New York City and Washington, D.C.

They will be back in New England April 19 for their return flight to F'rance.

If you would be willing to host one or more of these students please contact Paul Narkiewicz at 383-6100 at the high school.

Jennifer Reidy, a leader

Jennifer Reidy has been chosen as the Cohasset Junior-Senior High School representative to the 13th annual youth leadership seminar, which is sponsored by the Massachusetts Youth Leadership Foundation.

She was chosen because of her "proven concern for others, desire to learn and overall leadership ability," the foundation said. She will be one of more than 260 outstanding sophomores from public and private schools throughout Massachusetts attending the seminar June 7-10 at the Bentley College campus in Waltham.

Katie O'Sullivan, a student at Cohasset High School, also was chosen as a January student of the month.

Cohasset school food, yum yum!

By Alison Cohen
Mariner staff

Few things remain unchanged across the generations. The horrors of school lunch may be one of the few truly intergenerational shared experiences around.

If you were a student in the '50s and '60s, school lunch was predictable if not enjoyable. Wednesday was baked burger on petrified bun and Friday was fishsticks. Several times a month, the cafeteria ladies ladled out the yellow theme meal of macaroni and cheese, corn, and diced peaches. And then there was the government surplus commodity peanut butter,an early prototype for superglue.

If kids considered lunch the pits, the administration knew it was a money pit.

Vatican II threw fishsticks off the menu, the Reagan administration identified ketchup as a vegetable for a while, and changing tastes and demographics added new foods like tacos and pizza to the menu. Kids still complained and the school still had to subsidize the program heavily.

In short, the hot lunch program was a no-win situation.

Cohasset has figured out a way to reverse the trend. After noting a steady decline in the number of kids buying hot lunch and a steady increase in the cost of feeding fewer students, the school committee contracted out the lunch program to a private company, Canteen Corporation.

Canteen Corp. prepares lunches for all the schools in the kitchens at the high school. Tuesdays, the hot meal served to Cohasset's senior citizens is also prepared at the high school by arrangement with the council on aging.

Canteen also does breakfast and snacks for the hungry scholars at the high school. The breakfast menu ranges from toast and muffins to eggs. Congregating in the cafeteria before the first bell has become popular for a large number of students.

At lunch time, students can choose between two full-course offerings or they can go through an a la carte line. A soup and salad bar is also offered.

Kids who brown bag their lunches can supplement what mom packed with ice cream, chips, cookies, fruit, and beverages.

The decibel level when the junior high kids are dining reaches amazing heights. Senior high students are a more sedate crowd. Both groups are big fans of the change.

Student Claudia Johnson rated it "100 percent better".

"I do the a la carte," said Johnson's tablemate, Heather Brennock. "It's definitely better than before."

Students gave Canteen high marks for the number of choices and the appearance of the food, but they were not uncritical.

"The quality has gone up, but the prices have gone up, too," said Brennock.

"Yesterday's lunch was disgusting," added Errin MacDonald. She singled out the ham and cheese melt and the chicken with spaghetti on top as dishes that should be dumped from the menu.

Student preferences are taken into account, said manager Mark Mackey. An advisory board of parents and students meets with the lunch room staff once a month.

Canteen Corp. also tries to improve the surroundings. They have dressed up the cafeteria with plants and displays to please the eye as well as the palate. Students have noted their efforts.

"It looks a lot better," was what Amy Young had to say about the food and the cafeteria.

The biggest fans of the lunchroom change are the teachers.

"It's like a ray of sunshine in the day," said English teacher Don Reade. Reade has been teaching in Cohasset for 26 years and has eaten more than his share of cafeteria food. He can't say enough nice things about Canteen's food and staff.

John DeLorenzo, the assistant principal, carried his tray of soup and salad over to Reade's table.

"This Canteen is the best thing that ever happened to this place," he said. "Another happy camper!"

Jack Buckley, director of the alternative high school, was busy urging the cafeteria staff to do away with the non-recyclable styrofoam soup bowls. The cafeteria ladies good humoredly suggested that he bring his own china bowl, but told him not to try to palm off a serving bowl on them.

As if the rave reviews weren't enough, even the taxpayers are benefitting from the new way of doing lunch.

"We run the program to break even," said Supt. Stephen Hart. "We're showing a small profit now."

Because Canteen Corp runs the project on a management fee, all profits belong to the school system.

If the proof is in the pudding, in less than four months of operation the lunch program has increased participation by 12 percent.

"It's so nice to be able to relax and enjoy a nice meal very nicely served in a nice atmosphere," Reade said with a contented sigh before heading back to his classroom.

Science Center auction

Friday evening, March 30, will be an exciting evening of bidding, with all proceeds going to the South Shore Natural Science Center, Norwell. South Shore auctioneer Joan Caddigan will put up for bid more than 100 goods and services.

Mary ("Woody") Lawson of Hingham is chairing the event with the help of Hingham resident Connie Beal of the Science Center and other committee members representing the towns of Hingham, Cohasset, Norwell, Scituate, and Marshfield.

A silent auction will feature such items as cottage garden flower seeds from Botanica of Merchants Row; a haircut, style, and manicure from Clickers II, Weymouth; tickets to Plimoth Plantation, and more.

The live auction will feature more than 100 items, including an autographed poster and book by local illustrator Jan Brett, a basketball autographed by the Celtics, courtesy of Walter Earl Chevrolet, Bridgewater and a sailing picnic on Duxbury Bay with Woody and Sam Lawson; there also will be riding lessons from Briggs Stable, Hanover; and a sightseeing plane ride over Cape Cod and the Islands, courtesy of Dr. Thomas Trozzi of Norwell.

Jewelry, gift certificates for clothing, and household items from area merchants complement the "services" donated by celebrities and friends of the science center.

The auction will be held at the Cushing Center (old town hall) in Norwell. Preview is at 6:30 p.m. followed at 7 p.m. by a buffet dinner. The auction will begin at 7:45 p.m. Tickets for the auction and dinner are $15 per person and are available at the science center. For more information, please contact Connie Beal at the South Shore Natural Science Center (617) 659-2559.

Marketing seminar May 24

The South Shore Business Journal will sponsor a marketing and advertising conference for small and mid-sized businesses from 2:30 to 4:30 p.m. Thursday, May 24, at the Holiday Inn in Rockland.

The conference, "The Marketing Edge: How to Get More Customers," will focus on all aspects of marketing — including advertising, self-promotion and public relations — to create the right buying environment in the coming decade.

John R. Graham, president of Graham Communications, a Quincy-based marketing consulting firm, will discuss marketing strategies designed to help retail, industrial and professional service companies attract and retain more customers in the 1990s.

Graham will outline his marketing philosophy which is set forth in his book, Magnet Marketing, scheduled to be published by John Wiley & Sons of New York this fall.

The seminar will cover such topics as "Survival Marketing in a Depressed Economy," "Customer Education" and "How to Make More and Better Sales."

Graham, whose sales and marketing articles appear regularly in regional and national publications, has focused his marketing approach on getting customers to want to buy from a company as the "vendor of choice."

The program is open to all businesses on the South Shore. A question and answer period will follow, and refreshments will be served.

There is no charge, but registration is limited to 75 persons.

For more information or to register, call Jack Powers at Mariner Newspapers at (617) 837-3500 or 1-800-874-6969.

League realignment could be in jeopardy

PILGRIM CONFERENCE

By David McKee
Mariner staff

The Pilgrim Athletic Conference, a proposed alignment of 28 high schools in towns stretching from Quincy all the way to Barnstable, could be in jeopardy if members of the Greater Boston League continue to oppose plans calling for widescale realignment of more than 60 high schools throughout Eastern Mass.

The fate of the realignment could be decided as early as March 8 when GBL officials meet with the Massachusetts Interscholastic Athletic Association.

TWO SCHEDULES

Currently high school athletic directors throughout the South Shore have two schedules made out for next season: One if the GBL approves the realignment and the Pilgrim Conference gets the final go-ahead from the MIAA, and another schedule if the GBL does not approve the plans and everything stays status quo.

"It's hard but we almost have to sit here until we know what's going on," Hingham athletic director William Barges said.

The dispute the GBL has with the MIAA centers on the scheduling of games for Brockton, Durfee and New Bedford High Schools. These schools, mainly due to their large enrollment, do not belong to conferences and have trouble filling out their schedules.

Officials from the Bay State Conference, the Catholic Conference, the Eastern Athletic League and the Pilgrim Conference have all agreed to schedule games against these three schools on a rotating basis as part of the major realignment.

However, the GBL turned thumbs down on this proposal and until they approve of the move, all the realignment in Eastern Mass. is on hold, by MIAA rule.

However a meeting between GBL school principals and the MIAA is scheduled for March 8. If the principals in the GBL approve the realignment at this meeting, then the new Pilgrim conference is launched.

If they turn it down then it's back to square one.

"The Pilgrim Conference is over a year in the planning," Barges said. "And it is a question of the GBL agreeing or being told (by the MIAA). Once that happens then 62 schools (the total number of schools involved in realignment in Eastern Mass) will know what to do. It's kind of a stubbornness on their part. They should look at the total picture. But I'm hoping something can be resolved. I've heard the GBL might be considering a two-year trial basis, but I really don't know what will happen."

FINGERS CROSSED

Area athletic directors currently are keeping their fingers crossed.

"I don't know what's going on," Marshfield athletic director Bob McConnell said. "But if they (the GBL) don't do it then they will go back to the old way. This way they will have more options. But we'll see what happens. We have two schedules made out."

Scituate athletic director Paul Svenson is more confident than most that the GBL and the MIAA will work out their problems.

"I think it's going to go," he said. "My guess is that it will be approved and then everything will be set."

MIAA assistant executive director Bill Gaines said that the denial of the GBL to the realignment is hard to understand.

"The GBL has a commitment whether or not the realignment is rejected or approved, to play 20 percent (of their full schedule of games against Brockton) anyway. Their rejection doesn't make any sense."

Gymnastics team has banner year, but no tourney invitation

Cohasset High School gymnast Marnie Dimichele performs flies off the vault after a tricky routine at a recent meet.

By David McKee
Mariner staff

The Cohasset gymnastic team had one of their best years ever as the Skippers finished with a 9-3 mark, good enough for second place in the South Shore League.

So why is the head coach Ruthann Sargent so disappointed.

"It's simple," she said. "We finished second in the league yet we didn't qualify for the Division Sectionals. But Norwell, who finished lower in the league than we did, qualified and we even beat them twice."

The reason Norwell qualified for one of the 12 spots at the sectionals and Cohasset didn't is that wins and record have nothing to do with qualifying. It's solely based on the average score of the top four team finishes. Norwell just made it in, while Cohasset only made it as an alternate.

"It wouldn't have bothered me if we came in second in the league and still missed out on the sectionals," Sargent said. "It just I don't understand how Norwell got in and we didn't and we finished higher then they did and beat them twice."

Sargent said she even went to the sectionals and checked out the competition.

"And we were better than the 11th and 12th seeds even without Michelle Hartley our top scorer," Sargent said.

Hartley missed the last few meets due to an injury and her presence was sorely missed by the Skippers.

"If Michelle had not been injured we would have definitely qualified for the sectionals," Sargent said. "But injuries happen."

Hartley, the senior co-captain dislocated her knee in a meet against first place Scituate. Despite missing the last part of the season, she was still named as a South Shore League all-around all-star.

"This award is given to only the two top gymnasts in the league," Sargent said. "So even with the injury, she was still chosen. That shows the talent she has."

Also because of the injury, Hartley missed out on the state individuals, which she had qualified for.

THE FINAL MEETS

The Skippers closed out action for the season by competing in the all-league meet and then facing Carver High.

The Skippers despite missing Hartley fared well at the all-leagues and defeated Carver.

At the all-league's, the Skippers got solid performances from many gymnasts.

Freshman Tara Gallagher placed sixth on the uneven parallel bars and fourth on the vault.

Junior Melissa Rousseau placed fifth on the floor exercise.

And senior captain Liz Buckley placed sixth in the all-around.

"Overall everyone performed great," Sargent said. "Even though this was an individual competition, we still scored higher than Norwell."

After the all-league's the Skippers finished their season with a 113.8 to 111.8 victory over SSL rival Carver.

"Scoring 113.8 without Michelle was really incredible," Sargent said. "If we had her we would have scored about 121. But it was a good performance for the team and it was good to end on an up note."

Gallagher was the top scorer for the Skippers on all four events.

On the uneven parallel bars as she scored a 7.65. She was followed on the bars by sophomore Laura Andrews who scored a 6.75 and Buckley who scored a 6.6.

On the beam, Gallagher was the top Skipper as she scored a 7.0. She was followed by Buckley with a 6.9 and senior captain Carrie Ripley with a 6.45.

On the vault, Gallagher scored a 8.25. She was followed by Buckley who scored a 7.65 and senior Justin Muir, the only boy on the team, with a 7.5.

Then on the floor, Gallagher scored a 7.85. She was followed by Buckley with a 7.4 and Ripley and Rousseau who tied with a 7.0.

"We had been second to last in the league the last two years," Sargent said. "But this year we made an incredible comeback. I'm disappointed we didn't reach the sectionals. But I'd say we had a quality season."

Senior co-captain Carrie Ripley is statuesque on the balance beam.

League realignment could be in jeopardy

The GBL would not have to play any games against Durfee or New Bedford in currently proposed realignment plans.

However teams from the proposed Pilgrim Conference will have to play all three of the schools on a rotating basis.

But as Norwell athletic director Bill Gerety put it, "Norwell (or any schools in the South Shore League) won't be playing Brockton in football, but we might play Brockton in tennis."

He said that the larger schools in the Old Colony League could be facing Brockton on the gridiron.

"But that's not a problem," he said. "I know Plymouth wanted to play Brockton a couple years ago and the competition could be a benefit."

Gerety also said that the games against Brockton, Durfee and New Bedford would be considered non-league and would occur once or twice over several years.

"Some say we're crazy, some say it's a compromise. But we have to do what is best for everyone involved."

Some of the new benefits of the New Pilgrim Conference would be that area teams would compete against schools with similar enrollments. (See chart)

Another plus is that realignment by enrollment would occur within the conference every two years.

And lastly most of the traditional Thanksgiving Day football rivalries would be kept intact.

"I think this is the only solution to keep everyone happy," Barges said. "The only way to go is by enrollment. And the Thanksgiving rivalries probably won't change because of what we are doing.

"Sure the conference will have to face Brockton, Durfee and New Bedford. But it's just everyone trying to help out."

Advisory endorses higher school budget

to be trained to spot child abuse and neglect, and so forth.

This takes away from educational time as well," said Ralph Kidder, a member of the school committee. "It is not a Cohasset issue, it is a national, societal issue."

He said that while the 5.1 percent increase seems like the school is getting more money, the school department will not be able to buy any extras in terms of education, but simply will be able to "preserve the integrity" of what it has now.

The advisory board hopes to finish its review of town budgets this week.

Hockey for gentlemen

By Mary Ford
Mariner staff

Is there such a thing as 'Gentlemen's Hockey'? Just ask the 22 guys who meet at the Pilgrim Arena in Hingham on Thursday nights.

And they should know — the men, many of whom are in their 50's and 60's, have been playing together for 30 years — three decades without a break.

"You can't leave until you die," says South Weymouth's Bob Elliott, whose been with the group 25 years. And he's not far from the truth.

Barry Cox, 39, of Norwell says his father, Ralph, had to retire from the squad last year. Ralph was one of the founders of the group. Leaving the group was hard for him, Barry recalls.

Barry started as a 'spare' — someone who is called when a regular can't make it.

HOCKEY: AN ART FORM

Dr. Allen Lapey, 50, a pediatrician from Milton, has played goalie for 'Gentlemen's Hockey' for about seven years. To Lapey the sport is an art form.

"Hockey is an absolutely beautiful sport," he says. "When you take the roughness and violence away — the game is returned to its real beauty."

George Horner of South Weymouth — a 30 year veteran — had a double hernia and quadruple heart bypass surgery — he was back on the ice a month later, his teammates reported.

One of the early members, South Weymouth's Les Veno, 61, has actually been playing hockey since he was four years old — a mere 57 years.

"It's good physical activity," says Veno. "You play and stay in shape."

Doherty of Hingham says the group is very diverse. Occupations range from stock broker, pilot, doctor, and lawyer — to carpenter, engineer, firefighter and police officer.

SKATES ADD YOUTHFUL SPEED

"As you get older when you're on skates it makes up for slowing down — you feel quicker," he says.

'Hockey widow' Jean Veno of Weymouth says her husband Les arranges his business trips so he'll be back in town on a Thursday.

Wives Marti Zonderman and Maureen Elliott, both of Weymouth, say, Thanksgiving, birthdays and anniversaries have to take second place to Thursday night hockey.

With an abundance of camaraderie — the group even sang Christmas carols after their match Dec. 21.

"We've grown old together," says Doherty. "We started off in our 20's and now I'm 52. These guys were all young when I first met them – and now we're all old geezers."

Cohasset's Robin Lagemann lost at sea

By John Magadieu
Mariner staff

Robin Eric Lagemann of 34 Atlantic Ave. disappeared while rowing off the Cohasset coastline Saturday, Feb. 24, and had not been found as of Wednesday.

The Coast Guard called off its search Monday afternoon after helicopter watchmen failed to spot Lagemann's body between Cohasset Harbor and Nantasket.

A youngster from Rockland found one of Lagemann's oars on Nantasket Beach Sunday, and later Lagemann's boat, a 10-foot, white wooden, fiberglass-covered Pequod, was found washed up on Nantasket Beach.

Inside the boat was a turquoise boat bag with a yellow sail bag inside, as well as Lagemann's identification.

According to Cohasset Police Sgt. Brian Noonan,

Residents, assessors do battle over regulations

By Alison Cohen
Mariner staff

Approximately 125 taxpayers met with assessors last week to express their outrage at bearing what they termed a disproportionate share of the town's tax burden.

The meeting, held in town hall, seemed almost sedate as resident Fred Quelle presented his analysis of past valuations, recent sales prices and current valuations in the oceanfront and Little Harbor neighborhoods. But the mood turned ugly when Assessor Thomas Duggan questioned Quelle's qualifications in the assessing field. Boos, hisses, catcalls and calls to "shut up and sit down" erupted from the audience.

Quelle responded that as a professional physicist he was experienced in analyzing and comparing data.

"I make my living doing precisely this for the U.S. government," he said.

Quelle, Eli Manchester and David Weltman, spokesmen for the disgruntled taxpayers, argued that average property assessments on Nichols Road, Beach Street, Atlantic Avenue, Joy Place, Gammons Road and the section of Jerusalem Road between Main Street and Forest Avenue increased between 72 and 97 percent. According to Quelle, the increase only averaged 60 percent townwide.

Quelle said property sale prices in the affected neighborhoods tracked the same 60 percent as the town's median house price.

Of the properties along Jerusalem Road from Main Street to Forest Avenue, Quelle said, "virtually no sales were above the assessed value." This stretch had an average assessment increase of 76 percent.

Taxpayers in the waterfront neighborhoods concluded they are subsidizing other taxpayers by $236,000.

They believe that local businesses are the major beneficiary of the inequity.

"The amazing thing we've discovered is every business is paying less than in 1986. Some have seen a 56 percent decrease in taxes," Quelle said. The group claims the business sector has gotten a $113,000 break in their taxes, or a real reduction of 139 percent.

James Lagrotteria, chairman of the board of assessors, explained that business taxes are based on income rather than property holdings.

"Anyone walking through Cohasset who doesn't realize the sad state of businesses here has to be blind," he said.

Lagrotteria also defended residential revalua-

League realignment could be in jeopardy

The GBL would not have to play any games against Durfee or New Bedford in currently proposed realignment plans.

However teams from the proposed Pilgrim Conference will have to play all three of the schools on a rotating basis.

But as Norwell athletic director Bill Gerety put it, "Norwell (or any schools in the South Shore League) won't be playing Brockton in football, but we might play Brockton in tennis."

He said that the larger schools in the Old Colony League could be facing Brockton on the gridiron.

"But that's not a problem," he said. "I know Plymouth wanted to play Brockton a couple years ago and the competition could be a benefit."

Gerety also said that the games against Brockton, Durfee and New Bedford would be considered non-league and would occur once or twice over several years.

"Some say we're crazy, some say it's a compromise. But we have to do what is best for everyone involved."

Some of the new benefits of the New Pilgrim Conference would be that area teams would compete against schools with similar enrollments. (See chart)

Another plus is that realignment by enrollment would occur within the conference every two years.

And lastly most of the traditional Thanksgiving Day football rivalries would be kept intact.

"I think this is the only solution to keep everyone happy," Barges said. "The only way to go is by enrollment. And the Thanksgiving rivalries probably won't change because of what we are doing.

"Sure the conference will have to face Brockton, Durfee and New Bedford. But it's just everyone trying to help out."

Advisory endorses higher school budget

to be trained to spot child abuse and neglect, and so forth.

This takes away from educational time as well," said Ralph Kidder, a member of the school committee. "It is not a Cohasset issue, it is a national, societal issue."

He said that while the 5.1 percent increase seems like the school is getting more money, the school department will not be able to buy any extras in terms of education, but simply will be able to "preserve the integrity" of what it has now.

The advisory board hopes to finish its review of town budgets this week.

Hockey for gentlemen

By Mary Ford
Mariner staff

Is there such a thing as 'Gentlemen's Hockey'? Just ask the 22 guys who meet at the Pilgrim Arena in Hingham on Thursday nights.

And they should know — the men, many of whom are in their 50's and 60's, have been playing together for 30 years — three decades without a break.

"You can't leave until you die," says South Weymouth's Bob Elliott, whose been with the group 25 years. And he's not far from the truth.

Barry Cox, 39, of Norwell says his father, Ralph, had to retire from the squad last year. Ralph was one of the founders of the group. Leaving the group was hard for him, Barry recalls.

Barry started as a 'spare' — someone who is called when a regular can't make it.

HOCKEY: AN ART FORM

Dr. Allen Lapey, 50, a pediatrician from Milton, has played goalie for 'Gentlemen's Hockey' for about seven years. To Lapey the sport is an art form.

"Hockey is an absolutely beautiful sport," he says. "When you take the roughness and violence away — the game is returned to its real beauty."

George Horner of South Weymouth — a 30 year veteran — had a double hernia and quadruple heart bypass surgery — he was back on the ice a month later, his teammates reported.

One of the early members, South Weymouth's Les Veno, 61, has actually been playing hockey since he was four years old — a mere 57 years.

"It's good physical activity," says Veno. "You play and stay in shape."

Doherty of Hingham says the group is very diverse. Occupations range from stock broker, pilot, doctor, and lawyer — to carpenter, engineer, firefighter and police officer.

SKATES ADD YOUTHFUL SPEED

"As you get older when you're on skates it makes up for slowing down — you feel quicker," he says.

'Hockey widow' Jean Veno of Weymouth says her husband Les arranges his business trips so he'll be back in town on a Thursday.

Wives Marti Zonderman and Maureen Elliott, both of Weymouth, say, Thanksgiving, birthdays and anniversaries have to take second place to Thursday night hockey.

With an abundance of camaraderie — the group even sang Christmas carols after their match Dec. 21.

"We've grown old together," says Doherty. "We started off in our 20's and now I'm 52. These guys were all young when I first met them – and now we're all old geezers."

Cohasset's Robin Lagemann lost at sea

By John Magadieu
Mariner staff

Robin Eric Lagemann of 34 Atlantic Ave. disappeared while rowing off the Cohasset coastline Saturday, Feb. 24, and had not been found as of Wednesday.

The Coast Guard called off its search Monday afternoon after helicopter watchmen failed to spot Lagemann's body between Cohasset Harbor and Nantasket.

A youngster from Rockland found one of Lagemann's oars on Nantasket Beach Sunday, and later Lagemann's boat, a 10-foot, white wooden, fiberglass-covered Pequod, was found washed up on Nantasket Beach.

Cohasset's week

Hugo's to be sold

Hugo's Lighthouse Restaurant may be under new management soon if a requested liquor license transfer goes through.

The California-based Chart House chain applied for the transfer, usually a precursor to a sale.

Current owner Paul Logue said that he was unable to comment on the matter pending the closing. A closing date will be set after the selectmen and the state alcohol beverage control commission rule on the transfer.

Selectmen scheduled a hearing on the transfer for March 12.

Logue has owned the property for three years. He purchased the property for $2.6 million dollars from the Cohasset Cove Associates.

Cohasset Cove Associates, a group of 15 investors, purchased the restaurant for $1.4 million in 1882 from the estate of John Carzis. They renovated the property extensively before selling it to Logue.

Arts lottery deadline

The Cohasset Arts Lottery Council announces that the deadline for the next distribution cycle for funding from the Massachusetts Cultural Council is March 30.

Applications for Arts Lottery and PASS grants are available at the selectmen's office at Town Hall. Completed applications should be returned to the selectmen's office, or to Jim Contis, 5 Windsor Rd.

Arts Lottery funds support individuals or organizations dedicated to the arts and humanities. Funds also may be awarded to non-profit, tax-exempt organizations or public agencies whose purpose does not include the arts if they embark on an arts activity.

Applications from public agencies, such as a public school, library or municipality, must demonstrate a new need, be a one-time expenditure, and be matched by other funds one-to-one. Projects must demonstrate benefit to the local community.

Funding also is distributed under the PASS (Performing Arts Student Series) program. The purpose of this program is to pay for tickets to performing arts events for public school children at the regular ticket price, or $5, whichever is less.

Schools may buy tickets from participating arts organizations and then apply to the Cohasset Arts Lottery Council for reimbursement. PASS rosters are available in each of the three schools, or contact Council member Penny Redfield, 383-9286.

For further information or questions, call Karin Bartow, 383-0572, or Jim Contis, 383-1805.

Road race is planned

Plans are well under way for the 14th Annual Cohasset Roadrace by the Sea.

The event will take place Sunday, April 1 at 1 p.m. at the town common. The race is sponsored by the Rotary Club of Cohasset and again this year is under the direction of Peter Logan and Roy Fitzsimmons.

The day has become a ritual of spring which helps raise funds for the Club's many in-town charities.

All runners will recieve T-shirts with the race's logo and that of a local business. Refreshments and prizes will be given to participants at the Community Center following the race.

The timing will be provided by Spitler Race Results and donated by Cohasset Hieghts Ltd.

The Application fee is $8 and the deadline to apply is March 25. The race is limited to 800 runners and applications are available at Good Sport, Cohasset Pharmacy, and Cohasset Liquors.

The race was recently rated in the top 40 races in Now England by the New England Runner magazine. Local runners are urged to apply early in order to join in the fun.

Earth Day festival

You still have time to become part of a planning committee for Earth Day activities by going to a meeting this Sunday, March 4, at the Unitarian First Parish house, 23 N. Main St., at 1 p.m.

Planned activities include a series of Earth-related events leading up to the April 22, Earth Day; a variety of school activities; an "adopt-a-site" litter campaign; and an ecumenical happening on the common.

Those forming the committee hope to include schools, businesses, civic groups, churches, seniors, scouts, gardeners and residents.

Call Sharon Becker, 383-1971, for further details, or come to the Sunday meeting.

Murray fights for funds

Rep. Mary Jeanette Murray, of the third Plymouth District, which includes Cohasset, Hingham, and Hull, signed a petition to call the House to return for formal session to aggressively approach the 1990 budgetary problems.

"The Commonwealth has spent $1 billion in the past month while the legislature has been in recess," Murray said. "Meanwhile the state's fiscal crisis is growing exponentially with no end in sight."

Rep. Murray siad that ignoring the 1990 situation only will create more serious problems for 1991 and 1992.

"Thirty-seven legislators are in support of calling for a session," she added. "There are many ideas for tackling the budget and I know my colleagues are anxious to get back to work solving the state's problem."

Lagemann lost at sea . . .

Lagemann went out for his daily row about 2:30 p.m. Saturday, during a sunny lull in what was otherwise a blustery day.

At the time, seas were about three to five feet, but there was a strong wind and limited visibility.

A search ensued about 10 p.m. when Lagemann was reported overdue. It involved local authorities as well as U.S. Cost Guard cruisers and helicopters.

On Sunday, the Coast Guard, police and fire officials continued the search, along with many volunteers from Cohasset and Hull.

At the time, seas were eight to 10 feet and the snow was coming down heavily. There was a strong on-shore wind and temperatures reached their lowest levels since 1988, with a wind chill factor of 32 degrees below zero.

Sgt. Noonan, who got to know Lagemann during the protests at Cohasset Heights landfill, was visibly moved in recalling the 59-year-old's passion for boats and for the environment.

"He was an avid boatsman and went out almost daily," Noonan said. "He was really into boats and he was a very nice guy."

Alix White is a friend of Lagemann and his wife, Durga. And their 10-year-old children would play together.

She recalled that Lagemann would protest with conservation groups both against the landfill and against whale killers.

"The sea was his real love," she said. "he rowed every day, as often as he could– he rowed as other people jog.

"It's so peculiar about his disappearance," she added, "because he was a very good seaman."

White recalled taking an excursion into the harbor with Lagemann last fall. They saw all sorts of wildlife– birds, harbor seals. She said he occasionally would spot a humpbacked whale during his outings.

White said the thing she will remember most about Lagemann is his communion with the sea.

Regional school wants to move

The South Shore Regional School Committee will spend the next month trying to convince participating towns to agree to a $5 million capital budget project.

If the local communities agree, the Votech will put up a new building on the Hanover campus that will allow them to close the Abington campus.

The school district leases a former junior high school in Abington at a cost of $218,000 per year. The lease expires in 1992.

"In order to move the Abington campus to Hanover, we must promote the $5 million plan," said Superintendent Clifford Easton.

According to Easton, time is critical. If the district agrees to the project before June 30, the state Department of Education will reimburse 75 percent of the expansion costs.

Easton said that if the district delays, the reimbursement factor could decrease by half.

WARNING:

WINTER MAY BE HAZARDOUS TO YOUR CAR.

The facts are hard and cold.

Many motor oils just don't perform in winter weather. And that can lead to friction. Extreme engine wear. Or even extensive damage, or a breakdown that leaves you and your family stranded.

That's why it's so important to take your car or truck to Jiffy Lube now for our famous 14-Point, 10-Minute Oil Change. We'll ensure that your oil is the right weight for your car and the weather. And we'll install a new FRAM or Purolator oil filter, check and fill six essential fluids, lube the chassis, and much more.

Be sure to protect your car and your wallet against cold-weather calamities — by visiting Jiffy Lube today.

Committee, trustees eye Curtis Estate

By Alison Cohen
Mariner staff

Available for purchase: 53 acres of land on Jerusalem Road with three houses and a barn. Priced to sell at $1.1 million.

Drawbacks of the property include 40 acres of unbuildable land, failing septic system, and three houses in various stages of disrepair.

The land and buildings are the real property holdings of the George E. Curtis Estate.

When the Attorney General's office declared the Curtis Estate an unsuitable site for an Alzheimer's care center in early January, the trustees put the property on the market.

According to trustee James DeGiacomo, no one has made an offer on the property.

When the property is sold, the proceeds will be added to the existing $1.2 million in liquid assets of the estate. Then the issue becomes how to use those funds in order to live up to the intent of Curtis' will.

Curtis, who died in 1931, stipulated that his estate should be used as a "home and refuge for feeble, deformed or invalid women." Since his death, the estate has been occupied by a variety of trustees, their families and others who have rented the main house at 600 Jerusalem Road, an adjacent barn, and house at 15 and 17 Black Rock Road.

For a few brief months, the house at 15 Black Rock Road was operated as a shelter for homeless families. The shelter was shut down because of septic system problems.

Trustees for the estate hope to get permission from the Probate Court to establish a charitable trust that would make grants to organizations working with the elderly. The trust cannot be administered under the existing terms of the will.

The trustees' plans have been complicated by the existence of the Curtis Estate Action Committee.

The committee lobbied long and hard to turn the property into an Alzheimer's care center. The center would have provided day treatment services for 18 to 24 individuals suffering from the progressive, degenerative disease that attacks the brains of older adults. Weekend respite care would have been provided for as many as four individuals.

The committee's plans had the support of Asst. Attorney General Richard Allen until Allen determined that the inability of the property to support an adequate septic system and the prohibitive cost of the project made such a facility "too risky."

Allen said that he would support establishing the center, to be known as the Curtis Home, on an alternative site funded by the estate.

The Curtis Estate Action Committee, renamed the Curtis Home Committee, is actively seeking a site for the home in anticipation of a favorable ruling by the court.

The committee sent a letter to the selectmen saying they were looking for "a two to three acre property with or without a structure" for the care center. They hope to receive the property as a gift or as a $1 lease/sale to the Alzheimers Disease Support Group of the South Shore, Inc.

The group asked the selectmen to notify town boards and committees of the group's search. The group also plans to contact realtors, agencies, churches and the general public.

Whether the committee or the trustees will prevail is an open question. No date has been set for the hearing in Probate Court, although an April date is likely.

tions. He said the taxpayers' group failed to take into account major renovations and additions on a large number of waterfront properties between 1986 and the current revaluation.

Lagrotteria singled out 14 Nichols Road as an example. Renovations on the property increased living space by more than 30 percent.

Manchester found the explanation lacking.

According to Manchester, improvements to the houses could not account for the increase in land value.

"There appears to be an almost arbitrary $200,000 [per lot] increase along the waterfront that we don't understand," he said.

Lagrotteria replied, "To think homes on the waterfront appreciate in value at the same rate as the rest of the town is ludicrous."

Lagrotteria told the group that he appreciates the difficulty that long-time residents have understanding the increase in house values. He said the switch to assessing at 100 percent full and fair cash value of properties has caused much consternation.

He also explained the abatement process.

According to Lagrotteria, the board has reviewed each abatement request, but the number of abatements and the regulatory deadline made it impossible to contact each homeowner who filed.

"For some, the only contact will be an approval or denial notice," he said. "We have found some inequities. We plan to correct them through the abatement process."

Taxpayers who have their abatement requests denied have 90 days to file an appeal with the state Appellate Tax Court.

Lagrotteria said a letter outlining taxpayers' rights and information about the appeal process has been prepared by Town Counsel Richard Henderson. Copies of the letter are available in the assessors office.

The board also voted to release computer software to assist the taxpayers' group to complete a townwide analysis of the revaluation. Because the software is copyrighted, town counsel will have to decide if the release is legal.

Coalition talks about waste

By Alison Cohen
Mariner staff

Tuesday night, the South Shore Coalition solid waste task force introduced the consultant team hired with a state grant to develop a regional solid waste management plan.

It was a get-acquainted meeting for the consultants, but after four years of discussions, representatives from the 10 towns that belong to the coalition were looking for some concrete answers.

The $150,000 grant from the state Department of Environmental Protection is being filtered through the Metropolitan Area Planning Council, because the coalition cannot legally receive grants and sign contracts.

Tellus Institute of Boston and Resource Systems Inc. of Concord, the consultant groups hired with $115,000 of the $150,000 grant, developed a seven-step planning process.

Tuesday's meeting was part of "Task A"– survey of existing solid waste management practices. Attendees at the meeting wanted to jump ahead at least as far as the third task.

"We've been filling out these surveys for 20 years," complained John Doyle of the Rockland board of health. "Recycling is synonymous with motherhood and patriotism. What we'd like is some real, live competitive markets."

Peter Stathopoulous of Hingham's recycling committee told the committee he was looking for some things that could be done immediately and information on planning for the future.

"We want to know what approaches we should be taking now," he said.

John Pepi of the state Department of Environmental Protection told the group it was too soon to expect the consultants to provide recommendations.

Although the grant was approved two years ago, the money was not released until the end of 1989, coalition executive director Jean Christensen said.

According to the work plan handed out by the consultants, a preliminary report detailing the options and alternatives available to member towns for recycling and solid waste management will be delivered to the towns in May.

Following review, comment and approval by the communities, the consultant team will develop a final plan by July.

Then the problem becomes one of making the commitment and finding the cash to implement the plans. As several representatives pointed out last night, the fiscal constraints of Proposition 2-1/2 and the state's financial crisis will impede progress.

Regional School . . .

"I'm not trying to overdramatize this, but we would probably have to eliminate six or seven programs over the next two years if this does not go through," he said.

If the plan goes forward, the towns would have to pay the following sums each year for the next 10 years if enrollments remain the same:

Abington, $31,895; Cohasset, $2,484; Hanover, $23,790; Hanson, $27,581; Norwell, $4,706; Rockland, $32,417; Scituate, $10,849; and Whitman, $36,600.

After the committee approves the project, towns that do not accept it have 30 days to call a special town meeting to reject it. Because the money is raised by a bond issue, only one town has to say no for the proposal to be rejected.

Rejecting the expansion at the Hanover campus, Easton said, would be "a disaster for the kids and a disaster for the community."

Route 3A, Cohasset's corridor of consternation

By Alison Cohen
Mariner staff

In Cohasset's three miles of Route 3A, you can do it all.

You can buy a new house and all the antique furniture it will hold. You can trade in your old clunker on a fancy foreign car. You can fill your clothes closets and fridge.

You can even buy an organ to accompany yourself as you shout "hallelujah" for the good life.

But Rte. 3A is not all good news for the people charged with overseeing Cohasset's rules, regulations and bylaws as the town grows into a new look for a new decade.

Nor has it been easy street for developers and business owners along the stretch.

Al Moore has been on the planning board for three years— and has served as chairman in the last year. He sees the highway as a mixed bag.

Unfortunately, he says, the planning board has limited authority.

The planning board must tread the fine line between protecting the character of the town and a property owner's right to develop his land.

According to Moore, the planning board must act with discretion. As long as a developer meets the requirements for lot size, setbacks, parking spaces, and impervious surfaces, there's relatively little the planning board can do to block development.

"There's a lot of stuff we'd like to do," Moore said. "All we can do is wish and hope."

"The real problem areas, the ones really offensive to see, are all things predating zoning," he said. "There's a lot of grandfathering going on."

Moore is more pleased about the newer construction. He singled out Bergson's and Don Staszko's Stop & Shop Plaza as examples of well-designed, attractive buildings.

The planning board under Moore's chairmanship has been more proactive in enforcing the existing zoning laws.

"I've tried to speak out when I saw things that didn't seem right," Moore said.

Some of the more recent controversies have centered on parking and green space.

Obviously, when it comes to parking spaces, Dwyer's Cleaning Spot is the name that comes to mind.

Dwyer's problems began when the original building burned down in August 1988. The company was led to believe that they did not need to submit an application for site plan review by the planning board because they were rebuilding on the original foundation line.

When the planning board later raised objections to the plans, a judge ruled that they had effectively waived their right to review the project. However, the final building was altered enough to require a greater number of parking spaces than the previous building.

According to calculations made by building inspector Robert Egan, Dwyer's must have 66 parking spaces of regulation size. The company contended that they should only be required to provide 49 spaces.

The planning board has been unwaivering in their interpretation of the requirements. In part, this is because they must be concerned with the nature of the businesses that may occupy the building at some point down the line.

The greater reason, said Moore, is that the planning board is not free to enforce some zoning bylaws and ignore others.

"Our hands are pretty well tied," Moore said. Business owners and developers who feel they have good cause to be freed from the letter of the law must secure consent of the zoning board of appeals.

Green space is essential not just because of the æsthetics involved, but because environmental concerns dictate that no more than 60 percent of a lot should be covered with a material impervious to water.

How the 40 percent green space should be laid out is a new concern that the board will address at town meeting.

"We're always working on some change or other in the bylaws," Moore said.

Moore also complimented developers and owners whose projects he wasn't enthusiastic about.

"All the applicants have been very reasonable to deal with," he said.

Developer Donald Staszko, who doesn't have much good to say about town officials, returned Moore's compliment.

"Al Moore and Bill Goode have been the best thing that ever happened to the town planning board," Staszko said. "They are bright, articulate people."

It was his only positive statement about working with the town.

Staszko spent eight years trying to bring the Super Stop & Shop and Cohasset Plaza II into being. He says he was fought tooth and nail by people who didn't want any change to come to Cohasset.

Staszko had to seek court orders to get a liquor license transfer for the business he plans to open and to get a building permit to develop his property.

"The boards are there to help the public," Staszko said. "They are there to work with developers, not to be obstructionist."

A 24-year resident of Cohasset, Staszko believes that the denials were personal and not based on the merits of his projects.

"They robbed the rest of the community," he says.

Staszko said that he is probably the single largest taxpayer in Cohasset. His development, he claims, is all gain and no pain for the town.

He explains his project does not drain any town services— no children are added to the school roster, no additional police or fire coverage is required. His properties create jobs for residents and creates a great deal of revenue for the town coffers.

Although he describes his experience as "very trying," Staszko believes that things have changed in the last two or three years. Again he singled out Moore and Goode as agents of positive change for the planning board and the town.

Unfortunately, Staszko said, the change has come at a time when minimal land is available for building.

Moore agrees. With virtually all the appropriate buildable land used up, Moore believes the future of Rte. 3A will consist of "renovations and re-dos."

According to Moore, most of the remaining buildable land was rezoned as residential land a few years ago in a citizen's initiative. Moore characterized the initiative as "probably misguided."

He explains that the lots are lousy sites for houses.

"If the land is not zoned so you can do any thing with it, you wind up with a lot of garbage," he said.

Of the renovations and re-dos, there is generally little the planning board can do. Those kinds of projects don't require a site review, a building per-

FOR AN IDEA OF HOW DIRTY YOUR ORIENTAL RUG IS, RUB THIS AND LOOK AT YOUR FINGER.

Oriental rugs are constantly picking up various types of soil. Some are greasy and some are gritty. But they all can eat away at your treasured possession.

For your Oriental rug to retain its beauty and value, it should be cleaned at least once every three to five years.

At Grillo Oriental Rug Cleaning, we carefully examine each rug, then give it the most suitable treatment. Sometimes that means gentle machine-washing, other times it means our 'Art-Safe' hand-washing. And our exclusive equipment and methodology enable us to remove the deep-set grit that others miss.

Furthermore, unlike harsh commercial cleaning, our individualized, museum-quality care is always safe, always effective.

For more information, or to have your rug picked up, call (617) 871-6500. Outside this area code, call 1-800-649-7707.

• Tom Wigmore certainly had a wonderful vacation recently, he is still talking about it!

Tom and some friends went to Florida for the Daytona 500 something he has done for the past few years. This year was different though he and his friend made a side trip to Citrus Hills.

As many of you may know, that is where Boston's own Ted Williams makes his residence now.

Anyway, they knocked on the dooor and Ted invited them in for cocktails! Tom said that he was super. When he left, he was armed with autographed baseballs and pictures. You had better believe that Tom is one happy vacationer!

• Speaking of vacations, we heard of a tournament that went on during two couples' recent trip to the Caribbean with tho two gentlemen viewing for the Caribbean Cup Championship.

The Championship was played at the Half Moon Country Club in Montego Bay and John Golden defeated Dr. Roger Pompeo by four strokes.

• Writing about golf brings to mind The Cohasset Golf Club. They have a committee organized to look for written material pertaining to the club's history, from the time it was created as a nine hole course on the site of the old Whitney Stock Farm. They are in need of old clippings, pictures and anything that would help them to compile a club history.

Their centennial celebration is in 1994, so everyone has time to search and give them a hand with this task. Call Lou Eaton if you can help in any way.

It will be held at the high school and the menu is making your own sundaes Yummy! Set the date aside now, then be on the lookout for more details.

• Dana Doggett, 31 son of Tom and Polly Doggett of 12 Hugh Strain Rd., he won the science fair at Deer Hill by recently received the "People's Choice Award" at the Net World '90 electronics show at the Hynes Auditorium.

This is the second year in a row Doggett received the top award in his field.

He lives in Orem, Utah with his wife and three children and is vice president of Network Development for Lansystems Inc. of New York.

Daggett is a native son, having attended the Cohasset schools, where building a power amplifier.

He played sax in the school band and sax and guitar in the high school jazz band.

He graduated in 1976. At 19, he served as a Mormon missionary in Central America for two years. In April 1987 he received his masters degree from Brigham Young University.

• Here is a fun request! Host homes are needed for high school students and chaperones from France who will be visiting our town and sightseeing in the Northeast. The dates are April 7-19.

Students from Lycee Professional Nemours will spend six days in Cohasset. Then they are off to New York and Washington. They will return to Cohasset April 19 before their return flights to France.

It's a great chance to get to know students from another country, both for you and your family, so give it some thought!

If you decide that you would like to host a student, please call Paul Narkiewicz at Cohasset High School, 383-6100.

HEADS UP

Hardly anyone can adhere for long to the traditional command to "square your shoulders and suck in your stomach." While following these instructions will decrease the angle of the pelvis and reduce the curve of the spine, the position is difficult to maintain. Instead, it is easier to improve posture by simply remembering to pull the head back, and keep it high. As a person grows older, the head, which weights approximatley 10 to 15 pounds, begins to drop forward. As a result, the rest of the body changes its center of gravity to compensate. The curves of the spine deepen. The chest sags. Shoulders become rounded, and the belly protrudes. The simple corrective measure of pulling the head back and holding it high helps to automatically align the body properly. Improved posture brings vitality back to a sagging body.

Such techniques to improve overall well-being. DR. DEBRA M. TRANBERG, SCITUATE HARBOR CHIROPRACTIC, 80 Front St., Scituate, 545-7388, and DR. SUSAN EMMER, CHIROPRACTIC & FAMILY WELLNESS CARE, 87 Sohler St., Cohasset, 383-1330. offer the chiropractic exam that allows for assessment of your particular problems and needs. Let us help return you to a state of total well-being where you can enjoy life to its utmost. By appointment. Workers Comp. cases and most insurance plans accepted.

• We salute Deana Genovese and Katie O'Sullivan this week, both girls were chosen students of the month at Cohasset High School.

Congratulations to John Froio of 30 Surrey Drive fame! John, who is a senior at Wake Forest, made the fall semester's dean's list!

• On the subject of Boy Scouts, Pack 38 sure had fun celerating their Blue and Gold Dinner recently. Cub master Jeff Forsdick presented the boys with their badges, then they had a fun evening with Creepy Crawly & Co., seeing a Macaw, lizards, a prairie dog and a python!

You can imagine how much the boys enjoyed that but there have been no comments from the Moms that were present. Wow!

❑ Karen Murphy will certainly be a pretty June bride, we wish her every happiness.

❑ Don't forget to fill out your census form that arrived and then get it in the mail pronto! Call the town clerk's office if you did not receive one.

❑ Under the "everyone is talking about it" news, Mrs. Cisneros's sixth grade class has the town buzzing! What a good cable show they put together, with 21 stories to work with. All of the students loved doing it, and we all enjoyed watching the production. We'll bet that the class watched it both times that it was aired, too!

❑ We wish to report that Jimmy V. Rosano, the stone mason, is fine! He was not ill as some thought when they read the get well wish to Jimmy Rosano; it was another Jimmy Rosano. If you are confused, so are we...just be assured that Jimmy, the miracle worker with stones, is fine!

Anna Louise Gjesteby, 14 days, visited her grandparents Mr. and Mrs. Arne Gjesteby of Old Pasture Road, despite the bad weather. She was born to Janet (Kelley) and Nils Gjesteby Feb. 9.

She was named after her maternal grandmother. She is the Gjesteby's third grandchild and first granddaughter.

❑ Cohasset has many enthusiastic and talented gardeners. As a result of this, there are three very active Garden Clubs in town. Each is involved in many worthwhile projects.

The Cohasset Garden Club, a member of the Garden Club of America, has as one of its ongoing projects the donation of special garden-related books to The Paul Pratt Memorial Library in memory of deceased members.

Many books have been donated over the years. The subjects often reflect their personal interests. Recent examples include: Garden Accents, by Derek Fell in memory of Mrs. N. Frank (Shirley) Neer, Complete Paintings and Drawings of Graham Stuart Thomas in memory of Mrs. Robert C. (Ginny) Knowles, and Flowers of the Amazon in memory of Mrs. R. E. (Ginny) Sherbrooke.

Some of the town may not be aware of this contribution to the library.

❑ One Cohasset student attended College Academy, a three-week summer program for bright students at Stonehill College last summer. Three Cohasset students attended College Gate, a program for bright children in kindergarten through grade three at the Plymouth River School in Hingham.

Information for the 1990 sessions of both programs is available in each of the Cohasset school offices now. These unique enrichment opportunities for bright youngsters are based on the philosophy that learning is fun. Youngsters at College Academy select four courses out of the over-thirty that are offered and attend four 75 minute classes each day. At College Gate the children choose three 55 minute classes in the half-day program. They too have a wide variety from which to choose. To provide the optimum learning experience, no class has more than 10 students. Many of the courses are multi-disciplinary and are not offered in traditional elementary schools. Earth Watchers, Calligraphy, Kids' Congress, Magic, Rocketry, and Chemistry are just some of the College Academy courses offered. At College Gate, Computers, Bionic Me, Money Market, and Chemistry are favorites.

There are two sessions of College Academy from July 2 to 20 and July 23 to August 10 at Stonehill College. Bus transportation is available for area students to both sessions at College Academy. College Gate will be at the Plymouth River School from July 2-20.

For additional information, people may call the College Acadmey office: 828-9283.

❑ Julie Nussdorfer, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Daniel Nussdorfer of Cohasset, was awarded Academic Honors for the 1989-90 fall term for earning an 88 percent average in all her classes.

Julie is a senior at Stoneleigh-Burnham School, a college preparatory school for girls in grades 9-12 located in Greenfield.

❑ Now that winter routines are underway, be sure to support your teams! The athletes would love to have you there to cheer them on, it really helps! Basketball promises a great season, as does gymnastics, hockey and wrestling. Check the paper for the places and the times, then make it a point to be there! You'll be glad that you did.

❑ Mary E. McNamara of Fairoaks Lane, a member of the Class of 1992 at Bowdoin College, was recently designated a James Bowdoin Scholar at the school.

• That is all of the news from here. You must have tons of vacation news to tell us, please give me a call. This time you will be sure to get an answer, the machine is finally working!

TEACHER FOR A DAY

Our Marketing Coordinator Joan Gordon spent a day recently at Wampatuck Elementary participating in Scituate Public Schools' Teacher for a Day program. Assisted by Art teacher Pat Laliberte, Joan taught five elementary level Art classes. According to Joan, it was "a great experience", one that taught her just how challenging the job of teaching can be!

Condolensces

It is often at a time like this, when a tragedy strikes a community, that people show their best. It was no different in Cohasset this weekend.

When Robin Lagemann was overdue and a search was called, many residents braved snow and a biting wind chill to look for their neighbor.

Sadly, the search was called off after Lagemann's boat washed ashore and the Coast Guard could not find him.

By all accounts, Lagemann was staunchly protective of the environment, and will be remembered for his stance against the expansion of the Cohasset Heights Landfill.

But as his friend Alix White pointed out, the image of him that will endure is that of his communion with the sea.

He was lost doing what he loved best, getting out in his boat and rowing the beautiful waters around his hometown.

Our hearts go out to his family and friends.

Fortunately, many other Cohasset residents have been on hand to comfort the family of Robin Lagemann in their time of sorrow.

Selectmen strongly suggest ducks are not to be fed at the Common pond. The ducks aren't welcome at Lily Pond either—the geese and sea gulls have taken up all the room there. Where's a duck supposed to get a bite to eat in this town?

Letters

Thanks to Brownies

To the Editor;

It may be that sometimes we elders have much to be "down-hearted" about — along with others — considering world news and local economy measures that seem to threaten (even) especially the aging (aren't we all) and the youngest members of society,.

We also have many pluses, and that is in the "affairs of the heart" division, and our Valentine party, which was rung in with style and affection (hopefully) and all volunteers showed up for fun and a tea party.

But, still, perhaps nearest and dearest to the elders are the children along with their teachers, helpers and workers. We have to thank all Cohasset Brownie Troop for their thoughtful decorations — every Tuesday and especially for the Valentine favors on the 14th of February.

Our hearts buzz with joy and sometimes emotional tears when we see our young friends from the third grade of the Osgood School singing their hearts out under the loving direction of their teacher, Mrs. Mary Monturi and the expertise of Mr. McInnes at the piano.

It makes us happy indeed to know these young people look forward to sharing in the "job" of making us happy. They are indeed "cheerful givers."

The third grade boys have reached that time when "kissing" publicly is not one of their favorite things — but they willingly put their cheeks up for a kiss and a hug. (They sort of hold their heads a bit to the side so the kiss will land conveniently on an open space.

All of Cohasset can be proud of their children — they are so polite and with us so gentle and caring.

One of the favorite TV personalities is our Willard Scott — who himself has a love for the elderly, the children and the humane care of animals. He mentioned on Valentine's Day that one of the bright spots in the future will be the declaration of Valentine's Day as a special time for hospitalized children over the nation.

That would, hopefully, tie in with the affection we have for our children — and a card is one thing that some otherwise — not too robust elders can still handle.

Also, it might be well to call attention to an early morning program directed to the 55-plus group. It is the prime time show headed by Barbara Brilliant. She not only serves the senior population with good ideas and suggestions. She understands their situations; their sometimes poverty, lonesomeness, and the inaccessibility for many things.

She is a helpful problem solver — she is high spirited and objective. When she looks at beautiful suggestions that are costly — one of her favorite phrases is "how can we do it for less." So she reaches all segments of society — those who have more and those who are "making do" both with a special flourish.

I overlooked the helpful hands and heart of Karen Kassine who is Brownie Leader and also a teacher's helper, which means these are two of the hats she wears — along with many other Mothers (and this certainly deserves to be "capitalized") in Cohasset's volunteer programs.

And it is well to remember that many of the town's salaried professionals go far beyond their teacher's hat — to serve these children in their care — and when Mrs. Monturi said, "I love these children" — I knew she did. She did nothing that would dampen the enthusiasm of our young visitors. We all shared in the "tender moments."

Apples campaign nearing end

To the Editor:

The Cohasset PSO would like to inform the community that there are 10 days left in the "Apples for the Student" campaign.

All Stop & Shop register tapes and Bradlees stubs dated through March 10, 1990 can be donated to the Cohasset Schools for Apple computers and equipment.

Designated deposit boxes are available at all schools and churches as well as the community center, the library, the town hall and 100 Elm St.

We will collect all the boxes on March 16, 1990 and submit our final order by March 23.

We would like to thank all our friends throughout the community who have contributed to our "Apples" program.

We have ordered 14 computers, five disk drives and assorted software for the three Cohasset schools. In this era of fiscal restraint, this equipment would not have been made available to our students without your help!

Remember the March 10 date and help us aquire more computers.

Sincerely,
Patricia Baird
PSO President

You can help the village shine

To the Editor:

The year 1990 is the year of Cohasset's Village Renaissance.

The idea, initiated by Cohasset Village retailers, is to beautify and invigorate the town center. This will be good for Cohasset and good for business.

We have volunteered to help coordinate this effort. Several retailers and interested citizens have already suggested ways to improve the village.

We have sent letters to "Cohasset Retailers" to solicit more ideas and recommendations. Now we would like to ask Cohasset residents for their help.

What do you see that needs fixing, cleaning up or changing? What would make the village and harbor areas more attractive? Would you be willing to help?

We need both practical and creative ideas and suggestions. Please make a "wish list" of about five items and drop it off at the Village Renaissance suggestion box at Smith Place on Ripley Road, across from the post office by March 15. Or, mail your comments to Village Renaissance, P.O. Box 902, Cohasset, Ma 02025.

Cohasset is a beautiful town. Cohasset Village should be beautiful, too!.

Thank you,
Jackie Dormitzer

A medieval murder at Nickerson Castle

Staff photos by
John Magadieu

The partygoers are (clockwise) Endora; the King with the Duke of Wayne and Prince Bob; Princess Tyrolea; Richard the Conqueror with Evangeline; and in the center Geof Chaucer (a.k.a. Terry McCarthy of Cohasset). Read the story to find out who they really are.

By "Ronnie the Rat Remover"
(a.k.a. John Magadieu)
Mariner staff

There was a murder at the Nickerson Castle in Cohasset Saturday night, but it certainly didn't spoil the party.

King Tyrone and Queen Chrysanthemum (a.k.a. Bob and Yvonne Julian of Cohasset) were upset, of course, over the expiration of Bonnie Prince Bob (a.k.a. Paul Shirley of South Weymouth), but that was until they discovered that Bob wasn't Tyrone's son after all.

But whoa, I'm getting ahead of myself here. There was plenty of feasting and frolicking going on during the apres jousting tournament festivities, and apparently plenty of scheming going on as well.

At the same time Jack, the Jester (a.k.a. Mike Farwell of Scituate) was making his moves with the juggling pins, Evangeline, the valiant virgin (a.k.a. Angi Walsh of Cohasset, was making her move—away from Bob, to whom she was betrothed.

It appeared, from what I could tell, that she had fallen for Sir Dirk, the Duke of Darkmoor (a.k.a. Paul Higgins).

I was busy trying to win the hand of the fair Princess Tyrolea (a.k.a. Mary Jean Von Iderstein of Marshfield), for which I received a thorough ribbing—I'm not sure why. But some of the other intrigue at the castle that night may have escaped me whilst I was in pursuit of her.

Anyway, Prince Ralph (a.k.a Phil Von Iderstein of Marshfield) spent much of the evening muttering something about taking his rightful place on the throne.

His muttering was drowned out mostly by the party revelry and partially by the bickering of Sister Saintly (a.k.a. Bonnie Haley of Scituate) and Endora, the witch (a.k.a. Donna Williams of Cohasset).

And then there was Sir Roger, the Conqueror (a.k.a. Ralph Dormitzer of Cohasset), with that awful note to King Tyrone about treating the peasants better, or some such nonsense.

I believe Drake, the Dungeon Master (a.k.a. Rob Dacey of Milton) and Hugo, the Horrible (a.k.a. Ronnie Bezzozero of Norwell), kept him in irons for that one a while.

The murder occurred shortly after my betrothal to Tyrolea, and subsequent knighting by king Tyrone (just call me Sir Ronald).

It seems poor Bob was poisoned; I was fortunate in having left my rat poison home for the evening in favor of my magical tools of rat removal, for otherwise I would have been suspected of the dirty deed myself.

But apparently there were many at the party who were in possession of poison.

Endora the witch, of course, was immediately suspected, seeing as she supplied most of the poison in the kingdom.

And Harriet the Heartless (a.k.a. Ruth Renner of Scituate) was found with poison, but said she was planning to use it on herself, after having been dumped by Bob for Evangeline; there were many who were suspicious of that claim.

And King Tyrone, who had been angry with Bob for losing the jousting tourney to Dirk, also was found to be in possession of poison. What a surprise that was!

Several other interesting facts then came to light at that point.

Apparently, Sister Saintly was Tyrone's first wife, who had been presumed dead after the birth of their son, Prince Gallant, who was whisked away while Tyrone was off at the crusades. And Dirk was actually Prince Gallant! Another suspect!

It turned out that Bob was really the son of Sir Jonathan, the Duke of Wayne (a.k.a. Don Massa of Cohasset), who has always been a little unhinged.

Imagine his reaction when he discovered that Bob was going to marry his daughter, Evangeline. Another suspect.

Well, pretty soon half of those attending the party were up against the wall, being questioned by deputy sheriff Barney Fiefdom (who looked suspiciously like the late Bob).

When the matter was put to a vote, the majority picked King Tyrone as the murderer, probably in large part because of his tyrannical reputation. But it wasn't he who committed the murder. And the actual murderer, whoever it was, got away with it.

Pwat-Pwat in Japan

By Richard S. Tebbetts
Special to the Mariner

Why finish the eighties with a bang? Weren't there enough bangs already? Why not a soft gentle pwat-pwat? Yes, a pwat-pwat[1].

While many people left Japan for Christmas and New Year's, I stayed here. I went to Nagano Prefecture, visited Matsumoto Castle, one of five national treasures, skiied, and saw New Years first hand in the countryside.

On Dec. 28 I took the Express train to Nagano Prefecture, the heart of the Japanese Alps. I almost missed this train, the only direct train to Ueda City, my destination.

The train was so hot, I fell asleep for much of the journey to Ueda. But I woke up in time to see a beautiful sunlit view of the Alps.

The train was slow by Japanese standards so the wispy clouds above the white mountains gave me the feeling I was on the 'I think I can' train of my childhood fairy tale.

I was visiting a friend whom I had met in Tibet in October 1986. He was an English teacher in a junior high school in Ueda. The night of my arrival he had a 'Forget-the-Year' party at his school. He left me at his house.

Since I don't have a television, I decided to watch his 27" Toshiba Idiot Box. I started off with a V.D.O. of Kouya himself. He was teaching English... 'Are you a student?'... 'Yes, I am a student'... 'No, I am not...' This is the kind of impractical stuff they make the kids memorize.

He drilled his class for the following 45 minutes with the same lines. They know this rote system isn't working yet they haven't changed it.... that's part of the reason I'm here teaching English.

Kouya had told me two friends were visiting. I didn't know what to expect. I knew Kouya wasn't married so I thought, maybe some woman friends. Meanwhile, it was getting colder and colder.

Kouya's apartment had no heat except for a kotatsu, a warm, electric, Japanese table. About 10 p.m., Kouya's two friends arrived. They were the two biggest men I had ever seen in Japan. They were each 5-feet 10-inches tall. One was 230 pounds while the other was a mere 195!

Most Japanese men are about 5-feet 5-inches and 145 pounds.

These two mountains had third degree black belts in Judo. Fortunately, they were friendly guys. Our cultural exchanges in English were mainly about sports and clothing. It turned out that because of their large sizes, it was hard to find suitable clothing ...so, they shopped by mail order with none other than L.L. Bean. One of them had Bean hunting shoes on!

Kouya finally came home and we decided (over a couple of beers) to go skiing the next day. We got up at 7:30 a.m. and I cooked some eggs, 12 to be exact, and toasted some raisin bread.

We got off at 9 a.m. and headed for Shiga Kogen, a possible site forr the 1998 Winter Olympics.

It was a great place with four gondola lifts. The funny thing was the gondola ride was only about five minutes long, so we could do up to four runs in an hour! The skiing did afford me the greatest freedom I've ever had in Japan.

Since there are so many people everywhere you go here, there is always some kind of restraint on you...you Can't walk too fast, you can't yell, you can't speak English in many places, nor can you find a quiet moment in your own home (since it's so small).

The big guys had only four runs in them, so Kouya and I were able to get in three extra runs.

Because of our proximity to Tokyo, the big Japanese companies had their newly-made wooden ski lodges (made with newly-earned dollars) all in a row facing the ski slopes.

These lodges stood in utter contrast to the small houses[2], of the average Japanese family.

The men I was with were sake 'Masters.' They were connoisseurs of Japanese rice wine. Though I had been in Japan for over four months I never had drunk Japanese rice wine or sake.

We went on a tour of a sake brewery and did some taste-testing with a master brewer. He gave us several bottles of sake. One kind of sake had live bacteria in it. It was particularly tasty!

Most Japanese towns and cites have some kind of locally brewed sake. Rice is the center of the Japanese culture just as the car is of ours. At this point we were in Niigata Prefecture on the Sea of Japan and it started to snow.

We hadn't eaten since the 12 eggs that morning, some 11 hours beforehand. We were hungry. Since it was the holiday season, many of Nagano's restaurants were closed.

Finally, we found a spot that served Chyanko, a favorite of the great Sumo wrestlers. We ate in real Japanese style. We slurped and ahhhed our way through the meal sitting on a straw mat floor.

Chyanko is a mixture of mushrooms, cabbage, meat, chicken, and tofu in a boiling broth. It is very filling when eaten with rice.

The Sumo wrestlers eat many portions of this twice a day. It is all they eat. We were plenty tired when we arrived home that evening. It was a great Japanese day. Nipponbare[3]!

The next day, Dec. 30, we went to my friend Kouya's family home in Shiga village. There were just 4,000 people in the village where his family owned a palacial home at one end of town.

Village life and city life are very different in Nippon. In the country the people are a bit heavier; their faces rounder. The country folk are not always congested in their cars, buildings and trains like their city cousins. And they know what a tree looks like. (Most of the city parks in Japan are made of cement and hard-packed dirt.)

The city people dress in their Sunday best all the time and both the men and women wear perfume. The cities are packed with train lines as well. (There are, for example, three private parallel train lines within twenty minutes walk of my house in the city of Kobe.)

At Kouya's house we helped with the big cleaning, 'Oosooji,' done every New Years. During the big cleaning the whole house is scrubbed down by its inhabitants and any visitors present. We then went to a hot springs in Kouya's town. Japan is dotted with hot springs. They are everywhere!

First we had a quick wash off. Then we got in the hot spring water. We topped it all off with a trip to the sauna. It was here that I discovered the 230 pounder was Sumo wrestling material.

We visited Matsumoto Castle that afternoon and the 'masters' bought more sake. It was here we bought some 1989 sake that was so fruity it was like Beaujolais Nouveau. We had horsemeat and raw fish for dinner.

On New Years Eve day, we drove through snowstorms to visit the old main road between Tokyo and Kyoto, the Tokaido. The towns along this road essentially have not changed since the middle ages.

We visited an icy temple late that afternoon. It was a spacious place with frozen lakes on the top of a steep hill. It was then I realized I had had almost no eye contact for these four days.

Japanese often take a long time to warm up to someone. It was interesting that Kouya's father, though not looking at me, had me pray to their deceased grandfather, whom they believe to be a living God.

In Shinto tradition I bowed, clapped two times and bowed again. His father had made a wreath-like shrine of rice stalks, pine branches and a mandarin orange. They gave rice balls to the grandfather in case he got 'hungry.'

After praying to the grandfather-god we went to the family graves, located across the river from the house. It was just after midnight on Jan. 1. At one of the graves we clapped to let the family gods know we were present. Then we went to another part of the burial grounds and we silently prayed to the Buddha.

From there, we re-crossed the river and headed to shrines protecting different areas of the village.

Shinto, the Japanese native religion, makes a deceased relative into a god. On the surface it seems similar to the religions of the hill tribes of northern Thailand. One is supposed to walk underneath a wooden archway, without touching it, in both religions, in order to purify one's soul, or take away bad spirits.

Unfortunately, I had to leave on Jan. 1. I had the opportunity to ride back to Osaka in a brand new bus servicing the Japanese Alps.

At the same time, I had to sit next to a cigarette-stinking, hard-drinking old man. My rosy picture of the lovely Japanese countryside was soon lost in the smells of my fellow passenger, the tenement apartments of the overcrowded Kyoto-Osaka-Kobe megalopolis and an ongoing blizzard.

At least I now realize that not all Japanese wear dresses, ties and blue three piece suits. The country people are so hospitable, I'd like to live among them just as soon as I can speak Japanese more fluently...and make eye contact.

Apparently, the future of 3A consists of redesigning and refining what Moore described as "old, tired buildings. With the possible exception of an office park and a small affordable housing development behind Stop & Shop, nothing is waiting in the wings.

Obituary

Lois Gates Smith

Lois Gates (Baer) Smith of Cohasset died Thursday, Feb. 22, at Massachusetts General Hospital in Boston after a lengthy illness. She was 60.

She was born in Watertown, Conn. and moved to Cambridge in 1946, where she lived until 1961. She lived in Cohasset for 29 years.

Mrs. Smith was a graduate of St. Margaret's School in Connecticut and a 1950 graduate of Radcliffe College.

She was a member of the Chilton Club, the Junior League of Boston, the Cohasset Discussion Club and the Cohasset Garden Club. She was past president of the Cohasset Social Service League.

She leaves her husband, Charles L. Smith Jr., former chairman of the board of the State Street Research and Management Co.; and a son, Charles L. Smith III of San Francisco.

The Rev. E. Clifford Cutler, rector of St. Stephen's Episcopal Church and the Rt. Rev. Krister Stendahl, Bishop Emeritus of Stockholm, Sweden, and former dean of the Harvard University Divinity School, will conduct a memorial service at 3 p.m., Saturday, March 3, at St. Stephen's Episcopal Church. Burial will be private.

Funeral arrangements were made by the McNamara-Sparrell Funeral Service of Cohasset and Norwell. Donations may be made to New England Deaconess Hospital, 185 Pilgrim Rd. in Boston, 02215.

Coffee with Martha Gjesteby

Mr. and Mrs. Richard Farwell of 393 Beechwood St. will host a coffee Sunday afternoon, March 4, from 3 to 5 p.m. for Selectman Martha Gjesteby.

The candidate for re-election will discuss her campaign with interested neighbors. Everyone is invited to attend.

PSO phone-a-thon

The PSO will hold its annual phone-a-thon fundraiser Wednesday, March 7 from 7 to 9:30 p.m., and is encouraging the community to support this event when a PSO representative calls.

Donations are needed to continue the many enrichment activities the PSO provides during the school year.

The phone-a-thon is the PSO's primary fundraiser. Proceeds received fund the Teacher Grant Program, one of the major projects provided by the PSO, and many ongoing PSO activities and special events.

In 1989 more than 28 teachers were awarded grants totaling $3,300.

The donations were used by teachers for supplementary materials and aids not covered by the school budget, and included items such as: "Math Their Way," manipulative materials for Osgood kindergarteners; poetry, reading and video materials to enhance reading and language arts programs at Deer Hill; a manual for the construction of low elements on a challenge ropes course for the high school, as well as numerous software programs and financial assistance with the publication of the high school's"Whispers and Shadows."

A few of the special events PSO has brought to our children this year include: a visit from Judith Black, one of New England's foremost storytellers; a live piano performance and character portrayal of "Beethoven;" the Dance Repertory Workshop at Deer Hill and the high school; Talents Unlimited, a nationally recognized thinking skills program designed to help teachers recognize and nurture the multiple talents of children; field trips; artist of the month program; purchase of various library books and supplemental classroom enrichment items.

All parents of Cohasset school children belong to the PSO. No dues are charged to support the organizaiton, which relies on member contributions. The PSO is hoping for 100 percent member participation; their goal is to raise $10,000.

For those interested a full mid-year report of PSO activities is available upon request. Just ask the PSO representative who calls March 7.

Deer Hill student Ed Hamilton thought the Mr. Wizard Show at the school this week was a hair-raising experience.

Smith wins Geo Bee

Kathleen Smith won the Cohasset Junior-Senior High School Geography Bee, and has moved one step closer to winning a $25,000 college scholarship from the National Geographic Society.

Smith, a seventh grader at Cohasset Junior-Senior High School won the school's geography bee held recently. All 7th Grade students in Mr. Donald Kelly's classes participated in the first round of competition and the nine finalists in that round were: Trevor Cook, Aaron Coon, Nikolas Hawks, Corinna McMackin, Brendan Mulligan, Margaret Pease, Kathleen Smith, Jeremiah Stevenson and Kristin Wilson. This school-level bee, at which students answered oral questions on geography, is being sponsored by National Geographic World, the Society's magazine for children, Amtrak, and Kudos snack. The runner-up was Nikolas Hawks.

The Bee was kicked off during the week of January 29th in thousands of schools around the United States, District of Columbia and five U.S. territories. The school winners, including Kathleen, will now take a written test; up to 100 of the top scorers in each state will be eligible to compete in their State Bee on March 30.

The National Geographic Society with its co-sponsors will provide an all-expense paid trip to Washington, D.C., for state champions and their teacher escorts to participate in the National Geography Bee finals on May 23 and 24. The first place national winner will receive a $25,000 college scholarship; the second place winner, a $15,000 scholarship; and the third place winner, a $10,000 scholarship.

Alex Trebek, host of "Jeopardy," will moderate the national finals.

The Maticnal C-eographic Society developed the National Geography Bee in response to a growing concern about the lack of geographic knowledge among young people in the United States. A ten country Gallup Survey conducted for the Society in 1988 and 1989 found that people in the U. S. ages 18 to 24, the youngest group surveyed, knew less about geography than young people in any of the other countries.

Community Garden Club program for kids blossoms

Working with the youth in the community has always been a vital part of the Community Garden Club of Cohasset.

Ever since the Club's inauguration in 1959, the aim of the Junior Gardener's Program is to introduce the young people of Cohasset to the great pleasures found in flower design, horticulture and conservation.

As far back as 1969, under the chairmenship of Carmelita Cherry and Ellen Londergan and in 1970 with chairmen Ellen Londergan and Jeanne McKinnon, the Community Garden Club received from the Garden Club Federation of Massachusetts merit awards for outstanding youths' programs.

The Club recently was honored again with two state awards for "providing outstanding projects for fourth-sixth graders that promoted interest in gardens, design, horticultural perfection and as a result awareness of their environment."

The award-winning leaders of the group were Betsy Good, Lee Jenkins and Regina Schultz.

Our present Juniors with chairmen Lee Androski and Sally Avery are again an inspiration to the Senior Club. Programs such as "A Creation Bursts," designing a perennial garden with a landscape architect from the Harvard School of Design, "Flower Arranging" with Tish Grinnel and "New England Birds of Prey" with Rick Horton of the New England Wildlife Center are held montly at the Deer Hill cafeteria. New members are taken in the fall of each year.

Nine Juniors participated in the local 1990 Environmental Poster Contest sponsored by the National Council of State Garden Clubs. Judged by the South Shore Art Center, the posters of the two blue ribbon winners Whitney Cook and Maggie Goedecke were entered in the state competition.

Second place honors went to Stephanie Connor and Nicole Peterson. Allison Kinchla was awarded third place. Good luck to Whitney and Maggie!

In 1989, together with the PSO, the Community Garden Club funded a senior high school project, a landscape plan for the high school courtyard, which is well on its way to becoming reality.

Regina Schultz (Tel. 383-0598) is chairman of the "A Garden for Honoring" project and hopes are high that individuals as well as student and civic groups will make donations to the courtyard fund.

SCHOLARSHIP INFORMATION

There are 10 scholarships available yearly from the Garden Club Federation of Massachusetts, Inc. for college students interested in the study of environmental sciences, or the art and/or sciences related to horticulture in its widest aspect.

The candidate must be sponsored by the local club, shall be a one year resident of Massachusetts, high scholastic standing, good citizenship, and financial need.

The deadline for submitting application is April 1, 1990 for the 1990-1991 school year. Contact Rita Strong, Scholarship Chairman of the Community Garden Club at 383-0939, for information and application.

Cohasset recycling news . . .

By Alix White
Special to the Mariner

As I was walking in last Sunday's snowstorm, I had to adopt some blizzard strategies: know where you are going, and realize that goal step by step.

Three short days earlier, I was out walking in a T-shirt, without a care in the world.

Our attitude toward our natural resources is like our attitude toward the weather. In times of plenty we take on the T-shirt strategy of, "Who cares, why not let the heat go out the window, the drinking water go down the toilet, and the glass and newsprint into the incinerator?

"We really have been wearing T-shirts since the second World War, now the blizzard has hit: oil prices are on the rise, our septage is now commuting to Worcester at our expense, and we no longer have our town landfill but we must export our waste to the SEMASS incinerator.

Our natural resources in this small town begin to look very valuable given this reality. People are meeting this challenge. They are doing so because of increased education and economic incentives (higher prices). Congratulations Cohasset!

On Sunday, Feb. 25, at the height of the snowstorm, a handful of townspeople met at the Unitarian Parish House to begin to plan how Cohasset might observe the 20th anniversary of Earth Day.

Among the many ideas put forward were: an adopt-a-site litter pick up campaign, planting a tree at the common or at the RTF,(Recycling Transfer Facility), a church service on the common and a benediction at the RTF.

It was agreed that any observance of Earth Day "must be more than just an anti-litter campaign." Earth Day plants many seeds in schools, churches and towns. The things that we do on Earth Day should stay with us for the rest of our lives.

Think of the big picture: global warming, air, ground and water pollution, population explosion,and the toxic waste dilemma. Then think of the individual steps that we all can take to have a positive impact on these issues in our daily lives.

Cohasset Agrees
CARE
to Recycle Everything

We here in Cohasset saw the problems with our trash and started recycling thirty years ago. Two years ago we overwhelmingly voted in mandatory recycling.

We now get fined for not recycling. But more importantly, people are realizing how simple it is to seperate their trash. Not only that, but many of us are realizing just how little "trash" we actually produce, once we remove the recyclables.

And when guests come to visit, we see how much trash non-recyclers produce. Putting the glass jar (no tops or food) in a separate bag is the step that we all take to reach the goal of Town wide waste reduction. It works!

Collection of all recyclable materials is up at the RTF, for example newsprint and corrugated are picked up every week now instead of every 10 days just three months ago.

As we approach the 20th anniversary of Earth Day, let us keep in mind our successes and our excesses. Adopt a new pledge toward a new goal.

If the goal is reduction of water pollution, then consider all the ways that we use water,including what goes down the drain. How much water do we use? Where does it come from? Where does it go? Is the town Water Supply adequately protected? If not, what can be done to protect it further?

With respect for our shared home, The Earth, we must adopt our blizzard strategy:know where we are going, and realize our goals step by step.

If you would like to find out how you might help to celebrate the 20th anniversary of Earth Day here in Cohasset Call Sharon Becker at 383-1971

Bob Lobel to host local fundraiser

WBZ-TV sportscaster Bob Lobel will headline "A Night of Sports Talk" at the Cohasset Community Center Friday, March 16, beginning at 7 p.m.

Lobel, who will present an extended version of his weekly "Sports Spotlight," will be joined by Patriot Ledger sports columnist Ron Hobson, a Cohasset reident.

Hobson and Lobel will discuss the Boston sports scene and field questions from the audience.

Tickets to "A Night of Sports Talk" are $15. The proceeds from the benefit are earmarked for the year-old Cohasset lacrosse program, and for the Friends of Cohasset School Sports, which is involved in a year-long fundraising effort to raise money for Cohasset High School athletics.

The tickets may be purchased from any member of the Cohasset lacrosse team, or by contacting Ken Ekberg at either the Deer Hill School (383-6115), or at 383-6182.

There will be a cash bar at the Community Center, and hors d'oeuvres will be served.

Bob Lobel, the highest-paid, highest-profile sports anchor in Boston, has been with WBZ-TV for 11 years. In addition to anchoring the 6 p.m. and 11 p.m. newscasts, he hosts a weekly half-hour sports update program on Sundays during football season, and a weekly half-hour program on SportsChannel.

Lobel has been WBZ's principal sports anchor for nearly nine years.

Hobson is the Patriot Ledger's pro football columnist, but may be even better known for his "Humble One" football handicapping challenges.

"We are very fortunate to have Lobel's and Hobson's support," said Ekberg, the coach of Cohasset's lacrosse team. "This should be a wonderful night for anyone interested in Boston sports."

The Cohasset lacrosse program, with nearly 60 players, is second only to soccer in popularity at the high school. Nevertheless, it receives no school department funding and relies entirely on outside contributions and user fees.

In 1989, the Cohasset team posted a 4-3 record in its inaugural season. In 1990, two squads — a varsity and a junior varsity — will play a 14 game schedule.

Daffodil Days

More than 100,000 golden daffodils will burst into bloom in nine South Shore towns March 20 and 21, as the South Shore Unit of the American Cancer Society stages its annual Daffodil Days to benefit the research, education and service to cancer patients throughout the area.

"Last year people here bought about 115,000 daffodils even though cold weather on the West Coast forced a delay in delivieries," Pauline Sweeney of Quincy, one of the co-chairs of this year's effort said. "And we hope to do even better this year."

Orders are being taken now for the bright yellow blooms and volunteers will be selling them at various locations after delivery beginning March 20. Deadline for the advance orders is March 7, and may be placed by calling Sweeney at 773-8226. A bouquet of 10 is $4, and a box of 500 is $200.

More than 1,400 businesses and individuals in these towns, many of them purchasers of daffodils in the past, have been contacted by volunteers for support this year.

"The Odd Couple"

The Cohasset Dramatic Club will present Neil Simon's female version of "The Odd Couple" March 31, April 1,6,7 at 8 p.m. at the Cohasset Dramatic Club Clubhouse, formerly the Greenhouse Restaurant, 15 Stagecoach Way, Cohasset. Included in the cast are Sally Rossi (Scituate) as Olive Madison, Bonnie Haley (Scituate) as Florence Unger, Don Massa (Cohasset) as Manola Costazuela, Ed Byrnes (East Boston) as Jesus Costazuela and as the Trivial Pursuit Players: Gail Varallo (Cohasset) as Sylvie, Lisa Fichtner (Boston) as Mickey the Cop, Angi Walsh (Cohasset) as Vera and Winnie Grazier Cohasset) as Renee

The production is being directed by Joe Doniger of Marshfield and produced by Gail Varallo.

Curtain is at 8 p.m. with reserved cabaret seating. Tickets are $8 and $6 for senior citizens and may be purchased by mailing a check with desired performance date to : Cohasset Dramatic Club, P.O. Box 225, Cohasset, Mass. 02025. Further info: call 383-2366.

Pierson to Person

The Rev. John J. Keohane of St. Anthony's Catholic Church, the Rev. E. Clifford Cutler, rector of St. Stephen's Episcopal Church, and the Rev. Gary A. Ritts, who is the minister at Second Congregational Church, will review a wide range of religious issues on "Pierson to Person" hosted by Wigmore Pierson, Thursday, March 1, 8 to 8:30 p.m.

Pierson's second topic will be on the South Shore real estate market with guest Janice L. Crowley of Hunneman & Co., 8:30 to 9 p.m.

The program is aired live each Thursday, 8 to 9 p.m. on Continental Cablevision on Channel 53 in Hull, Hingham, Norwell, Hanover, Scituate and Channels 53 and 3 in Cohasset.

Next season promises rebirth for boys team

By David McKee
Mariner staff

It looks like there might be a rebirth for the Cohasset boys basketball team next season.

The reason for the optimism is the Skippers won two of their last four games and saw the emergence of their point guard of the future, eighth grader Kywon Edwards during that stretch.

If the Edwards name sounds familiar, it is. Kywon is the younger brother of Bryan Edwards, the all-time leading scorer in Mass. high school history who led Cohasset to a state championship.

Bryan currently displays his vast talents in the Big East as a point guard for the Boston College Eagles.

"Kywon played point guard for the JV's and was promoted to the varsity when their season ended," Rappucci said. "And he played some key minutes in our last few games and I'm optimistic about next year with him running the show."

The Skippers pulled off two big wins in their last four games to close out the season.

They upset tourney bound Norwell 66-58 and closed out the year by dropping Holliston in the Medway Invitational Tournament by a score of 58-51.

All star junior Lincoln Marsac led the way for the Skippers in each of the games as he hit for 24 points against Norwell and 22 points against Holliston.

"LIncoln is a legitimate all-star," Rappucci said. "A lot of teams ganged up on him this year, but he still averaged 20 points. He has a shot at 1000 career points next year. He will need to average about 20 a game like he did this year."

Also playing key roles in the victory over Holliston were seniors Mike Ellinger and Noah Hill playing in their last game for the Skippers.

Ellinger, a center, scored six points and grabbed eight rebounds, while Hill, a forward, scored 14 points and grabbed 12 rebounds.

"It was a good way to go out for those guys," Rappucci said. "They gave it 120 percent, like they always do."

The Skippers finished this season at 3-17, but Rappucci sees a bright future for his team.

"This is a young team that will only get better," Rappucci said. "With the experience we got this year and the confidence we gained, I think we can be competitive next year. That plus some help from the JV crop could make us a contender in the South Shore League. I'm excited. The talent is there, now we just have to work with it."

In addition to Marsac and Edwards coming back, Rappucci is looking for big things from a core of juniors. They are guard Travis Coley, guard/forward Tadd Kasperwitz and center Matt Marks.

"We have no place to go but up next year," Rappucci said. "Unlike last year, this year each player by position will get a detailed workout routine to complete over the summer. In addition we will have them participate in JV and varsity spring and summer leagues. Each kid will have stuff to work on and a lot of our success depends on how much they get done over the summer. The work can only pay off for us."

Another thing that Rappucci is looking to get accomplished during the summer months is having a playable basketball court set up in Cohasset.

"There is not one outdoor playable backboard in town," Rappucci said. "I find this unbelievable for a town like Cohasset. There should be places for the kids to play basketball if they want. Other towns have nice courts, but here there is nothing playable."

He said he is looking to have a fundraiser to get the money needed to repair some of the run-down courts in Cohasset.

"I don't know why it is like this," Rappucci said. "But I'm hoping to do something about it."

Science Center notes . . .

Get out and enjoy the last days of winter as the South Shore Natural Science Center, Norwell.

AFTERNOON KINDERGARTEN

Your kindergartner's curiosity and sense of adventure will be heightened during outdoor hikes and activities, Tuesdays, March 6,13, 20, 27, April 3,10;1-3 p.m. SSNSC members/$60. Non-members/$75 per six-week session. With early childhood specialist Joanne Benn, the children will explore woodlands, fields, swamps, and ponds and learn about the animals that inhabit them. Children must have turned 5 by Jan. 1.

ENVIRONMENTAL LECTURE SERIES

George M. Woodwell, Director, Woods Hole Research Center, an internationally known ecologist and author, discusses global environmental issues, Tuesday, March 6, 7:30 p.m. Suggested donation $4; students free. This is the first in a series of lectures and workshops on conservation and preservation of the Earth's resources which address global, regional, and local environmental issues and suggestions for action. Call the Science Center for a complete schedule of speakers in this lecture series.

WEDNESDAY NATURE WALK

Join a Science Center naturalist for a leisurely walk through Daniel Webster Sanctuary, Marshfield, Wednesday, March 7, 9:30 a.m. - noon. SSNSC members/free. Non-members/$4. You'll see the beginning signs of spring and view the last remnants of winter. These informal walks are perfect for all ages.

"THE LORAX"

Don't miss the Enchanted Circle Theatre's perfomlance of "The Lorax," a tale about conserving our environment's resources, written by Dr. Seuss, Thursday, March 15, 7 p.m. Call the Science Center for information on tickets and location.

Cohasset swimmers finish strong

In a recent swim meet at Sandwich High School, involving teams from Sandwich, Cohasset and Taunton, Cohasset swimmers finished first in six of 10 events and second in four.

The Cohasset relay team was first in the 200-meter medley relay with Chip Anderson swimming backstroke, Dave Leahy, breaststroke, Chris Henderson, butterfly and Nicki Hawks, freestyle.

In individual events, Henderson was first in the 200 meter Individual Medley and second in the 100 butterfly.

Anderson was first in the 100 free and the 100 back, and second in the 50 free.

Leahy was first in the 100 breast and the 200 free.

Hawks finished second in the 500-meter freestyle.

A tired Cohasset squad ended the meet by finishing second in the 400-meter freestyle relay.

Selectmen and harbor group spar over bylaw

By Alison Cohen
Mariner staff

After ventilating hurt feelings at Monday's meeting, selectmen and the members of the harbor committee agreed to come together to resolve their differences Thursday night over a proposed harbor bylaw.

Harbor committee chairman Fritz Pfaffmann told selectmen he was there to "express great disappointment about demeaning comments made about what we've been doing."

Pfaffmann singled out selectman Chairman Burt Pratt as the source of the disparaging comments.

Pratt said he never intended any insult, but merely wished to suggest several changes in the bylaw.

"You've got to get over your sensitivity," he said.

Pratt said he met with Executive Secretary Greg Doyon and Harbormaster Irving Gadow to review the proposed bylaw. The group passed their comments and revisions on the the harbor committee last Thursday.

"We invited you to meet us today to go over it and you refused to appear," Pratt reminded Pfaffmann.

Pfaffmann said he refused because the invitation had not included the committee as a whole.

Town Counsel Richard Henderson tried to play peacemaker by pointing out that the selectmen had

Photo exhibit draws rave reviews

By Alison Cohen
Mariner staff

Art critics used to debate whether photography was an art or a craft. One school of thought argued the camera froze a moment of time and reality. They believed the creative spirit of the photographer was never engaged.

The current exhibit at the South Shore Art Center puts the lie to that contention.

The All New England Photography Exhibit that runs now through March 22 has 77 photographs on display. The photographs were culled from 363 submissions by the renowned photographer, Nicholas Nixon.

Nixon is quoted in the exhibition brochure as saying of his choices, "The photographs I picked to hang in the exhibition are the ones I found to possess the most surprise, a sense of grace, or a passionate connection to the real world. The best pictures, here as elsewhere, have all of these."

The photographs display 77 different ways of looking at the world, 77 different ways of seeing and capturing "reality."

Subject matter ranges from the simple pleasures in the ordinariness of Sunday breakfast to a dazzlingly red landscape of a forest fire. The exhibit shows us the perfect peace of a mother with babe in arms to a war-weary soldier in a city named "peace."

The photographers show us new angles to look at the world from and the hidden textures and densities of nature. One photograph in the special effects category has wood textures so clearly defined you could almost get a splinter touching the image.

The images can be sun-dappled or deep in shadow. They spark instantaneous recognition or leave the viewer asking "How the hell did he do that?" In every case, there's always a new dimension to see with every return visit.

The exhibition was supported in part by the Polaroid Corporation. The Polaroid award for best in show went to former Mariner photographer, J. Paul MacDonald.

MacDonald's top prize-winning photo shows a victim of El Salvador's bloody struggles waiting in an ambulance. All around there are hands reaching out—hands trying to close the ambulance door, hands trying

School committee seeking $85,000 for Osgood repairs

By John Magadieu
Mariner staff

The Cohasset School Committee will ask voters at the annual town meeting to spend $85,000 for three maintenance projects at the Osgood Elementary School.

The "good news," according to Superintendent Stephen Hart, is that fixing the heating system, septic system and bathrooms at Osgood won't cost the previously projected $145,000.

Hart said the heating system needs "modifications" to deal with an imbalance in heating throughout the school; during a winter day, there is "great variation" in heating.

At one end of the school, he explained, the radiators would be turned off because temperatures would soar to over 80 degrees, while at the other end of the school the heaters would barely maintain 60 degree temperatures.

The heating system is fed by one boiler with a back-up boiler, Hart said, and the boilers are good ones. The problem is that there is one thermostat at the end of the first grade wing that controls the heat for the entire building.

New Gulf River Association aims to protect the environment

By Alison Cohen
Mariner staff

Approximately 60 Cohasset and Scituate households along the Gulf River are working to preserve the water quality and health of river and wetlands.

Members of the Gulf River Association met with Cohasset health agent Dr. Joseph Godzik of Scituate and regional coordinator Lori Thayer of the Coastal Zone Management to learn what steps they could take to protect the environment.

According to the group's spokesman, John Hartshorne of Border Street, the association was formed in the early '60s prompted by fears that a sewage treatment plant was going to be built along the river.

The group was relatively inactive during the '80s but was revived several years ago by Michael Bleakie to preserve and enhance the river, marshland and wildlife inhabiting the area.

Godzik told the group they could protect the environment by proper maintenance of their septic systems and by eliminating use of fertilizer, pesticides and hazardous household cleaners.

According to Godzik, whatever goes down the drain or gets washed off the lawn by rainfall will ultimately find its way into the river system.

The Cohasset health board has a regulation requiring homeowners to pump their septic system every two years. Godzik recommends that homeowners inspect the system periodically to determine if more frequent pumping is necessary to prevent septic system runoff.

"You can simply look and see if the water level is where it should be," said Godzik. "If you find a large volume of solids, that's the time to pump the system."

Homeowners can hire a professional to inspect the system or they can do it themselves. The Cohasset health board has handouts available that

Cohasset's week

Meeting on Strait's Pond

The Tri-Town Committee encourages residents interested in the improvement and protection of Strait's Pond to attend a meeting Wednesday, March 14, at Cohasset Town Hall at 7:30 p.m.

Members of the committee (local officials from Hingham, Hull and Cohasset) will give a brief history of their study of the pond, which was designated an area of critical environmental concern (ACEC) in 1987.

The South Shore regional coordinator for Coastal Zone Management, Lori Thayer, will speak of other citizen groups working for effective watershed management, and tell what the state can do to help protect the pond.

John Hartshorne of the Gulf Association, a group working to protect the Gulf River in Cohasset and Scituate, will highlight their association's history and goals.

The purpose of the meeting is to have a similar citizen's group form of those residents interested in the protection of Strait's Pond and the Weir River.

Excise bills mailed

The Cohasset treasurer-collector's office mailed the 1990 boat excise, 1990 motor vehicle excise, and the second half 1990 real estate and personal property tax bills early in an effort to meet the town's weekly obligations.

The boat excise, personal property and real estate taxes are due upon receipt and payable without penalty on or before May 1.

Mooring bills mailed

The first commitment of motor vehicle excise is due upon receipt and payable without penalty on or before April 23. Please contact the assessor's office at 383-9900, extension 124 if you have moved from Cohasset or the vehicle listed on the bill has been sold, traded, stolen, declared a total loss or registered out of state.

Mooring bills were mailed Feb. 6. These bills are due no later than 4:30 p.m., April 2. Failure to pay the mooring fee will result in the loss of mooring privileges.

All of these bills may be mailed to the collector of taxes, P.O. Box 296, Cohasset, MA 02025, or paid in person at the town hall. The collector's office is located on the second floor of the new addition.

The office hours are as follows: Monday-Wednesday, 8:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m.; Thursday, 8:30 a.m. to 7 p.m.; and Friday, 8:30 a.m. to 1 p.m.

By mailing these bills earlier than usual, the collector hopes to avoid the costly procedure of borrowing in anticipation of tax revenue as has been done in the past.

Candidates night March 14

On Wednesday, March 14, the Cohasset Chamber of Commerce will hold its annual Candidates' Night at Kimball's by the Sea on Cohasset Harbor.

Candidates for the office of selectmen and board of health will present their cases and answer questions from the public.

Also included will be discussions of some of the warrant items on this year's town meeting warrant.

The evening will begin at 6:30 p.m. with presentations and questions to start at 7 p.m.

The public is invited to attend. The program will be aired live on cable TV station 3. For further information, please call the Cohasset Chamber of Commerce at 383-1330.

Pierson To Person

All five members of the Cohasset School Committee will be guests on "Pierson to Person" Thursday, March 8, 8 to 9 p.m. on cable television.

Chairman Barbara Bliss, Vice Chairman Christopher Ford, Secretary Nancy Sandell, and members Russell Reidy and Ralph Kidder will appear on the program hosted by Wigmore Pierson to discuss the fiscal year 1991 budget, regionalization, drugs/alcohol in the schools, and other issues related to public education.

"Pierson to Person" airs weekly each Thursday night, 8 to 9 p.m. on Channel 53 in Hingham, Hull, Norwell, Hanover, and Scituate and Channels 53 and 3 in Cohasset.

Phone book coming

The Cohasset Rotary Club announces that the 1990 Cohasset phone book is being assembled.

The Cohasset phone book is a service provided to the community by the Cohasset Rotary Club. All proceeds from the phone book are used for scholarships for Cohasset High School seniors.

The Rotary Club also supplements the fund with donations from the Cohasset community.

If any Cohasset residents or businesses would like to add or alter any information currently in the book, or if they would like to make a donation, they can send a note to: Cohasset Rotary, P.O. Box 36, Cohasset, MA 02025.

Early release March 15

March 15 will be an early release day in the Cohasset Public Schools.

There will be no afternoon kindergarten sessions and other students will be dismissed according to the following schedule.

Junior/Senior High School	Noon
Deer Hill School	12:40 p.m.
Joseph Osgood School	12:50 p.m.

Lunch will be served in the elementary schols and food service will be available at the junior/senior high school.

This early release day has been approved by the Cohasset School Committee to allow the staff to review curriculum and to prepare for accreditation.

explain how to inspect and maintain a septic system.

Godzik's advice when it comes to fertilizer and pesticides is simple: don't use them.

"There really isn't a whole lot of choice [for an environmentally conscientious homeowner]," said Godzik. "The organic fertilizers cause the same problems– the runoff causes eutrophication."

Eutrophication is the fancy way of saying what promotes lawn growth also promotes the growth of algae and plant life in the river. That leads to build up of sediment that eventually leads to the end of the river.

Proper disposal of household hazardous wastes is also essential for water safety, Godzik told the group.

If a product label warns against prolonged contact with the skin or breathing the fumes, it shouldn't be dumped down the drain where it can work its way into the ground water supply and the river system.

The list of toxic products includes solvents such a paint brush cleaners, oven cleaners and floor and wall cleaners. Godzik suggests using harmless alternatives, such as soap and water.

The board of health also has handouts to teach people how they can clean their home without polluting the environment.

The health board will also do its part to maintain the river system by engaging in an intensive testing program, primarily for fecal coliform bacteria. The testing will enable the board to identify hot spots and locate polluters.

To reduce costs, the water department and high school students will assist in the project.

The water department will provide equipment and materials free or at a reduced cost. Students will contribute their labor.

Hartshorne said the association plans to conduct a survey of homeowners abutting the river.

Approximately 120 to 180 homes along the Cohasset and Scituate border are built along the river.

Fuel money runs out

The South Shore Community Action Council Inc. (SSCAC) anticipates running out of LIHEAP (fuel assistance) monies very soon.

Total fuel assistance funding for this program year was approximately $3.2 million. This figure is approximately $2 million less than SSCAC received during the mid 1980s, according to Richard Hinkley, SSCAC executive director.

SSCAC administers the Fuel Assistance Program to fifteen towns on the South Shore including Marshfield, Hingham, Cohasset, Norwell, Scituate, Kingston, Pembroke and Carver.

Hinkley stated "the combination of an extremely cold December, outrageously high oil prices and the funding cuts have all contributed heavily to the exhausting of SSCAC's funds." Hinkley also noted that approximately 2,550 of the 9,400 applications his agency has taken this year are first-time applicants. This clearly indicates that the economic situation in Massachusetts has taken a serious turn for the worst, he said.

SSCAC has made an official request to the executive office of communities and development for additional fuel assistance funds. That request is in limbo at this time, Hinkley said.

SSCAC will attempt to service all households that have applied at least once, but Hinkley said that "the Fuel Assistance Program does not guarantee assistance to people that apply."

Murray sponsors health bill

Rep. Mary Jeanette Murray co-sponsored, with a number of her colleagues, three bills on specific proposals regarding the long-term fiscal health of the Commonwealth.

"There is no doubt that we must look at future costs before we begin debate on the FY91 budget. A management and financial plan must be part of the solution to our present problem," Murray said.

The proposals are as follows:

1. A resolve which asks the administration for a five-year projected estimate of the cost of state government, based on FY91 submitted budget.

2. Legislation which would establish a comprehensive five-year management and financial plan to be developed by the executive branch, submitted on an annual basis to the legislature and audited by the auditor.

3. An Act relative to audits performed by the auditor's office, which would authorize the auditor's office to make recommendations to do away with duplication of efforts by more than one agency and recommendations for termination of an agency if its mission has been fulfilled. Recommendations will be made as part of the audits conducted.

"I feel that this legislation is extremely important for the long term fiscal health of the commonwealth," she said.

Harbor bylaw hearing set

a legitimate right to review and comment on the draft bylaw.

"I think everyone is getting too upset. This is a tempest in a teapot.

Both Henderson and Doyon reminded the groups that the town had a very tight deadline to meet in order to prepare for the April 7 town meeting.

According to Henderson, the major areas of contention center on whether and under what circumstances a mooring can be transferred.

One circumstance would allow spouses of deceased mooring holders to take over those moorings. The second would allow a corporation to hold a mooring, but would deny it the right to transfer that mooring.

Currently, only an individual can hold a mooring and there is no right of inheritance.

The harbor committee wants all moorings held by individuals while the selectmen would include corporations with restrictions.

Because the warrant had to go to the printer no later than March 6, the two groups reluctantly agreed to send the harbor committee's most recent draft with the selectmen's amendment concerning corporations.

If any changes are made at Thursday's meeting, they will be made by the printer before the warrant is printed or by amendment at town meeting.

In other business, the selectmen:

• Voted to seek a $350 reserve fund transfer to allow building inspector Robert Egan to attend a 13 session course on state building codes.

• Granted permission to Jim Shipsky to cut up fallen trees on town-owned land. Shipsky was directed to contact the conservation commission for permission if the trees are in any wetland areas.

• Gave the Social Service League, council on aging and health board permission to hold the annual health fair in town hall. The fair is scheduled for May 10.

Messing to teach about good nutrition

If you've bellied up to the breakfast bar feeling virtuous because you're eating a healthy bran muffin while your spouse greedily munches a cream-filled chocolate-frosted doughnut, don't start making jokes about eating greasy kid stuff. Nutritionist Pat Messing has a news flash for you.

"A typical bran muffin from a major doughnut chain has 40 percent more fat and 120 more calories than that cream-filled chocolate frosted doughnut," she says. When it's so moist, dense and chewy that it tastes like cake, it's probably the nutritional equivalent of cake.

Messing knows lots of ways that fat, sodium and other nutritional no-nos sneak into our diet. She also knows how to make good food taste good and take less time to prepare. Beginning March 9, she's going to share those secrets with senior citizens of Cohasset.

The Cohasset council on aging is sponsoring the four week series, called "Eating for the Health of It," to help senior adults make better food choices and have better nutrition. Nutrition education is particularly important for older people because they are at risk for malnutrition and undernutrition. According to health experts, poor nutrition has far-reaching, long-term consequences for the health and well-being of the elderly.

Messing is extremely well-qualified for the series. A Cohasset resident, she has a master of sciences in nutrition from Columbia University. She has a private practice in Cohasset and works with various corporations developing nutrition education programs. Messing also co-authored a book on feeding infants and toddlers with Rena Coyle. The book is titled "Baby Lets Eat!"

Messing tailored the series to be fun as well as informative. She is currently offering a similar series in Weymouth.

The first session is devoted to the basics of good nutrition and good eating. Participants will learn how to shop and cook for a one or two-person household. The class also features recipe makeovers—adapting favorite recipes to make them healthier.

In the second week, Messing will take the group on an armchair supermarket tour. Participants will learn how to choose food wisely and how to read labels. Manufacturers know many different names for salt and sugar, the wise buyer needs to know them, too.

Week number three is devoted to eating smart for a healthy heart—or how to get rid of the excess fat and cholestrol in your diet.

"The most important thing you can do for yourself is eat less fat . . . to reduce the risk of heart disease," said Messing. "No more than 30 percent of the day's calories should come from fat, but most Americans have a diet that is 42 percent fat."

Fat sneaks into our diet in many devious ways, Messing says. Those innocent looking crackers in your cupboard may be a bad food choice. Messing suggests giving them the napkin test: wrap a cracker in a paper napkin, rub the napkin with your finger, then wait a few minutes. If a grease stain appears on the napkin, you may want to stay away from the cracker.

Salt is another hidden health hazard.

Many soup manufacturers label their products "Low sodium. One-third less salt." Even at one-third, the soup is still far too salty to be healthy.

The last week focuses on special health problems and dietary needs. Attention will be given to osteoporosis, digestive and chewing problems and vitamin and mineral deficiencies. Other special diets will be discussed if they are of interest to the participants.

Messing rushes to reassure senior citizens that giving up excess fat, salt and sugar doesn't mean giving up good taste.

"You can make delicious soups with no salt at all," she said. Messing advises replacing the salt with herbs and spices.

Many seniors find it hard to spend time preparing and eating for just one. Resorting to tea and toast or salty canned soups is a common occurrence for widows and widowers, Messing said.

"There are ways to eat well without spending a lot of time in the kitchen," she said. She'll share those ways at the nutrition series.

The series will be held in the Cohasset senior center each Friday from 10:30 to 11:30 beginning March 9. For more information or to enroll, call 383-9112.

Osgood repairs . . .

"To get that end to a good heat level, much of the rest of the building is overheated," Hart said.

There are four vents that carry the heat from the boiler, and Hart said the plan is to install thermostats to each of the four sections to provide "zoned" heating. Also, sensors would be placed in each classroom to shut off heat automatically if the temperature gets too high.

Of the $85,000 request, improving the heating system would cost about $30,000, Hart said. That amount would not provide the "Cadillac" of heating systems (independent temperature control in every room), but it would suffice.

The septic system at the Osgood School needs a new leaching field, Hart added. It has not overflowed and poses no health risks at present, but the town has experienced several dry winters and the water table has been low. A new leaching field would cost $15,000.

As for the two main bathrooms at Osgood, "they're just very old," Hart said. The walls and ceilings have to be taken down and rebuilt, at a cost of $40,000.

Gromada to make sure you're not out of your census

By Alison Cohen
Mariner staff

This year, April 1 will be more than just April Fool's Day. It will be America's bicentennial Census Day.

Beginning March 23, local residents will begin receiving their census forms in the mail. The government hopes the completed forms will be winging their way back to the census bureau on or before April 1.

If the census bureau doesn't hear from you, you may hear from them. Just to make sure the form isn't get lost, stolen or strayed, enumerators will visit non-respondents in order to make sure that the census is as complete and accurate as possible.

In case you had forgotten, the constitution requires that a census be taken once every 10 years. The first census occurred in 1790.

According to Madeleine Gromada, assistant manager for field operations in Norfolk County, the basic census form contains 14 questions and takes about 15 minutes to complete.

One out of every six households will get the long form. That consists of 59 questions and is estimated to take 45 minutes to complete, said Gromada.

"Every question on the form is required by law, mandated by Congress or necessary in order to properly allocate federal funds and resources," she said.

Most of the questions don't change from decade to decade, but this year the government is expanding the questions about the individuals that make up a household.

Gromada explains that the non-farm family of four is a thing of the past, but no one is certain what the new reality is.

Gromada stressed that the census is probably the most confidential form you'll ever fill out. Individual forms with identifying information are sealed for 72 years and nobody— not the IRS, the immigration bureau or the FBI gets to peak. The census is exempt from the Freedom of Information Act. The only exception is that an individual may be permitted access to his or her own census form.

Getting the census done is a tremendous undertaking.

"It is second only to mobilization for war in terms of manpower and fiscal appropriation," Gromada said.

In order to complete the decennial census, 453 temporary offices have been established nationwide and 500,000 workers will be hired for the year-long project.

"The results of the census must be on President Bush's desk by Dec. 31," said Gromada. "That date is fixed and cannot be extended."

Getting the job done is a big job, so Uncle Sam is looking for a few good employees.

Madeleine Gromada

Gromada said the government prefers to hire local residents to work as enumerators.

The census bureau has found that they get the best results when they use people familiar with the area. Those people are most likely to know when people are apt to be home, whether language barriers may exist and other pertinent collection information. They're also less likely to get lost looking for private ways out in the pucker brush.

Norfolk County will be hiring 300 to 400 enumerators to check on non-respondents. They hope to hire 50 workers from Cohasset.

Gromada says the work is highly flexible. Workers set their own hours and can work between 15 and 40 hours per week total. The pay is $7.50 an hour plus 24 cents a mile.

In order to qualify, an applicant must be at least 18 years old and have a high school diploma or its equivalent.

It isn't necessary to have your own car. Gromada said if a worker can get to an assigned neighborhood by public transportation or friend, the work can be done on foot.

"We tailor our assignments to the individual worker," she said. "We try to be as flexible as we can be."

Workers must also take a short general knowledge test. Those who qualify will be trained and given their material packets at the same site at a later date.

Gromada said the job is perfect for mothers and senior citizens since the work hours are so flexible.

The test is being offered at Cohasset town hall March 13 at 9 a.m. Although walk-ins are not turned away, Gromada prefers to have people contact the regional office before the test.

Science center sponsors art contest

To celebrate the completion of its new building, and to underscore the relationship between the arts and nature, the South Shore Natural Science Center announces a jurored competition which will culminate in the award of a $5,000 art commission in June, 1990.

Eric Anderson and Susan Donahue, Co-Chairmen of the Art Competition, noted that the art should be inspired by the Science Center theme, awareness and appreciation of the natural environment, and that the committee would consider work in any medium. The artwork will be the focal point of the new auditorium at the Science Center, a dramatically beautiful room (30' x 30') which will be used not only for Science Center activities, but will be available for other individual or organizational uses.

Nearly 50,000 people each year use the South Shore Natural Science Center.

The space for artists to consider is above a working fireplace, and is 8'4" wide and 25' feet tall, to a peak; it is flanked on both sides with window-walls, extending from floor to the 30-foot ceiling, framing in the forest just outside the building. Pieces may be mounted on that wall, or they may be affixed to the ceiling, therefore both two dimensional and three dimensional works can be considered.

The Science Center will take responsibility for mounting the piece, with the supervision of the artist. Factors of climate include the occasional use of the fireplace, an air management system which includes two ceiling fans, no air conditioning or humidification, and temperatures ranging from 55 degrees to 80 degrees.

Artists who would like additional information, or would like to view the space, should call the South Shore Natural Science Center at 659-2559. Specific proposals, including a resume and, if appropriate, slides of representative work done in the medium the artist proposes for this site, should be received at the Science Center (c/o Cathy Bush, Jacobs Lane, Box 429, Norwell, 02061) by May 1, 1990. Include a self-addressed stamped envelope for return of materials accompanying the proposal.

FOR AN IDEA OF HOW DIRTY YOUR ORIENTAL RUG IS, RUB THIS AND LOOK AT YOUR FINGER.

Oriental rugs are constantly picking up various types of soil. Some are greasy and some are gritty. But they all can eat away at your treasured possession.

For your Oriental rug to retain its beauty and value, it should be cleaned at least once every three to five years.

At Grillo Oriental Rug Cleaning, we carefully examine each rug, then give it the most suitable treatment. Sometimes that means gentle machine-washing, other times it means our 'Art-Safe' hand-washing. And our exclusive equipment and methodology enable us to remove the deep-set grit that others miss.

Furthermore, unlike harsh commercial cleaning, our individualized, museum-quality care is always safe, always effective.

For more information, or to have your rug picked up, call (617) 871-6500. Outside this area code, call 1-800-649-7707.

Public comments sought on planning

A governor's commission on growth and change, appointed 18 months ago, is soliciting public comment on its findings and recommendations on land use and planning.

The first hearing will be held at 7:30 p.m. Monday, March 12, at the Norwell town hall, Route 123.

The commission's report, completed in January, has been distributed to local public libraries and at town halls – in the planning board and conservation commission offices.

The goal is to hold public hearings throughout the state from now until May, concluding with a statewide conference at which proposed legislation will be presented.

The legislation would be filed in December.

State Rep. Carmen Buell, chairman of the commission, can provide further information by writing to him at State House Room 237 Boston 02133 or calling him at (617) 722-2380.

The economic future of Massachusetts is inextricably linked with the quality of life in each of the 351 communities, and without taking any initiative to plan for the future, the state dooms itself to a "future of strip development and sprawl, increased traffic congestion, wasted resources and opportunities," according to the report.

The report recommends reforming the land use management system by adopting the following goals:

• Channel growth into developed areas, rather than outlying areas so that a diversity of landscapes and settlement patterns are maintained. Change should respect existing character.

• Ensure that economic opportunity exists for every citizen and foster the economic well-being in each community by creating a land-use pattern identifying appropriate areas for industrial and commercial activity and guiding the density and intensity of those uses which can be sustained over time.

• Identify and protect natural and cultural resources through appropriate preservation, conservation, enhancement and restoration.

• Enhance access to and availability of natural and cultural resources.

• Promote housing for present and future citizens of all income levels in a proactive approach.

• Plan development at a rate commensurate with the ability to provide infrastructure and capital facilities – such as roadways and wastewater treatment systems.

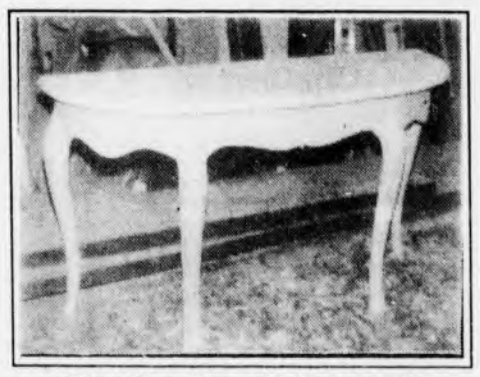
• Create a comprehensive transportation system on land, water and in the air and supporting infrastructure.

• Establish and maintain a comprehensive land use management process at all levels of government.

• Encourage a partnership among all levels of government and between the public and private sector for planning, implementation and problem-solving.

• Provide information, education, training, community outreach, professional assistance and financial resources to enable effective planning and decision-making.

• Ensure the public with a voice in the decision-making process.



Road race by the sea

The 14th Annual Cohasset RoadRace by the Sea will take place Sunday, April 1 at 1 p.m.

Registration is limited to the first 800 entrants. Each runner receives a T-shirt with the race logo, as well as prizes and free refreshments. The race, which includes runners from all over New England, was recently rated in the Top 40 races in New England by New England Runner magazine.

The event is sponsored by the Rotary Club of Cohasset. Proceeds from the event are used to benefit the club's local charities. The race is again this year under the direction of Peter Logan and Roy Fitzsimmons. The deadline for application is March 25. They are available at Good Sport, Colonial Pharmacy and Cohasset Liquors. The application fee is $8.

Chiropractic for Health

by Debra M. Tranberg
Chiropractor

A SPASM OF ACTIVITY

Muscle spasms that appear in the area of the back are painful and debilitating affairs. They are not, however, conditions in and of themselves. A spasm is a symptom related to a vertebral subluxation. If a person were to "strain (his) back" lifting a heavy object, for example, he most probably threw some vertebrae out of alignment. In response to this unnatural alignment of spinal bones, the body "freezes" any movement in the area by putting surrounding muscle tissue into spasm. This, in effect, prevents movement which may further harm the misaligned bones. The first step in relieving the pain of muscle spasm is to have the bones properly realigned. The chiropractor seeks to do precisely that by manipulating the bones back into their proper position. Relief from muscle spasms may soon follow.

Many have suffered from such discomfort for a long time under the delusion that nothing can be done. In fact, some problems you may experience are occupational in nature. If you are involved in the trades or area as fisherman, etc., call DR. DEBRA M. TRANBERG, SCITUATE HARBOR CHIROPRACTIC, 80 Front St., Scituate, 545-7388, and DR. SUSAN EMMER, CHIROPRACTIC & FAMILY WELLNESS CARE, 87 Sohier St., Cohasset, 383-1330. We offer the proven chiropractic applications that will go to the source of your problem, relieving such discomfort and returning you to a long sought after state of well-being. By appointment. Workers Comp. cases and most insurance plans accepted.

HINT: Those muscle spasms not related to a "strained back" are usually more severe and related to injury or disc, muscle, or skeletal disease.

Around town

With Sallyann Chatterton

• WBZ-TV sportscaster Bob Lobel will headline "A Night of Sports Talk" at the Cohasset Community Center, Friday, March 16, beginning at 7 p.m.

Lobel, who will present an extended version of his weekly "Sports Spotlight", will be joined by Patriot Ledger sports columnist Ron Hobson, a Cohasset resident. Hobson and Lobel will discuss the Boston sports scene, and field questions from the audience.

Tickets to "A Night of Sports Talk" are $15. The proceeds from the benefit are earmarked for the year-old Cohasset lacrosse program, and for the Friends of Cohasset School Sports, which is involved in a year-long fundraising effort to raise money for Cohasset High School athletics.

The tickets may be purchased from any member of the Cohasset lacrosse team, or by contacting Ken Ekberg at either the Deer Hill School (383-6115), or at 383-6182.

There will be a cash bar at the community center, and hors d'oeuvres will be served.

• Congratulations to Robert and Patricia (Hevey) Healy of 6 Norfolk Rd. on the birth of their daughter. Born Feb 16 at South Shore Hospital, she was almost a valentine! We'll bet that she is a valentine in the Healy household no matter what the date of birth.

• Word is that Vera James is feeling much better, and will soon be home from South Shore Hospital and we are glad!

• Hardly taking time off after his management of the Red Cross Bloodmobile in January, Al Odermatt is working now for the colorful Daffodil Days program of the South Shore Unit of the American Cancer Society which comes on the first days of Spring (March 20-21).

Al has been taking orders for the blooms and will be helping to deliver them when they arrive by air from the West Coast. Deadline time for advance orders is aprroaching, but there is still time to call him at 383-1283 or 1-878-3954.

Engagement

Theresa Chisholm to wed Kenneth Ralff

Mr. and Mrs. Daniel F. Chisholm of Norwood announce the engagement of their daughter, Theresa Mary, to Mr. Kenenth D. Ralff, son of Mr. and Mrs. David J. Ralff of 12 Lantern Lane, Cohasset.

Ms. Chisholm is a 1985 graduate of Providence College and is employed by the Hartford Insurance Group in Cambridge.

Mr. Ralff is a 1985 graduate of Clark University and is employed by the Boston Insurance Center in Quincy.

The couple will wed in June.

You may order three or more bunches at $4 a bunch of 10. Beautiful yellow blossoms on the first day of spring, what a nifty idea!

• There is a lot of talk about Hugo's closing its doors in such a hurry, there are a lot of upset brides out there!

A lot of townfolk are saying that the town won't be the same without using Hugo's as a focal point or a point of interest, the restaurant and the name have become an instution! Whatever happens, we sure wish the new owners good fortune.

• It is time to let you know the schedule for Pierson to Person, the show that everyone is talking about and cannot wait to see. It is on every Thursday from 8 to 9 p.m. on cable channels 3 and 53.

Tonight, March 8, will be the Cohasset School Committee; on Thursday, March 15 there will be a repeat, Marek Laas "Poland Today"; March 22 is also a repeat with Lincoln Bloomfield. "The World Today"; and, March 29 show is entitled "Cohasset, Preview of the April 14 town meeting" with guests to be announced.

• Peter Logan and Roy Fitzsimmons are at it again, they are planning the 14th Annual Cohasset Roadrace by the Sea. The race will be held April 1, it will begin at 1 p.m. at the Common.

As you know, the race is sponsered by the Rotary Club and has become a ritual for runners from all over. application is $8, with all runners receiving a T-shirt.

The deadline to apply is March 25 and the race is limited to 800 runners (this race was rated in the top 40 in New England by the New England Runner magazine so get your application in early!). Applications are available at Good ,Sport, Cohasset Pharmacy and Cohasset Liquors.

• The Dana Farber's Jimmy Fund Clinic is holding a luncheon in honor of former President Ronald Reagan March 22 at noon at the Sheraton Boston to toast his days as sportscaster and to thank him for his help in fund raising events held during his two terms in office.

This luncheon is being sponsored by Budweiser and highlights include a fireside chat with Reagan and Ken Coleman, former Red Sox announcer and still Cohasset resident.

There will be appearances by some of the region's finest athletes who were in the spotlight in the 1980's; a videotape by channel 7's John Dennis highlighting New England's sports moments from the past decade; and there will be a special presentation by the young patients of Dana Farber's Jimmy Fund Clinic.

Tickets for the luncheon are $100 per person or $1,000 per table. They may be purchased by sending a check or money order to the Jimmy Fund and a self-addressed stamped envelope to, "Thank you Ron Reagan," c/o Tom Lynch, 34 French St., Hingham, Mass. 02043.

For more information, please call Mary-Ellen Maich at 383-6553. Sounds like a wonderful way to contribute to a most worthy cause!

• It is finally straightened out... Jimmy V. Rosano, the stone mason is fine and feeling wonderful. He was never ill; Ros Rosano is in the hospital and feeling better.

• Congratulatons to Mike Meers who made the honor roll at Fort Union Military Academy at Fort Union Virginia.

That's the news from here for this week, please keep it coming!

Growth affects Cohasset schools

The growth in Cohasset's school population is projected to be 12.8 percent through 1994, according to a new state Department of Education study unveiled at the school committee meeting Monday.

That figure places Cohasset's school population growth rate at nearly double the statewide rate, which is projected at 6.8 percent.

Superintendent Stephen Hart said he hopes the state figures are accurate this time; when the school department was considering adding onto Deer Hill School several years ago, the state count was not accurate.

At first glance, that appears to be the case. They predicted Cohasset would have 1,130 students this year, and there are 1,134. For the 1990-91 school year, they predict 1,182 students; the budget is based on a school population of 1,179.

The Cohasset school population was up between 1,500 to 1,600 when the 1980s began, but reached a 10-year low in 1989, between 1,200 and 1,300.

School committee chairman Barbara Bliss noted that the population boom is predicted to last about 10 years, and then there probably will be a decline.

Statewide, 1990 is predicted to be the low point in terms of school population, with 820,000 students in Massachusetts schools. That compares to 1,030,000 in 1980.

In Cohasset in 1990, however, the numbers will be higher. Hart said there is an increase, larger than the school department previously expected, in kindergarten and first grade enrollments for next year.

THE EFFECT OF GROWTH

Hart said the only school room currently not in use is an art and music room adjacent to the gymnasium at the Osgood School.

Because of the impending growth in the kindergarten and first grade, the school committee will consider moving the kindergarten classes out of the "open classroom" space at the school (which currently houses three classes) and put them in the self-contained rooms they used to occupy in the front of the building.

Committee member Ralph Kidder suggested that the situation could give the committee the opportunity to look into alternate methods of instructing children in the second or third grade, perhaps putting them in the open space and putting them in teams.

• March 10 marks the last day that the PSO can use the Stop & Shop register tapes to aquire more computers, so please turn in your tapes! They will be picking them up at the deposit boxes March 16 and place their final order by March 23. Help the PSO to help our children!

Your views count

Cohasset residents will have a chance to air their views about the $561 million Old Colony Rail project at public hearings beginning in April.

Today marks the end of a review period by a 22-member citizens advisory committee. That committee has spent a long time looking over the project and will meet tonight to attach its comments to a draft environmental impact statement that will go to the federal Urban Mass Transit Authority for review.

The citizens advisory committee's first draft of its comments, which came out Feb. 27, agreed that there is a "compelling need to improve transportation opportunities from the Old Colony area," and concludes that the MBTA has examined "all reasonable alternatives."

Still, some members have come up with alternatives of their own that they will ask the agencies to consider.

The committee stressed that "any commuter rail alternative should provide service direct to South Station in Boston. The CAC has opposed early commuter rail alternatives that only provided commuter rail service to Braintree and that would have permanently required transfer to the Red Line for the remaining trip."

The plans call for one train stations to be located off Route 3A where the old skating rink (and more recently, a boat emporium) used to be.

There are also a dozen grade crossings in town, four of them across private ways.

In Cohasset Village, the MBTA is planning to replace the parking it usurps with its tracks by building a parking lot off Smith Place, behind the businesses on Ripley Road.

The committee noted that "the suggested commuter rail stations have been developed with considerable local coordination by the MBTA and with detailed review by the (committee)."

And the committee said it concurs with the station locations, and is comfortable with the size and conceptual designs.

According to Stephen Polechronis of the Massachusetts Bay Transportation Authority, the federal Urban Mass Transit Authority will review and sign the report which includes the comments of the citizens advisory committee.

Then, it will be your turn. You can evaluate the report yourself, because there will be copies at the local library and at the town hall. Take your time—but don't put it off, because April is only about three weeks away.

In the meantime, for those of you who won't be able to spend time looking through the volumes of material, we will try to bring you as much information about the impacts on Cohasset as we can during the next few weeks. Stay tuned.

New citizens group seeks support at public hearing

Letters

To the Editor:

I would like to begin this letter by commending the members of the Cohasset Conservation Commission. They are faced with a very tough job which involves difficult decisions, long hours, little praise and no pay.

Recently, they have spent even longer hours drafting 64 pages of new regulations which will be proposed at a public hearing on March 13. Copies are on file for public review at the conservation office and library.

Many of the proposed regulations are both necessary and beneficial to the community and environment. One, however, has serious ramifications which will severely restrict, and may eliminate, such imrpovements to one's home as additions, swimming pools and regrading of property. More specifically, the regulation as proposed states that, ". . . except as permitted by the Cohasset Conservation Commission, no person shall remove, fill, dredge, alter or build upon land within 100 feet of a fresh water wetland; marsh, wet meadow; bog; swamp; bank; lake; river; pond; stream; estuary or land subject to flooding by ground water, surface water or tidal action." As you can see, you do not have to live on the ocean or harbor to be affected by this.

Currently, structures, within 100 feet of a wetland which pose no adverse affect to the environment, are allowed after a review by the commission and a subsequent order of conditions. Under the proposed regulations, you will not be able to add on to your home, build a deck, install a swimming pool, regrade your property, etc. if your project falls within 100 feet of any of the above-mentioned areas. A variance may be requested, but variances will, according to the New Proposed Wetland Regulation, ". . . be granted only in rare and unusual cases," and will require a $4,000 filing fee.

As proposed, these regulations are far more restrictive than those of any surrounding towns or the state.

Oddly enough, any future large scale developments will be impacted little because the larger the lot, the more likely that a structure can be located more than 100 feet away from a wetland. The brunt of this regulation will be borne by the homeowners, and a degradation of property values for those situated near a wetland is likely to occur.

We began this letter by praising the members of the commission for their efforts. We will end it by saying that the praise is sincere; however we strongly urge them to reconsider any regulation that will deny many citizens of this town the basic right to enjoy their properties and to enhance their value over time through environmental responsible improvements.

In addition, we also urge all Cohasset residents to attend the public hearing on March 13 at 7:45 p.m. at the Selectman's Office of the Town Hall so as to protect your right to utilize your property to the fullest extent possible under current law and preserve at your established values.

John Golden resigns from drug and alcohol committee

To the Editor:

Since last September 1989, after being appointed to the Cohasset Drug & Alcohol Abuse Committee, I was elected chairman of said committee.

It was one of my primary goals to indoctrinate the committee with guest speakers who were well versed and active in the fields of drug and alcohol abuse and law enforcement.

Mr. Wigmore Pierson, a committee member, was kind enough to host a one-hour discussion of these problems on his "Pierson to Person" show, which was carried live in five communities, including Cohasset.

The committee itself was outstanding to work with, and an in-depth analysis regarding these problems was arrived at and will be evaluated and submitted to the board of selectmen.

I strongly recommend that this committee be made permanent in order to monitor these insidious problems.

Also, I would like to thank Mrs. Priscilla Tebbetts who did a fine job as the committee's elected secretary. Additionally, I would like to give my thanks to Mrs. Molly Hochkeppel of the Patriot Ledger, and Mrs. Jane Lane and Mrs. Alison Cohen of the Cohasset Mariner for the outstanding coverage we received throughout our meetings.

I would be remiss if I did not personally thank Police Chief Joseph Kealy and certain members of his department for their outstanding help and assistance, shown to me in numerous areas.

Lastly, for many years I have been actively involved in both of these dual problems in several areas, and I feel that I have contributed my experiences and the best of my knowledge to this committee and town. And it is now time for me to revert back to my original activities in these sensitive areas.

Please accept this letter as my resignation to the Cohasset Drug and Alcohol Committee. It has been a distinct pleasure for me to have served the community at large in this endeavor.

Very truly yours,
John A. Golden

Cohasset seniors save town big bucks

To the Editor:

On behalf of the Treasurer-Collector's office I would like to congratulate the volunteer senior citizens and their coordinator, Kathy Bryanton, for the tremendous job they did stuffing over 5,000 motor vehicle excise and boat excise bills.

They also helped prepare the Personal Property and Real Estate Tax bills for mailing by stamping the permit number on each envelope.

With the reduction in our office staff, which took place last July 1, 1989, we are finding it difficult to keep up with the daily work and almost impossible to complete the seasonal work in a timely manner.

With their help we are able to mail these bills early. This could mean that the town might avoid the cost of temporary borrowing this spring.

The following nine women answered our call for help. We appreciate their spirit and their sense of dedication to their community:

Virginia Anderson, Betty Bailey, Betty Enders, Eileen Kurtz, Jackie Moores, Tilly Nardo, Irene Porter, Olga Sawchuck and Margaret Taylor.

With appreciation,
Elizabeth B. Ripley

Betty Enders, Virginia Anderson, Margaret Taylor, Tilly Nardo and Olga Sawchuck helped stuff the tax bills into envelopes last week, saving the town a lot of money in the process.

Cohasset recycling news . . .

By Alix White
Special to the Mariner

Tip of the week: compost

Spring is just over the horizon. As you make your garden plans, this year eliminate chemical pesticides, weed killers, and fungicides from your ornamental lawn.

If you bring grass clippings laced with toxic chemicals to the Recycling-Transfer Facility (RTF) it poisons the entire compost windrow.

If you are hiring a chemical company to spray your lawn, tell them that you do not want Diazanon used on your lawn as well as any other pesticide, herbicide, or fungicide.

Ask about organic or Integrated Pest Management (IPM) practices. If they refuse, go to a different lawn care company or landscaper. Our Earth deserves the very best.

Lawn care/Earth care

What is the perfect lawn? Is it a blue-green carpet that goes on for acres? Is it a place for children to play, a place to entertain? Do you welcome wildlife to your garden with birdfeeders, berry bushes and trees?

Or, honestly, do you have a lawn just because everyone in suburbia has a lawn, when really you'd rather do anything but mow, water, and rake your lawn?

I ask all these questions because I was wondering if you really understand the cost of the American lawn? I'm not talking about the $200 to $300 you spent last year on chemial lawn treatments, or the $700 per test that the town spent to find out if the grass clippings from your lawn were contaminating the compost.

No, I don't mean dollars at all. I mean animal sacrifice: birds, cats, dogs, children, spouses.

Navy Lt. George Prior, for example, in 1982 developed a headache, nausea, and a fever after golfing at Virginia's Army Navy Country Club. The grounds are reportedly treated with Daconil, a fungicide.

He suffered from Toxic Epidermal Necrolysis (TEN), a disease that makes skin fall off in sheets and causes organ failure. He died soon after his initial illness.

Closer to home, there was a dog in Cohasset who would develop tremors and fall over after his neighborhood was sprayed. He stopped having tremors when the owners stopped having their lawns sprayed. They switched to organic fertilizer with great success.

I asked Vicky Smythe, program director of New England Wildlife Center, if you could have the perfect lawn without killing off animals. She said that the perfect lawn would not be a monocrop of, say, Kentucky Bluegrass, but would include many kinds of grasses.

The lawn area might be smaller and devote more room to wildflowers. She said that we would all like our lawns to look like golf courses, and yet, she continued, the golf courses in Scotland where the game originated use the natural terrain and the grass can be six inches to two feet high.

The perfect lawn would not have Diazanon on it; this is a pesticide that acts on the cholinesterase, which are the "doors" in the nerves.

Diazanon, an organo-phosphate, acts to keep the "doors" in the nerves always open. That is why animals like birds, rabbits and dogs start to shake if they are affected by pesticide poisoning. Diazanon is most harmful just after its application. Birds have been killed en masse be eating grass recently sprayed with Diazanon.

The New England Wildlife Center recently was awarded a grant to study pesticides in wildlife. They have witnessed the problems of pesticide poisoning on wildlife but there has been very little documentation because the tests are very expensive. The Jesse M. Cox Foundation grant goes a long way to changing that.

Smythe told me that if we really are concerned about

Cohasset Agrees
CARE
to Recycle Everything

preserving and protecting wildlife from chemical poisoning, we must start in our own backyards.

While golf courses and sod farms are dangerous to birds because of their size and attractiveness to birds "it's the homeowner that causes more problems than golf courses and large-scale farmers."

The farmer and groundskeeper is now trained in chemical application. The average homeowner does not need to be licensed and often misuses pesticides.

For the perfect lawn, only you can respect your piece of Earth. This Earth Day you can take the pledge: no chemicals on my lawn!

Troubleshooting at the RTF: plastic

The chipper is in for the plastic bottles, and the boxes in the blue building have been filling up. That's great. Please, clean out the milk jugs with a little cold water; shake the water around the entire jug to get rid of the milk; dump out water. To save space in your bag (and at the RTF) step on your jugs to flatten them.

Cohasset chamber news and views

By Paula Knowles
Special to the Mariner

On Wednesday evening, March 14, 1990, the Cohasset Chamber of Commerce will present its annual candidates night at Kimball's by the Sea on Cohasset Harbor.

Everyone is aware, I am sure, that there are very few contested races this year in Cohasset, and many of you may say "Why Bother?"

Why waste an evening listening to six people talk about why they should be elected selectman or board of health member? What difference does it make, anyway?

It may be that this attitude, displayed by far too many of us in the past, has led to our dissatisfaction today.

All year long we hear questions about how and why things are done in town government.

All year long we hear people asking questions about what is going on with our schools and our school budget.

Everyone has a question.

Everyone has a gripe or complaint.

Everyone has at least one dissatisfaction with the way the town is run. But very few of us take the opportunities offered to us to ask our question, state our position, air our concerns.

When the time comes to cast our vote in the voting booth or at town meeting, most of us are as ignorant of the issues as we were the year before. And our concern just grows and festers. Nothing changes either with our attitudes or in the makeup of town government. And this, my friends, is the voting public's own fault.

This is the time to change the trend. This is the time to become involved — not by running for office, although heaven knows we need more citizens with the time, courage, and commitment to run and serve; but by becoming informed about what is going on in Cohasset.

And if you don't like it, to try to change the way things are done. Don't cast your votes based on rumor and third-hand gossip. Cast your votes based on first-hand knowledge.

Come to candidates night. Ask questions. Stand up and be heard. Listen to the candidates and the proponents and opponents of the major warrant issues. Make up your own mind based on fact.

Join us at Kimballs on the 14th. The evening will begin at 6:30 with presentations to begin at about 7 p.m.

And if you can't come in person, watch the program live on Cable Channel 3. If you have questions, but can't make it to Kimball's yourself, ask someone else to go in your place, and ask your question for you. Get the answers you need before the election and town meeting. It is the only way that we can make our vote count.

You can recycle jugs and bottles now

Recycling plastic jugs and bottles is now part of Cohasset's continuing recycling effort. Not only will the town save 20 percent of the space in the trailors sent to the SEMASS incinerator from the Recycling Transfer Facility, but Cohasset will be paid $20 a ton for the granulated plastic.

The board of health and Waste Knott Recovery recently signed a five-year contract whereby Waste Knott provides and maintains the granulator and transports the plastic.

Cohasset provides the supply of plastic, plus the labor involved in shredding the plastic through the machine. Waste Knott also pro- ides the bins called "gaylords" to store the granulated material, and pays the town for the plastic.

Residents are asked to remove caps and reasonably clean all plastic containers, rinsing milk containers in particular. No yogurt, cottage cheese, catsup or pancake syrup containers are acceptable.

Most all other plastic containers such as milk, water and juice bottles, detergent, shampoo and cleaning agent containers, anti-freeze and motor oil jugs can be recycled.

The RTF supervisor can answer any questions you may have. We look forward to the cooperation of the townspeople and the additional savings this new plastic recycling program can bring.

In the near future, used waste oil will be collected for recycling at the Recycling-Transfer Facility (RTF). Also, the board of health is planning a household hazardous waste collection day and will publicize the event when details are finalized.

Voter registration assembly

A voter registration assembly sponsored by the PSO was held at the high school Monday, March 5 for Cohasset High School seniors.

Four speakers provided a wide range of voter information to the students.

Richard Henderson, town counsel, discussed the rights and responsibilities of voters and provided an overview of how Cohasset town government works, including Proposition 2 1/2 and the differences between town meeting and the town election.

Claudia Storey, PSO representative to the senior high provided students with information of the upcoming election and absentee voting information.

Julie Guild, chairwoman of the Town Republican Committee, addressed the philosophy of the Republican party and outlined certain national and local issues relevent to the students.

Ron Goodwin, chairman of the Town Democratic Committee discussed the Democratic party philosophy and differences between the two parties.

At the close of the assembly, students age 18 on or before April 14, (Cohasset town election day) registered as voters with the help of Linda Shultz. Any student not yet registered may do so in the High School office with Shultz through March 16 in order to vote in the April 14 election.

Silber to speak March 28

Dr. John Silber, president of Boston University, will address Cohasset residents on "Education in the New Fiscal Reality" at 8 p.m. Wednesday, March 28 at the Cohasset High School auditorium.

Due to possible space constraints, entrance will be restricted to Cohasset residents from 7:30 to 7:45 p.m.

After 7:45 p.m. admission will be open to all on a space-available basis. This is a PSO sponsored education program. The PSO does not endorse any candidate for political office.

Health eduation news

During the weeks between Feb. 27 and April 13, students in the Deer Hill and Joseph Osgood Schools will participate in health education programs in their individual classrooms.

The "theme" for this period of time is chemical health, and each grade level will concentrate on some "age appropriate" aspects of this theme as part of their health education instruction.

This theme will deal with areas such as safety with medicines, toxic household products, dangers regarding the use and/or abuse of tobacco, alcohol and other chemicals, resisting peer pressure, developing refusal skills, examination of the personal, family and social consequences of abuse and knowing where to get help.

Through this program, the schools are attempting to cooperate with parents in assuring the health and well-being of the children by reinforcing healthy attitudes and values, in building self-esteem, and empowering the students to make healthy, appropriate decisions about their behaviors, according to Mike Gill, health education coordinator.

Storyteller Judy Black visited the Osgood School recently as part of a PSO-sponsored enrichment program.

PSO events for March

The PSO curriculum enrichment committee has once again planned a month full of wonderful events.

In the elementary schools, the second grade classes will take a field trip Thursday, March 8 to the Children's Museum to see the exhibit "What if I couldn't."

The fifth graders will visit the science museum March 28 and will attend the Omni Theatre.

The junior-senior high school will be entertained by the Barmidele Dancers and Drummers March 13 at 10:20 a.m.

On March 14, Peter Follansbee will present a day-long workshop on furniture-making in the art room.

On March 15, the art of papermaking will be presented in the art room.

On March 27, the high school will present "An Evening of Living Arts" which will include the performances of the dance repertory workshops presented by Sharon Weber.

The Deer Hill students will present "We Are The Children" and the high schoolers will present "We Are The World."

Weber's workshops were funded through a grant by the PSO. This evening also will include presentations by other depratments such as the music, home economics, art, industrial arts, and computer departments. Please mark your calendars.

Third graders visit art center

Mrs. Schadhauser's third grade class visited the South Shore Art Center last week.

Nancy Connolly coordinated and organized a cooperative class art project which involved the children applying crayons or craypas on wooden shapes, then applying tempura or water base paint and wiping it off to get the color effect.

The children created buildings with blocks of wood to make up a town. The landscape was done with clay and dried weeds to form trees. Clothespins, clay and fabric were used to make people.

Mrs. Palone helped set up the "Town" which is on display in the third grade hallway area. Mrs. D'urso chaperoned. You are invited to stop by the Osgood School and see the creation. It's fantastic.

Sixth grade tales of the magical zilket

The war of the wizards

By Kevin Smith

One strange day in 1895 a wizard named Zar was practicing magic.

He chanted some magic words in a foreign language, not knowing what would happen. Without warning, the sky turned as black as ink and lightning began to bolt towards a particular tree.

Suddenly, that tree changed form and became a magic zilket. This magic zilket had a light brown wooden color and it resembled an ordinary stick.

It covered about two feet in length but it was far from ordinary. Whoever possessed this wand could become the most powerful wizard ever.

Zar could now do whatever he wanted, since he owned the zilket. However his enemy, Razes, the good wizard, wanted to have the zilket so he could win the war of the wizards and allow good to spread throughout the world.

Razes knew this weapon had been created as soon as the sky turned black. He knew if he did not win the battle, the world would be lost to evil.

Razes gathered an army of wizards. At the crack of dawn, they left for Zar's castle. When they arrived there was someone standing at the top of the castle. It was Zar with the zilket.

Razes yelled up, "Surrender!"

Zar's response was, "Never!"

"Then die!" shouted Razes.

They started fighting. There were beams of light flying all over the place. The fight lasted until dark. Razes destroyed Zar and captured the zilket.

A lot of wizards had died, but Razes now had the zilket. Razes put it in a chest and sealed it up. The zilket was never used again.

My special week

By Melissa Weier

One day when I got home from school, I went up to my room as I usually do. To my amazement, there was a zilket sitting on my bed waiting for me. I was so excited.

I knew all about the zilket because I had read a magazine article about the zilket. Once every hundred years in the spring, the one and only zilket would appear in some child's room and stay for one week.

In the week's time, the zilket would clean your room, make your bed and play with you. You are not suppose to tell anyone that the zilket is visiting you.

The zilket was odd looking with light purple skin, yellow hair and green eyes. He was about 10-feet tall and walked with a wobble. He talked with a friendly but squeaky voice.

The zilket had the funniest jokes. I had a lot of fun with the zilket making slides from pillows and chairs that were in my room. He was very creative and we had a great time together.

Prokopow to speak at CHS

Michael Prokopow, a graduate student at Harvard, will speak to social studies classes on Wednesday, March 14 between 10 a.m and 1:15 p.m.

His presentation will focus on "The Legacy of Colonization of the Third World" and will engage students in a discussion of current world problems as a consequence of European imperialism. The public is invited to this grade 11 and 12 lecture. Please inform Mr. Buckley if you would like to attend by calling 383-6100.

Second graders go sugaring

On Thursday, March 1, the whole second grade went to see maple syrup making in progress at the Audubon Moosehill Sanctuary in Sharon.

They saw the maple trees tapped, the sap dripping into the buckets, and (best of all) the sap becoming syrup in the evaporating pan. The sights were great and the tasting was delicious.

1990 Yearbook ads

Lauren Wood, Advertising Editor, and the 1990 yearbook staff are pleased by the response to their appeal for ads in this year's yearbook.

Parents may be sponsors for $15 for a single name or $25 a couple.

Page ads may be taken up for $150 a full page, $80 a half page, $45 quarter page and $25 one-eighth page.

This is a perfect way to advertise your business and wish the graduates well or to put a personal message in the yearbook to your children and their friends. Call the high school for more information at 383-6100.

Second graders go sugaring

On Thursday, March 1, the whole second grade went to see maple syrup making in progress at the Audubon Moosehill Sanctuary in Sharon.

They saw the maple trees tapped, the sap dripping into the buckets, and (best of all) the sap becoming syrup in the evaporating pan. The sights were great and the tasting was delicious.

1990 Yearbook ads

Lauren Wood, Advertising Editor, and the 1990 yearbook staff are pleased by the response to their appeal for ads in this year's yearbook.

Parents may be sponsors for $15 for a single name or $25 a couple.

Page ads may be taken up for $150 a full page, $80 a half page, $45 quarter page and $25 one-eighth page.

This is a perfect way to advertise your business and wish the graduates well or to put a personal message in the yearbook to your children and their friends. Call the high school for more information at 383-6100.

Bloodmobile Cohasset High

There will be a bloodmobile at Cohasset High School March 21, Wednesday, 8 a.m. to 1 p.m.

Anyone wishing to donate may contact Carol Ciciotte, R.N. at 383-6100, ext. 28. The American Red Cross would appreciate your support.

School expands hours

The Carriage House Nursery School has expanded its pre-kindergarten afternoon program to four days.

Applications are now available and can be obtained at the nursery school which is located at 23 N. Main St. For further details, contact Sally Atkinson, director, at 383-9785 or 383-1100. Limited openings are available.

Cann completes course

Rita Cann of 23 Cedars Acres Lane, has just successfully completed the Writing to Sell Fiction course with Writer's Digest School, a national correspondence school for freelance writers.

Any prescription formerly filled by Cushing Pharmacy can now be filled at Cohasset Colonial Pharmacy
7 South Main Street
Cohasset • 383-0100
Just bring in your Cushing or Walgreen prescription container.

Photography show draws rave reviews at art center to tend to the victim, hands holding a camera. It is striking both in mood and story.

MacDonald has three other photos hanging, all exploring life in El Salvador.

This is definitely an exhibit to attend again and again—unlike the Museum of Art there are no lines and no tickets.

The exhibit has drawn rave reviews from all age groups (see side bar) so it makes a wonderful family outing. Virtually all the photographs are available for purchase after the exhibition closes, so keep it in mind if you need a very special gift for a special occasion—or just because somebody you care about deserves something special.

If you've never visited the art center, you have a treat in your future.

The center is unpretentious and comfortable place to spend a morning or afternoon. Couches are located in the main gallery for viewing comfort.

Voluntary donations to defray the Center's expenses are hinted at, but nobody's looking.

If you are looking for a way to put some creativity into your life, the center has a wide variety of classes, workshops and camps for adults and youngsters. The spring and summer brochure is due out soon.

Executive Director Lanci Valentine suggests that even people who know they are "not artistic" consider taking a class.

"The notion that only some people are artistic is culturally imposed," she says. "Anyone can be artistic—and art is good for your soul!"

For those who would rather be spectators, the center is sponsoring an open studio tour.

For the tour, 17 artists in Marshfield, Duxbury and Pembroke are opening their studios so the curious can watch them at work. The tour is slated for May 5.

The center is also available for rental for conferences, weddings, receptions, and birthday parties.

At a recent birthday party, a horde of dinosaur-crazy kids got to make erupting volcanoes and clay critters under the tutelage of center instructors. When the devastation was done, the center treated them to exploding ice cream sodas and cake. And the lucky parents carted the kids home and left the chaos for the center to clean up.

For more information about exhibits, classes, rentals and memberships, drop by the center at 119 Ripley Road or call 383-9548.

At left is Mariner staff photographer Chris Bernstein's shot of the Marshfield Fair entitled "Tickets to the Tilted World," which qualified for the show. At right is Lanci Valentine, executive director of the South Shore Art Center.

Art through the eyes of kindergarteners

By Alison Cohen
Mariner staff

Marie Price's kindergartners walked down to the South Shore Art Center to view the current exhibits. Looking at art through their eyes is like seeing it from a whole new perspective.

The children did not work their way around the room as adults do, speaking in hushed tones about which pieces were derivative and which had an interesting interplay between form and color. They burst upon each work with the shock of recognition, of discovery and of surprise.

After experiencing a piece with their eyes, it seemed almost impossible for them not to want to experience it with every sense. The lesson "look with your eyes, not with your hands" was a hard one, but they tried valiantly to obey.

They say when our ancestors were still living in caves, art was a powerful and dangerous kind of magic. For this group, the Jaws sculpture by a Silver Lake Regional high school student pulled them back again and again. Each time, the cluster of kids around it saw something new.

The adults were surprised at how clearly the children could remember what they saw and where it was.

"Find something with sparkles in it." "Find the horse made out of wire." Again and again, Price called on her students' power of observation and memory. The ease with which they flocked to the right painting, the right sculpture amazed the mothers who shepherded the children on their field trip.

In both the mixed media exhibit by Silver Lake Regional students and the juried all New England photography exhibit, the kindergartners had their favorites, though they often couldn't explain why they chose one over the others.

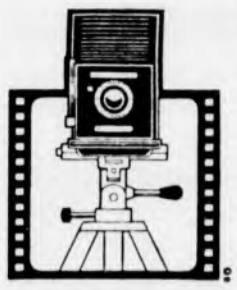
"I like the dragon best!" said Gina Lanata.

"I found a puzzle!" Gregory Harrington said enthusiastically.

In the photography exhibit, the children ignored the professionally-awarded ribbons and chose their own "best of show" by standing beside it. The results were surprising in the lack of unanimity.

Out of a class of 20 or so children, only 12 shared their favorite with one or more classmates.

Clarissa Erving's San Diego Sea Lion won the popularity contest by a whisker— four students piled up under that photograph.



Emily Larson summed up the group's sentiment by sighing, "I like that SO-O-O much."

For who would like to see what Marie Price's children saw, the South Shore Art Center is located at 119 Ripley Road in Cohasset. For gallery hours and additional information, call 383-9548.

The kindergarteners from Marie Price's class at the Osgood School enjoyed their trip to the South Shore Art Center to see the "awesome" photography exhibit.

Bank reports 1989 income

Cohasset Savings Bank has reported a net income of $184,000 of $0.18 for the year ending Dec. 31, 1989, compared to $654,000 or $0.65 pe share for 1988.

For the quarter ending Dec. 31, 1989, the bank reported a net loss of $121,000 or $0.12 per share, compared to a net income of $70,000 or $0.07 pe share for the same period in 1988.

"Although the bank's non-performing loans represnted only 4.27 percent of total loans and no foreclosures occurred during the year, we are continuing to increase the bank's allowance for possible loan losses," said Donald E. Bates, president.

"This impacts current earnings, of course, but it provides protection for the bank in a period of economic uncertainty.

"The bank's capital ratio remained over 20 percent, further evidence of its financial soundness," said Bates.

The bank added $212,000 to the provision for possible loan losses during the fourth quarter, bringint the total provision to $290,000 for the year.

Gain on sales of securities decreased $214,000 in 1989, also affecting the decline in earnings.

Assets of the bank as of Dec. 31, 1989, were $62.5 million and stockholders' equity was $12.6 million at that date. There are 1,003,000 shares of common stock outstanding.

Hunneman recognized

At a recent company-wide meeting held at the World Trade Center, the Cohasset office of Hunneman & Company Realtors was recognized for its outstanding performance in the calendar year 1989.

"Out of Hunneman's entire 31 office network, Cohasset had the greatest percentage increase in sales this past year," Hunneman President Bill Kiley noted.

"To have their volume up over 40 percent in a year the market has generally been flat is a real tribute to the associates in the office," Kiley added.

Cohasset manager, Judy Parsons, attributes her associate's success in 1989 to "hard work and developed brokerage skills."

New senior services

The Social Service League of Cohasset, Inc. announces the availability of a new program Services for Seniors for elder residents of Cohasset, Hingham, Hull, Norwell and Scituate.

The league has received a Title III B grant award from South Shore Elder Services, Inc. to develop and manage a job registry of private workers offering in-home support services to seniors who may need assistance with errands, shopping, meal preparation, companionship, respite care, personal care, etc.

Seniors or private workers wishing to learn more about the program are encouraged to call the program coordinator, Mary Beth Worrick, at the Social Service League office 383-0711 or 383-0821, Tuesday and Thursday, 9 a.m. to noon.

Robby and Joel Carpenter of Cohasset get treated to some happy meals by Ronald McDonald at the Floating Hospital for Infants and Children.

Massa named to Electro post

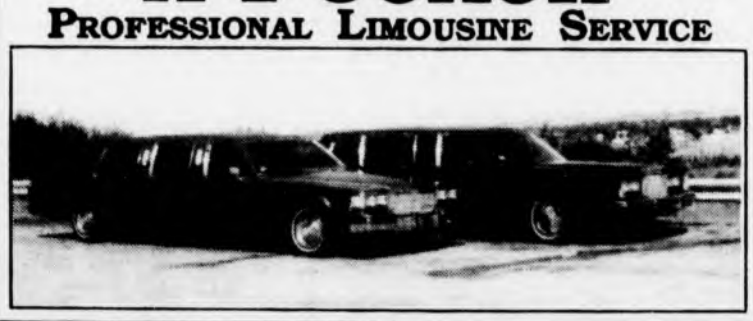
Ronald A. Massa of 140 North Main Street, has been selected to be Vice-Chairman of the Attendance Committee for the Electro/90 conference and exposition, taking place in Boston, May 9 to 11.

Electro/90 is the largest and most comprehensive technical conference and exposition for design engineers in the electronics industry, in the Eastern United States.

Girl Scout pizza party

Papa Gino's held a pizza party Wednesday, March 7 for a group of Cohasset Girl Scouts to honor them for their good community relations work.

Also, a Papa Gino's representative presented a check to the Patriot's Trail Girl Scout Council.



The donation will be used to help bring Girl Scouting to the homeless, girls at risk, new immigrants, and girls with disabilities.

Enjoy the celebration, remember the moments...

Resident named pathology chief at hospital

Cohasset resident Dante B. Cannarozzi, MD, has been named chief of pathology and laboratory services at South Shore Hospital.

A certified pathologist, Dr. Cannarozzi comes to South Shore Hospital from St. Mary's Hospital in Waterbury, Conn., where he served as associate pathologist since 1978, and medical director of the School of Medical Technology since 1982. He chaired the hospital's tissue and blood utilization committees, and served on several others. He also held clinical and/or advisory positions at Naugatuck Valley Surgical Center, Sharon Hospital, Community Medical Laboratory, and Biomedical Laboratories in the Waterbury area.

Dr. Cannarozzi previously was chief of pathology services at the United States Air Force Regional Hospital in Sumter, South Carolina, and a special consultant in laboratory medicine for the commanding general of the USAF Tactical Air Command.

His academic appointments include clinical assistant professor of laboratory medicine for the University of South Carolina, assistant clinical professor in the department of laboratory medicine at Yale University, and clinical assistant professor of allied health professions at the University of Connecticut.

A native of Yonkers, New York, Dr. Cannarozzi was educated at Iona College in New Rochelle, New York, and received his MD from Creighton Unviersity in Omaha, Nebraska. He served his internship and medical residency at Yale-New Haven Hospital.

He lives in Cohasset with his wife Elayne, a registered pharmacist, and their two children.

Computer giveaway ends

The Stop & Shop's Apple Computer giveaway program ends March 10.

Stop & Shop receipts issued through March 10 may be submitted to the schools through March 16 for inclusion in their final computer order.

Cohasset residents have done an outstanding job in collecting and submitting receipts throughout this program. The schools have ordered 14 computers as well as disc drives and assorted software.

The schools hope the final order will bring even more computers to Cohasset schools.

Consignment shop opens

Smith Place Inc. Consignment Shop has recently opened for business in the old Flat Iron Building at Smith Place and Ripley Road.

The building was completely restored for business use by Philip Smith of Cohasset several years ago. It consists of two buildings joined together.

Smith Place is more an antique shop than a consignment shop, according to Richard Armstrong, the proprietor of Smith Place.

He said his idea for the shop came from his involvment in doing business at the new Boston Design Center.

"We give people an outlet to sell nice things, and to give buyers an opportunity to buy nice things in an atmosphere that mixes social and business life in a friendly elegant setting," he said.

South Shore Art Center registration open

Registration is open for all workshops, courses, lectures, demonstrations and summer art camp for the spring and summer at the South Shore Art Center.

The course schedule has been revised slightly this year to begin immediately after the end of the winter term.

This term, there are courses and workshops for both adults and young artists in the areas of drawing, painting, calligraphy, printmaking, clay and photography.

Of special note, is a new course in the area of performance arts taught by Rosemary Melanson called "Mastery of Self Expression." Two sessions will be offered: high school and college students; and adults (all ages!).

It's not too early to plan for Summer Arts Camp 1990 — The Soviet Union. Discover the cultural heritage of the Soviet Union through the arts through hands-on camp projects and activities.

A creative movement performance, story telling and a student art exhibit will be presented on the last afternoon of each two-week session: July 16-27 and July 30-Aug. 10.

For more information, or to register, please call the South Shore Art Center weekdays from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. at 383-9548.

Flynn speaks out

Rep. William J. Flynn, Jr., candidate for state senator in the Norfolk and Plymouth district, participated in a panel discussion chaired by David Hannan at the South Shore Hospital regarding the providing of adequate health care in the region Feb. 28.

Flynn said, "The health care challenge for the region is to have community leaders and other public officials work closely with the South Shore Hospital so we can meet the number one challenge of the 1990s, which is coordinating and providing the best possible health care for all citizens of the South Shore at the lowest possible cost.

"Another issue we discussed was defining what health care services would be provided by the various health care providers such as the South Shore Hospital, nursing homes and other health care facilities along with the hope of developing community based health care clinics," he added.

Flynn said, "Some new ideas I raised included the concept of combining health care and day care facilities so that we can properly serve elders and young people together. I am also trying to work out a scheme to provide the maximum medical and hospital services at the lowest possible cost.

"I hope these types of discussions will continue on a regular basis in the future so we can develop a total health care program for all the citizens of the South Shore at the lowest possible cost."

Goedecke coffee

Cohasset residents will have three opportunities to meet with Jane Goedecke, candidate for Cohasset Board of Selectmen, this week.

Sue McNamara and Beth Christoffel will host a coffee Tuesday, March 13, from 7:30 to 9 p.m. at 52 Fair Oaks Lane.

The following day, Wednesday, March 14, Goedecke will join other selectman candidates during the Cohasset Chamber of Commerce's candidates night at Kimballs By-The-Sea, beginning at 6:30 p.m. It will be televised live on cable.

Then, on Thursday, March 15, John and Nancy Kinchla are hosting a coffee in their home at 12 Hillside Dr. beginning at 8:30 p.m.

Persons interested in attending these coffees to meet candidate Goedecke, who served on the advisory committee from 1986 to 1990, may contact Eileen Corbett, 383-6467. Additional informal gatherings will be held in the weeks ahead.

Election policy

Candidates for public office are welcome to submit articles on subjects pertinent to their candidacy.

Submissions to Candidates Corner should be brief, and may not in any event exceed two 8x10 sheets of paper, double-spaced. We reserve the right to shorten any submission and to edit or omit any offensive or libelous material.

Campaign statements will be published on a space-available basis.

No campaign material will be accepted by telephone, and candidates are responsible for submitting their materials before deadlines.

Candidates' photos are published once, with their campaign announcement, but newsworthy photos are welcome at any time and will be published at our discretion.

Candidates and their campaign committees are welcome to publish campaign ads through our advertising department. A free brochure and rate cards are available on request.

Political ads must be factual, in good taste, non-libelous and meet the requirements of state law. We will not publish controversial political advertising within two weeks of an election.

Further information is available by contacting Judy Almeida, Claudia Oliver or Jack Powers at the Marshfield office (837-3500 or 1-800-874-6969), Cheryl Davidson at the Braintree-Weymouth office (843-2937), or Ingela Murley at the Canton office (828-0006).

Skippers look to improve on the ice next year

By David McKee
Mariner staff

Cohasset High hockey coach Dennis Walsh is hoping to get the Skippers back to where they once they belonged.

Two years ago, the Skippers reached the quarterfinals of the Division II state tournament where they were eliminated by Duxbury.

Since then, the Skippers have fallen on some tough times. This year, the icemen finished with a 1-13 record, good enough for last place in the South Shore Small League.

"I would classify this year as a rebuilding year," Walsh said. "We lost some quality players last year and had to replace them with many young and inexperienced players. We started this year with, at most, two kids with a full season of varsity under their belt. And with that level of experience, you can't expect a first place finish."

The only victory for the Skippers this year came in a 2-0 shutout against Scituate midway through the season.

All the other games ended in losses, but still Walsh and the Skippers did not get down in the dumps.

"The kids were never discouraged even with the losses," Walsh said. "The attitude never slipped. We lost a lot of games, but it wasn't like we were blown out of every one. We could have won a few more if we had gotten some breaks."

Skippers look to improve on the ice next year

The Skippers were led this year by senior co-captains Joel Reidy, a goalie and John MacDonald, a defensemen.

"They were real good leaders and good captains for the team," Walsh said. "They always worked with and encouraged the younger players."

Richard McGlaughlin wrestles for the puck during a trying season for the Skippers.

Reidy got injured towards the end of the season and his place was filled in admirably by junior Jimmy Rosano. His play in the nets encouraged Walsh for next season.

In addition to the play of Rosano, many underclassmen showed they have the talent to lead a rebirth of hockey excellence at Cohasset High.

On defense, Walsh was pleased with the progress of sophomore Kevin Mulcahy and eighth grader Tim Conroy.

"They both played all season and did a good job for us," Walsh said. "They will be on the blue line for us for a while."

As for the underclassmen up front, Walsh sees a group of four players leading the way.

These four are freshmen Charlie Smith and Mike Reynolds, sophomore John Murphy and eighth grader Charlie Enders.

Reynolds, Murphy and Enders all played on the same line this year for the Skippers.

"They were probably our best line all year," Walsh said. "Their play together is very encouraging for the future. They were inexperienced going in, but they really adjusted and got scrappy as the year went along. And Charlie was injured part of the time but he got us some points too."

Reynolds was the Skippers leading scorer on the season.

As for what the team needs to be more competitive in the future, Walsh said, "We really need some more hockey players. We have a core of players who gained some experience this year, but we still need some more kids to fill in. But there are a lot of kids coming up from the youth leagues so I think that the future will be good for us."

Walsh said that members of the varsity will be playing in a recreational spring hockey league at the Pilgrim Arena.

"It's a fun league and hopefully they can pick up some experience," Walsh said. "I can't coach it or anything, but I'm glad the kids are getting involved."

He said that in addition to playing in the spring league, members of the teams will be attending hockey camps and power skating clinics during the summer.

"How well we do in the future really depends on how much the kids develop in the off-season," Walsh said. "But you can't expect eighth and ninth graders to develop overnight. But I think in a year or two the talent level will begin to show and then hopefully we get back to being more competitive."

Special Olympians go bowling

More than 200 Special Olympians between the ages of 8 and 70 will participate in the third annual South Suburban Special Olympics Bowling tournament March 11.

For the first year, the Alley Cat Lanes in Kingston will play host to this 10-pin and candle pin tournament.

Financial contributions making this year's event possible have come from both BayBank Norfolk and proceeds from candy machines located in various sites throughout the South Suburban area.

Athletes under 21 years of age will bowl in the morning followed by adult athletes competing in the afternoon. Spectators and volunteers are welcome. Please call Ellen Johnson at 585-5134 for more information.

South Suburban Special Olympics is part of the Massachusetts Special Olympics statewide program which provides year-round sports training and competition for people with mental retardation.

More than 400 sign up to play soccer this spring

More than 400 athletes have requested to play soccer this spring against opponents from surrounding towns.

Cohasset will enter 22 teams in the Coastal League in the under-10 through under-19 age divisions.

Stiff competition is expected from Duxbury, Hingham, Marshfield and Plymouth teams.

The season will begin Saturday, March 31, and continue to June 10.

For the first time, an in-town boys under-8 (5, 6 and 7 year olds) league was formed. The league is comprised of four teams from Cohasset. Their season will begin Saturday, April 7, and continue to Sunday, June 10.

All games will be played on the field in front of the high school. Game times will be adjusted to avoid conflicts with baseball games.

The Soccer Club was unsuccessful in its attempt to form a girls under-8 league. Only 15 girls registered. A minimum of 40 girls was needed.

Only those registered girls born in 1982 will be offered an opportunity to play for an under-10 team.

The registration fee for girls born after 1982 will be refunded.

A coaches' clinic will be offered Sunday, March 18, at the high school from noon to 2 p.m.

Jon Anderson, head varsity soccer coach at Babson College, will demonstrate technique, practice drills, game strategy and player development.

Coaches, players and their parents are invited to attend.

Anderson was voted the 1989 "College Coach of the Year" by the Coaches Association in Eastern Massachusetts.

All registered players should be contacted by their coach on or before March 18. If a player has not been contacted by that date, please call Steve Enchris at 383-6634.

ConCom might vote to approve new regulations

By John Magadieu
Mariner staff

The Cohasset Conservation Commission may vote Tuesday, March 20, to enact controversial new regulations designed to supplement the state wetlands protection regulations.

The commission left the door open after this past Tuesday night's public hearing for further discussion next week, as well as a vote to enact the proposed regulations.

During the March 13 meeting in the town hall auditorium, many concerned residents assailed the proposed regulations for being too cumbersome and too restrictive.

Jeff Waal, chairman of the conservation commission, opened the hearing with a rebuttal to a letter by the group Citizens for Equitable Environmental Legislation that appeared in the March 8 edition of the Cohasset Mariner.

Waal said the letter related a number of inaccuracies that led people to believe that the proposed regulations cause a greater imposition on land owners than the existing state regulations.

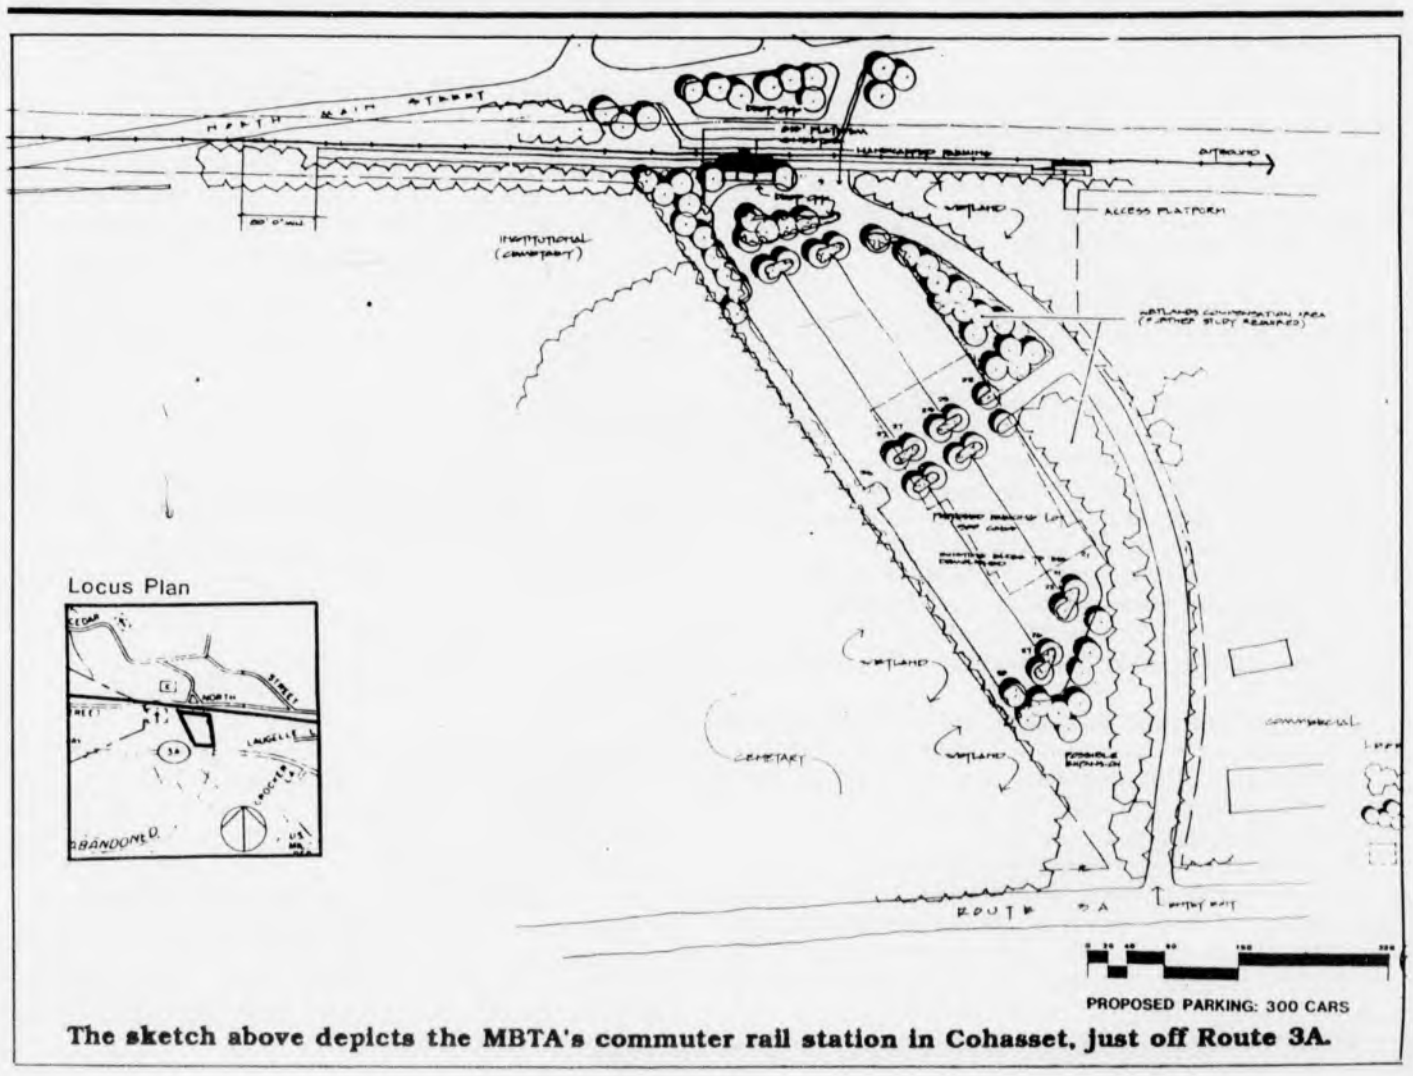
Waal said the newly proposed regulations were authorized when voters at town meeting last year passed the bylaw, and it was accepted by the attorney general.

He said the new regulations simply define the jurisdiction of the conservation commission; that jurisdiction is no different than allowed under the state's wetlands protection act.

"They only put in writing the practices and positions of the conservation commission," he said.

In its letter, the group contended, "Currently, structures within 100 feet of a wetland which pose no adverse effect to the environment, are allowed after a review by the conservation commission and a subsequent order of conditions. Under the proposed regulations, you will not be able to add on to your home, build a deck, install a swimming pool, regrade your property, etc. if your project falls within 100 feet of any of the above-mentioned areas. A variance may be requested, but variances will, according to the new proposed wetlands regulation 'be granted only in rare and unusual cases,' and will require a $4,000 filing fee."

Waal argued that the $4,000 fee applies only to requests for variance from the state regulations and performance standards after a superseding order is issued.



Waal said 100 cities and towns throughout the state have adopted similar regulations, and Cohasset's were based on those that exist in many surrounding communities, such as Weymouth, Duxbury and Fairhaven.

The regulations do ask developers for specific information when they apply to the board, and they do call for new fees—$25 or 10 percent on top of the state fees, and provides for fines, in addition to state fines, of up to $300 a day for violations.

The state may charge as much as $25,000 a day for violations.

The Cohasset regulations require that no project

How will rail affect Cohasset?

By John Magadieu
Mariner staff

Your turn to speak out on the Massachusetts Bay Transportation Authority's proposed expansion of commuter rail service through Cohasset is coming soon.

A 22-member citizens advisory committee, consisting of Debbie Cook and Martha Gjesteby from Cohasset and representatives from towns throughout the South Shore, completed an in-depth review of the proposal and attached its comments to an environmental impact report last week.

That report is now being reviewed by the federal Urban Mass Transit Authority; the MBTA expects the feds to complete their review by April 1. Then, they will initiate a series of public hearings throughout the towns that would be affected.

You have from now until the public hearing date to familiarize yourself with the plans and draft your questions. The plans are available for inspection at the Cohasset Public Library and at the town clerk's office and conservation commission's office at town hall.

The following report includes an overview of the plans, explanations and comments by Project Manager Stephen Polechronis obtained in an exclusive Mariner interview and reactions to the report by committee member Debbie Cook:

The MBTA initiated this project in 1985-86 and hopes to break ground by the end of this year; the authority will concentrate its initial efforts on revamping the Middleboro and Plymouth lines that currently carry only freight trains to accommodate passenger trains.

At the end of 1991, the MBTA will begin building the railroad from Braintree to Boston. Passengers from the Middleboro and Plymouth lines will have to switch to the Red Line at Braintree until the line to South Station is completed in 1992, Polechronis said.

In late 1992, the MBTA expects to begin construction on the Greenbush line, which will run from Braintree through Weymouth, Hingham, Cohasset and Scituate. All construction should be completed by the end of 1994, Polechronis said.

Overall, the project will include 21 new stations and 80 miles of rail at a cost of $561 million.

"The biggest concern we have is President Bush," he said. "Like Reagan eight times before, he has attacked the transportation budsget with significant cuts. Fortunately, congress has always supported us."

He said there is a standing joke at the transportation department that they won't get the funding until they agree to put MX missiles on the top of the trains.

Polechronis admits that the Greenbush line is the Selectmen call for override

By Alison Cohen
Mariner staff

Spurred on by the Friday deadline set by the printer, Cohasset selectmen voted on eight Proposition 2-1/2 override questions despite the absence of the advisory board.

After much wrangling, the selectmen voted for a $120,000 operating budget override, five long-term debt exclusions totaling $2.95 million and two capital budget outlays totaling $114,850.

If the operating budget override passes, it will become a permanent part of the town's tax levy and will add approximately 12 cents to the tax rate.

The override is necessary if the town is to cover a $232,000 deficit in the operating budget. The remaining deficit will be funded out of free cash.

Selectmen had hoped to get clarification on the recommendations of the advisory board, but no one had extended an official invitation. Executive secretary Gregory Doyon called advisory board Chairman Ray Kasperowicz at his home and office during the meeting to no avail.

Last week, the advisory board had recommended a slightly smaller operating budget override of $110,000 with language dedicating the funds to specific programs. The advisory board also planned to tap into free cash to cover the remaining shortfall.

Using the free cash became more palatable to the selectmen when town accountant Mary Gallagher told them that the state Department of Revenue had just certified an additional $322,000 in free cash for fiscal year 1991, bringing Cohasset's total free cash account to $564,463.

"I think we should leave the $322,000 alone, but taking half of the rest of it wouldn't bother me in the least," selectmen Chairman Burtram Pratt said.

Doyon and Gallagher remained leery of using so

Cohasset's week

Early release March 15

March 15 will be an early release day in the Cohasset Public Schools.

There will be no afternoon kindergarten sessions and other students will be dismissed according to the following schedule.

Junior/Senior High School	Noon
Deer Hill School	12:40 p.m.
Joseph Osgood School	12:50 p.m.

Lunch will be served in the elementary schols and food service will be available at the junior/senior high school.

This early release day has been approved by the Cohasset School Committee to allow the staff to review curriculum and to prepare for accreditation.

Newcomers' fund-raiser

The Scituate-Cohasset Newcomers Club will hold its major fund raiser of the year, a spring fashion show, at 7 p.m. March 21, at the Bridgwaye Inn.

Proceeds will be used to help fund scholarships for deserving Scituate and Cohasset high school seniors, provided annually by the Newcomers Club.

This year's fashion show will feature apparel and accessories from Bowman & Co. of Cohasset.

In addition to the show, there will be hot hors d'oeuvres, light sandwiches and vegetables, coffee and dessert.

Show tickets and information are available from Mary Buckley, co-chairman at 545-7531.

Newcomers Club members also are selling raffle tickets in conjunction with the show, with winners to be drawn the night of the show.

Prizes include a weekend for two at the Colonial House Inn in Yarmouthport on Cape Cod; a framed print from the Print Room in Cohasset and a $50 gift certificate in Sapporito's in Hull. Raffle tickets will be available at Angelo's Scituate, March 17 and 18, and at Super Stop and Shop, Cohasset March 18.

The Scituate-Cohasset Newcomers also hold monthly meetings with speakers or programs of local interests and issues and involve children and spouses in interest sub-groups such as Moms & Tots playgroups, evening gourmet dinners, bridge and quilting.

Anyone interested in joining may call membership chairman Charlene Hill at 545-7128 or Cindy Boyce at 383-2582.

Members need not be new residents, just people interested in meeting new friends and finding out about local resources.

Road race by the sea

The 14th Annual Cohasset RoadRace by the Sea will take place Sunday, April 1 at 1 p.m.

Registration is limited to the first 800 entrants. Each runner receives a T-shirt with the race logo, as well as prizes and free refreshments. The race, which includes runners from all over New England, was recently rated in the Top 40 races in New England by New England Runner magazine.

The event is sponsored by the Rotary Club of Cohasset. Proceeds from the event are used to benefit the club's local charities. The race is again this year under the direction of Peter Logan and Roy Fitzsimmons. The deadline for application is March 25. They are available at Good Sport, Colonial Pharmacy and Cohasset Liquors. The application fee is $8.

On Sunday, March 18, all of the Cohasset Girl Scouts will celebrate the 78th birthday of Girl Scouting.

They will gather with their mothers at the annual mother/daughter dinner at 5 p.m. at the Cohasset High School cafeteria.

Each troop is preparing its own meals and table decorations. After dinner, the girls will make short presentations and a donation to the Juliette Low World Friendship Fund in memory of the founder of Girl Scouts in the United States. They will conclude the evening with a Birthday Cake.

Kern receives award

Barbara Kern of Cohasset has received an Environmental Service Award from the Massachusetts Association of Conservation Commissions, Inc. (MACC).

The award was part of a 20th anniversary year celebration of Earth Day, and recognized Kern's dedication to the concept of "thinking globally, acting locally."

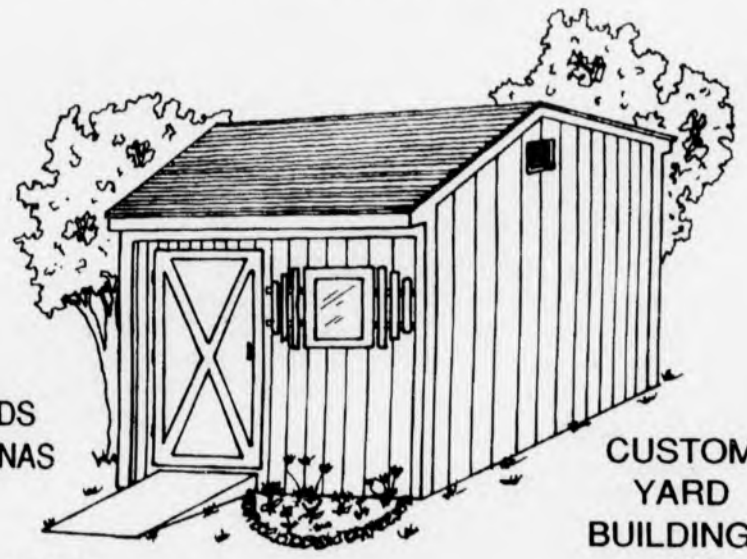
It was presented at the MACC Annual meeting March 3 at Holy Cross College Worcester.

Kern is a former member of the Cohasset board of health, and recently retired as executive director of the Massachusetts Association of Health Boards, (MAHB) which she founded eight years ago.

MAHB is a sister organization to MACC and works to promote public and environmental health by supporting local boards of health.

Kern remains active with the association, and continues to serve on the MAHB executive board.

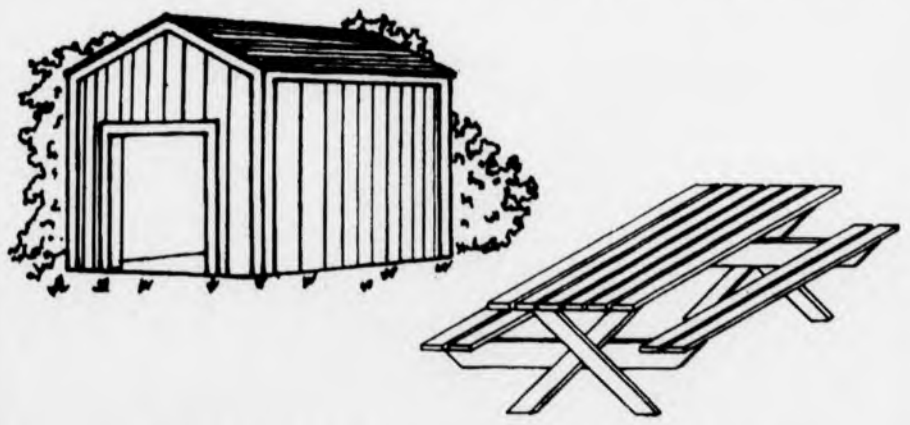
Voter sign-up ends soon



The voter registration deadline is March 16., If you need to, you should register at town clerk's office M-T-W 8:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. Thursday 8:30 a.m. to 7 p.m., Friday 8:30 a.m. to 1 p.m.

You also may register March 16 from 9 a.m. to 10 p.m. Call town hall if you need additional help.

ConCom seeks volunteers



The Cohasset Conservation Commission is seeking volunteers with a biology or botany background to assist in Earth Day celebration tasks. Earth Day will be celebrated April 22. Interested citizens may telephone the Conservation office at 393-9900, ext. 122.

Hugo's sale one step closer to completion

By Alison Cohen
Mariner staff

When Cohasset selectmen voted unanimously to transfer the liquor license from Hugo's Lighthouse Restaurant to Chart House, Inc., the sale of the landmark restaurant came one step closer to completion.

According to paralegal Laura Miles from Boston-based law firm Hale and Dorr, the sale is "on a fast track," with a closing planned for the end of March.

Selectmen Chairman Burtram Pratt quizzed Chart House official William K. Chalmers about the necessity for a lengthy closure.

Chalmers estimated renovations wou'd take 90 to 120 days.

"We plan to have the turnaround as soon as possible," he said. "We're losing money on the closing, too." Part of the reason for the delay in reopening is that the Chart House tables and carpeting are custom designed.

Existing furniture and furnishings will be sold off, although Chalmers indicated that some items may be retained in order to maintain a link between the two restaurants.

Miles also said that Chart House was exploring the possibility of keeping the Hugo's identification, possibly by naming the new restaurant "The Chart House at Hugo's Lighthouse."

Selectman Martha Gjesteby told Chalmers that local officials were being swamped by callers concerned about gift certificates issued by Hugo's. Paul Logue, Hugo's current owner, stated that honoring the gift certificates was part of the conditions of sale.

"The Chart House has agreed to honor all outstanding Hugo's gift certificates, not only at the Cohasset restaurant but at any of their locations.

Dan Leahy, manager of Kimball's-by-the-Sea and part of the group that purchased and renovated Hugo's previously, gave a glowing testimonial to the prospective owners of Hugo's.

"The town should welcome Chart House with open arms," he said. "They will be a boon to the community."

The only voice of opposition came from Lee Hyler, a certified public accountant who has a large outstanding bill with Hugo's Lighthouse.

Hyler complained that his requests for payment were being ignored and that no notice of the license transfer was issued to creditors. Hyler asked that some provision be made for outstanding debts.

Town Counsel Richard Henderson told selectmen that Hyler's problems must be resolved by Hyler and Logue.

"We are only concerned with the financial stability and qualifications of the transferee," said Henderson.

According to Henderson, the state alcoholic beverages control commission will review the transfer for the status of state tax payments.

Chalmers told the group that the restaurant would not feature live entertainment with the exception of wedding receptions and other private functions.

"No rock music?" asked Pratt.

After briefly reviewing the renovation work to be done, Chalmers told the selectmen, "I guarantee you'll love us."

Logue helps Hugo's old crew find new jobs

By Alison Cohen

When Cohasset's landmark restaurant, Hugo's Lighthouse, closed unexpectedly on Feb. 27, many people were thrown for a loss.

It was common knowledge that owner Paul Logue was negotiating to sell the establishment to Chart House, Inc.– a chain with holdings in the United States and the Caribbean– but few expected the restaurant would close before the deal was consummated.

According to Logue, the deal was slated to close after the Chart House was able to secure a transfer of the liquor license from Logue to the Chart House. Cohasset selectmen had set March 12 as the public hearing date on the transfer.

The restaurant closed anyway.

At the time that selectmen granted the liquor license transfer, Chart House official William Chalmers told them that the restaurant is expected to remain closed for 90 to 120 days for remodeling and redecoration.

As hard as the closing may be on Sunday brunch-goers, it was even harder on employees and brides.

According to Logue, 38 people were employed at Hugo's, all but five of them part-time workers.

Employees said they were not offered severance pay, but Logue told the Mariner that he has spent the time since closing looking for employment opportunities for his former employees.

"We're helping our employees locate other positions through phone calls," Logue said. "There are a lot of jobs available now. Some other companies have called me asking if I have good workers I can refer."

Logue also said that all employees would be available for rehire by the Chart House if they hadn't found jobs they preferred prior to the reopening.

Although all functions scheduled at Hugo's be-

A renaissance for Cohasset Center

By Alison Cohen
Mariner staff

If Jackie Dormitzer and Beth Christoffel have anything to say about it, Cohasset will be sprouting a fresh new look for spring.

The two Cohasset residents volunteered to coordinate the village renaissance project.

For Christoffel, a relative newcomer to Cohasset, it represented a good way to show her support for her new hometown.

Dormitzer got involved with the effort to spruce up Cohasset's center after finding herself apologizing to out-of-towners about its appearance.

"Some friends from France came to visit us and wanted to see what a typical American town looked like," Dormitzer said. "As we walked around the village, I found myself apologizing for Cohasset.

"It used to be so attractive."

A little blurb about a meeting of the downtown merchants brought Dormitzer out to listen to what was happening. When the meeting was over, she told organizer Philip Smith that she would like to help out.

Smith told her that another woman also had expressed interest, and he brought Dormitzer and Christoffel together.

The two went to work getting input from as many merchants and townspeople as possible.

From the letters and phone calls that have come in over the past two weeks, they've discovered widespread support for a spring make over.

Participants in the grassroots project hope that a spiffed-up downtown will lure shoppers back.

"We're not in ruins," Smith said, "but the village looks a little seedy and needs to be taken care of."

According to Dormitzer and Christoffel, many of the suggestions are things that are easily done. Many people have placed high priority on sweeping up the streets and sidewalks, replacing tattered awnings and repainting peeling storefronts.

Jane White, owner of the needlepoint store, told Dormitzer that she could organize a group that would be willing to clean up and landscape the walkway between the Texaco and Cards and Shards.

The Community Volunteer Service at the high school is going to spend some time over spring break cleaning up the vacant lot near Tedeschi's.

John Hartshorne, a member of the "Old Goats Club" and talented carpenter, volunteered to make a community bulletin board for the downtown area.

The historical society has expressed a strong interest in turning vacant storefronts into display cases for the society's collection of Cohasset memorabilia.

Philip Smith said other museum groups — the Maritime Museum, the Lothrop House and the South Shore Art Center are interested in making Cohasset the sort of place where local people will stop, stroll, shop and have a meal.

The garden clubs have attended the meetings and have volunteered their expertise in beautifying the harbor and village area.

Smith is hopeful that the lot the teens clean up can be turned into a pocket park for shoppers to enjoy at least on a temporary basis.

Much of the work will have to be a do-it-yourself project along the lines of the community playground.

"There's no [public] money around," Smith said. "The private sector is where it has to happen. I don't think that's a bad thing."

Smith hopes that when the community invests it hard work in making Cohasset sparkle, it will feel a pride of ownership that won't allow things to fall into disrepair again.

"I've always called Cohasset a little jewel," Smith said. "We feel the town is exceptional—we want to build upon what we have."

Unfortunately, Cohasset may well be a hidden jewel.

One suggestion is to create an attractive sign for Route 3A pointing the way to the village and advertising the treasures to be found off the beaten path.

Smith, Dormitzer and Christoffel hope the reputation of the Chart House restaurants will draw people into the town — and they hope the spring cleaning and fix-up will encourage them to stop and shop in the village.

By taking advantage of the natural beauty of the seaside community, capitalizing on the charm of the common with its historic buildings and newly refurbished pond and advertising the unique shops with the personalized attention they can give shoppers, renaissance supporters hope to lure business back to the village.

Dormitzer and Christoffel still are looking for good ideas and committed volunteers. People can reach them by calling 383-9595 or 383-6929. Also, a suggestion box has been installed at Smith Place or you may send letters to:

Jack Golden goes on to his next challenge

By Alison Cohen
Mariner staff

Jack Golden prides himself on never pussyfooting around, especially when the stakes are high.

"I'm no wallflower when it comes to expressing myself," Golden said. "If there's something going down, I'm either for it or against it— especially when it affects my community or the state.

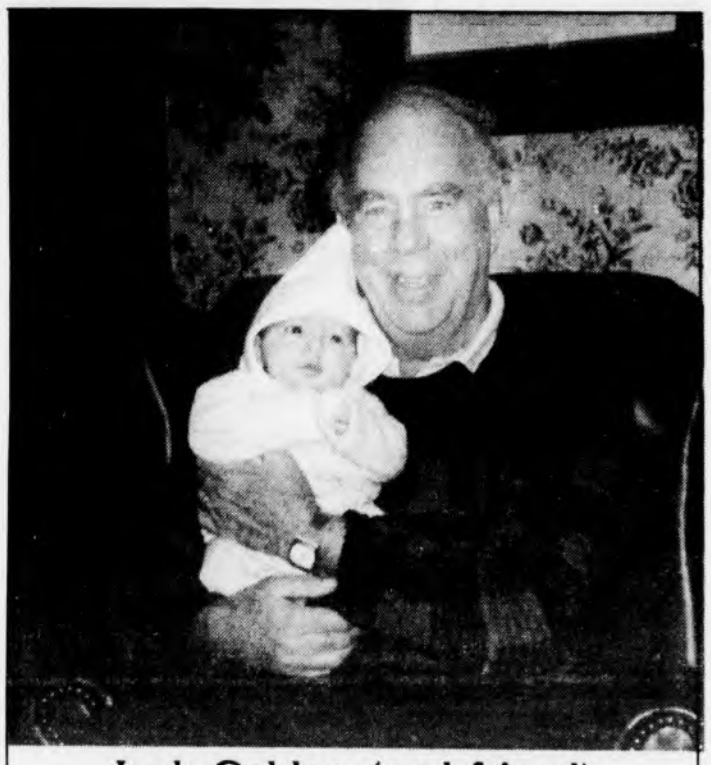
"I'm going to get involved," he said emphatically. "I don't get concerned about the fallout. That goes with the turf."

Golden said he has been involved with approximately 35 civic or community organizations or committees throughout his life, most dealing with helping people.

One constant has been his work on drug and alcohol abuse, most recently as chairman of Cohasset's drug and alcohol abuse committee.

The committee began meeting in late September. Their findings and recommendations to the selectmen are expected in a week to ten days. Golden has already submitted a letter of resignation, effective after the report has been issued.

In his letter, Golden said he thought that it was time for him to return to his former involvements and make way for new blood in what he hopes will become a permanent part of Cohasset's local government.



Golden singled out police Chief Joseph Kealey, Priscilla Tebbetts and Wigmore Pierson for special thanks for their assistance in his work as chairman.

"I think the committee has done an outstanding job," he said. "The town will be much richer for what the committee has done."

Golden believes that some of the information that came out of the committee's sessions surprised Cohasset citizens who thought things were copacetic in town.

"There isn't a community in the country that isn't suffering from this dual problem," Golden said, "but the more affluent the community, the greater denial there is."

What motivated Golden's involvement in this area is his knowledge of "numerous cases where drugs and alcohol have destroyed not only the user but the whole family."

Jack Golden (and friend)

Community education on the dangers of substance abuse is important to Golden, but it's not the whole story. Listening to him reminisce about his activities, one comes to the conclusion that he has often acted as a one-man crisis intervention team.

In fact, his first encounter with drug abuse was the beginning of his active involvement.

He recalls that he was on his way to a Boston restaurant with a group of friends when he came upon a man in obvious physical distress.

"I thought he was having an epileptic seizure," Golden said. When the ambulance e service responded to the call, the attendants told him the man was "falling apart for a fix."

The incident was the topic of conversation all night long, and Golden will never forget seeing someone who was dying to get high.

There is no reason for anyone to stay in the clutches of drug and alcohol dependency, according to Golden.

"There's help for them. All they have to do is call a facility or call someone who is active in the field."

If Golden could send one message to users, it would be to rediscover the wonders of sobriety.

"For recovering addicts, the theme is the same in all instances. The thrill, the euphoric feeling of being clean. It's like there's a whole new meaning out there in life," he said.

Golden comes by his habit of getting involved from his parents. They were active in hospital charitable work and local politics.

"I think my upbringing taught me that you can't just take from life. You must give something back," he said.

He also remembers growing up in a time when Sunday afternoons were spent in the family circle and neighbors helped neighbors. Golden misses that sense of family and community solidarity.

It was out of a sense of friendship and love that you did those things," he said.

Golden remembers experiencing that sense of belonging to a community many years ago when he was new to Cohasset. His wife, Doris, went into the hospital for a serious operation. He found his doorstep chock-a-block with casseroles, cakes and cookies left by neighbors he hadn't met yet.

Politics is one of Golden's other major loves. The former printing and advertising man has worked hard on behalf of candidates ever since he was in grammar school.

"I think it's important for people to participate in government," he explained. "I never supported a candidate I didn't believe in."

Golden throws his weight behind issues as well as candidates. He has very definite ideas about how to deal with problems.

"Throwing money at a problem doesn't solve it; throwing insight at it resolves it," he said. He thinks that distinction is particularly important for Massachusetts' residents to understand given the fiscal realities the state is confronting.

How will rail affect Cohasset?

most controversial portion of the project. Nevertheless, the MBTA remains "very committed" to building all three lines.

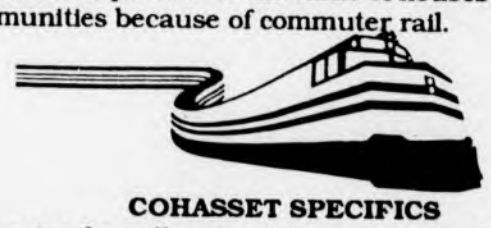
The Greenbush line will be the most difficult of the three lines to rehabilitate because there hasn't been passenger service along the line since 1959—all service was suspended in the 1970s, and in many locations the track was taken out completely and grade crossings were paved over.

ARGUMENTS IN FAVOR

Polechronis said that while the Greenbush line will the most difficult part of the project to do, the benefits to the Greenbush communities are "very real."

He said that while the area south of Boston contains the most Boston workers of any of the metropolitan areas, it is the only one not served by commuter rail.

By the year 2000, he said, the traffic congestion that typifies rush hour would expand from five hours to seven, unless commuter rail is installed.



Commuter rail, Polechronis said, means that commuters won't have to get up so early to fight traffic just to get to work on time; commuters will get to spend time with their families in the morning instead of "looking at bumper stickers."

According to the MBTA report, it will take a Cohasset commuter 49 minutes to get to Boston by rail, but 60 minutes by boat and 60 minutes by bus.

Taking commuters and their cars off the roads will have the added benefit of reducing the the air pollutants they emit. The study has projected that commuter rail overall will eliminate 2,800 tons of carbon monoxide that automobiles otherwise would spew into the air.

Currently, the air quality in metropolitan Boston and Southeastern Massachusetts does not meet national air quality guidelines, Polechronis said.

Finally, the railroad will add to the property values of the towns the train goes through. Polechronis said real estate agents in Foxborough and Needham have tacked on 10 percent to the value of houses in those communities because of commuter rail.

COHASSET SPECIFICS

The tracks will enter Cohasset at the Hingham line and run just off Route 3A to a station where the old skating rink used to be (presently Harborlight Boat Sales showroom).

To build the station, the MBTA will have to purchase the 2.81-acre parcel the boat showroom now occupies, as well as the 2.3-acre right of way from Hingham to the proposed station site, which is owned by the federal government.

The Cohasset station would include a parking lot for 300 cars (with potential for later expansion). On the other side of the tracks, a parcel once occupied by a U.S. Navy ammunition depot, will be a pick-up drop-off area.

The main access to the train platform would be via Route 3A, however some riders would access the station via the North Main Street entrance.

money. Now we're finding out that the barrel is empty."

Even though he is leaving the local drug and alcohol committee behind, Golden won't be sitting on his duff watching Bound Brook flow— or his beloved waterfall and fountains. There are new projects calling out for his involvement.

As a devoted family man and doting grandpa, he also has plenty to occupy him at home.

Golden is particularly proud of the accomplishments of his two daughters.

Karen Golden Oronte was a former international vice president for Perry Ellis Ltd. She is now the creative genius behind two lines of children's clothing— E.I.E.I.O, a designer line featured in Talbot's for Kids, and Move Over, Rover. Doris Golden sells the clothing from home at discount prices. Hours are by appointment.

His other daughter, Cari Golden, is a registered nurse who works in the field of emission controls for a national concern.

Whatever the future brings for Jack Golden, he is sure of one thing: "I'll always be involved in drug and alcohol work."

Chiropractic for Health

by Debra M. Tranberg
Chiropractor

THE FEMININE PERSPECTIVE

It is only in the relatively recent past that women have sought to treat disorders related to their menstrual cycle. Until that point, such problems as pre-menstrual cramps and tension were accepted with a sigh and pain medication. Chiropractic seeks to treat such problems as irregular cycles by addressing misalignments of the lower lumber vertibrae and/or the pelvic bone. If any of these areas have been thrown out of alignment by childbirth, jolts, or strains, it could affect the functioning of the uterus, ovaries, and / or sex glands. A misalignment of vertebrae may affect the corresponding nerve's ability to control these organs of a women's body. The chiropractor's goal is to free the nerves to exert their proper control on these important womanly functions.

With proper alignment, the nerve network. . . the communications system of the body. . . will allow for the flow of instructions from the brain, headquarters, to every organ and extremity of the body. Thus a natural process takes place allowing for improvement and well-being to ensue. Call DR. DEBRA M. TRANBERG, SCITUATE HARBOR CHIROPRACTIC, 80 Front St., Scituate, 545-7388, and DR. Last Saturday night Babson played Geneseo State in the NCAA Division 3 quarterfinal, and Babson won in overtime with the score 1-0. Yes, Dan got the goal!

Brings you back to the CHS hockey team doesn't it? How many last minute goals did he score for them?

Anyway, Dan made the Globe and the Herald sports pages on Sunday, although the Herald reported that he hailed from Scituate... That's all right, anyone who knows hockey knows where Dan hails from, and we are proud of you Dan. Watch for more action to follow....

• The wonderful weather that we had last weekend certainly felt like spring was here, and the announcement made last week sure helps to further the thought.

The South Shore Music Circus announced a partial listing of its attractions for next summer, a sure harbinger of spring!

Some of the attractions include Randy Travis, Willie Nelson, Bob Newhart, Kenny Rogers, Gallagher, Loretta Lynn and Crystal Gayle Anne Murray and Jay Leno. All signs point to a great season, get your tickets early this year!

• We sure hope that Ruth Silvia is feeling better, she has been in South Shore Hospital for a while now. A wonderful lady, kind and good, get well fast!

The Bamidele Dance Troupe was a big hit at Cohasset High School this week. (Staff photo by Chris Bernstein)

• Be sure to watch your cable channel on March 22 at 7:30 p.m. Mrs. Magnersen's class is going to be showing a quiz show that you are sure to enjoy.

There will be two panels with four students on each one. Not only will it be fun to watch the students square off, we will probably learn a thing or two.

• There is a little excitement around town this week, the Red Lion Inn has a new chef! His name is Michael Ollila, and he was the former chef at the Wellesley Country Club for seven years.

Michael trained at the Marriott and went to Northeastern University chef's school. We hear that Chef Ollila is top notch, and famous for his sauteed specialities.

The menu still will have many of the old favorites that we all go to the Red Lion for, and there will be specials available.

• Attention all of you teens...there will be a teen dance at the Cohasset Community Center March 23 from 7:30 to 10:30 pm. A deejay and light show will be featured, and admission will be $5 at the door.

• Another exciting thing that the community center is planning for this month is a Chili Cook-off! Chili lovers are invited to submit a batch of their favorite recipe to the First Annual Great American Chili Cook-off to be held Saturday, March 24 at 8 p.m. at the Center.

Everyone then is invited to sample the entries and vote for the best chili on the South Shore.

The winning chef will receive an elegant trophy plus the opportunity to participate in the Massachusetts Chili Cook-off.

Expect fierce competition and an evening filled with country fun at the unique event! To enter your recipe, please call the community center at 383-0088 and ask for Judy.

• Congratulations go to Michael and Renee Kahl at the birth of their son Edward James, born February 17. So exciting, enjoy him!

• I had a wonderful chat with Bernie Enright last week, who called me to tell me of the 1776 Quarterback Club of new England's 21st annual awards banquet that will be held Saturday, March 24, at the Hyatt Regency Hotel in Cambridge.

The reason for the call is Cohasset's winner, Paul Farren! Paul won the Gino Cappelletti Award, given to an outstanding player who came into the league without a lot of fanfare, but has proven to be extremely valuable.

The nominees are chosen by all 28 member teams in the NFL, with the finalist chosen by a panel of 25 New England sportswriters.

It is the only fan-sponsored award in the National Football League Hall of Fame. The banquet will feature a tribute to Billy Sullivan, with proceeds from the event going to the Joslin Clinic's Camp for Diabetic children and the Dana Farber Cancer Institute for children.

There will be players in attendance to meet with the people and have autographs and pictures taken. Tickets for the banquet are $40 for adults, $10 for children 12 or under. The affair is black tie optional.

Discount tux rentals are available through Mr. Tux. You may spend the night at the Hyatt Regency and they are offering a special discount for those attending.

It sure sounds like a gala event, and we should be proud of Paul for his achievement in winning this award!

It would be fun for him to see tables of Cohasset people there to help honor him! To purchase tickets or for more information call QB Club Vice President Paul Florentine at 617-325-9880 or QB President Linda Clancy at 508-883-3205. Enjoy a wonderful roast beef dinner, and meet your favorite players!

•That's the news for this week, please remember to give me a call with your latest event!

ConCom may adopt new regs...

involveing a structure encroach within 100 feet of a wetland area that could be adversely affected, and projects that don't involve a structure would have to stay 50 feet away.

Selectman Burt Pratt argued that there is very little room left in Cohasset for any major construction, and that Cohasset is unique because a large percentage of residents live near wetlands.

He urged the commissioners to "proceed with caution...Take care not to over-regulate."

Commissioner Tom Callahan, who helped write the regulations, said they will help the commissioners provide consistent rulings.

Robert Booth Jr. of 30 Joy Place told the commissioners he is "distressed by the greatly increasing costs," and noted a number of technical changes that concerned him.

Waal argued that the conservation commission spent a long time drafting the regulations so that developers could be better prepared when they go before the commission, and he likened the regulations to those of the zoning board.

Michael Bliss, a former member of the health board, questioned whether the new regulations would require a resident to go before the commission every time he wants to chop down a tree near the wetlands.

Waal said the commission would have to take each project on a case-by-case basis, and that in some instances, a resident may have to file a notice of intent for such a project.

Waal recalled a case where a resident living near Lily Pond, the town's drinking warter supply, eliminated a number of trees to get a better view of the pond, then used fertilizer to improve his lawn, creating an adverse effect on the pond.

"If you have a question about something, call and talk to us," Waal said.

Raymond Hanian of 22 Little Harbor Road, a member of the citizens group that sent the letter, asked the commission to defer accepting the regulations until citizens get a chance to have input.

Waal said residents have had plenty of chances to have input because the commission has been working on the regulations since last fall.

Emmett Holt III of 63 Highland Ave. said if the comission wants the support of the residents, it should bring the regulations back before town meeting, at least to explain them.

Callahan said the commission's proposed regulations are numbered in accordance with the state regulations, and invited residents to read through both and compare. He also suggested that anyone who is concerned about the regulations attend a regular meeting of the conservation commission.

Selectmen call for override...

much of the free cash, especially in light of the heavy number of tax abatement requests.

"This could just disappear in no time at all," Gallagher warned.

If town voters approve, the long-term debt exclusions would have no impact on the fiscal 1991 tax rate. Debt payments would begin in the following year, the length of the debt repayment would vary with the individual loans.

Selectmen approved the following items for debt exclusion or capital outlay:

• $480,000 to cap and close the old landfill which has been replaced by the recycling transfer facility.

• $110,000 to begin construction on Pleasant Lane Cemetery and a small expansion of the Beechwood Cemetery.

• $396,000 for renovation work at the police and fire station.

• $1.9 million for 37 acres of land around Lily Pond. Acquiring the land is essential to protect the safety of town's water supply.

Loan payments would come from water revenues, so the acquisition has no effect on the tax rate.

• $65,000 to fix the septic system, repair the heating system and replace the unsanitary and ancient bathroom facilities at Osgood School.

The two capital outlay requests will add approximately 11 cents to the tax rate for one year only. Selectmen approved the following capital outlays:

• $44,850 for replacing the wire department truck and purchasing an all-purpose lawn maintenance vehicle for the tree and parks department. Currently, the department borrows a lawn maintenance vehicle from Scituate when it is available.

• $70,000 to replace the town's five-year-old-ambulance.

Town meeting opens April 7. Although the budget will be discussed at that time, no votes will be taken on money articles until after the election to be held April 14.

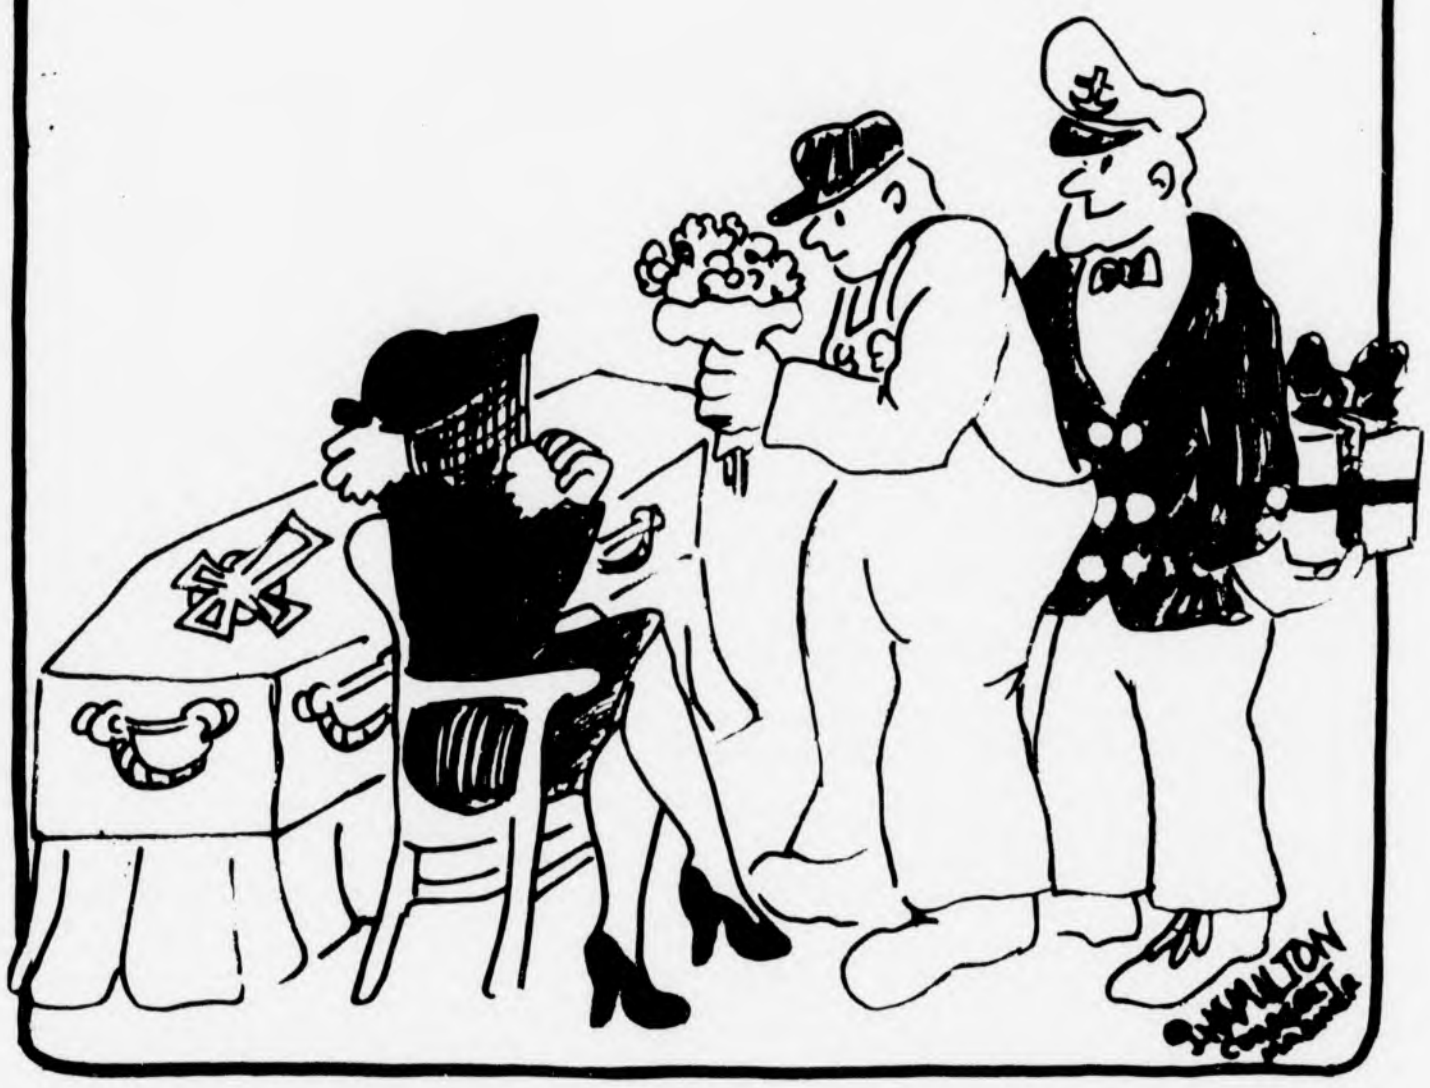
An invitation

This week, the conservation commission learned a difficult lesson in public relations.

The commissioners have worked hard for several months to draft new regulations they thought would help make things easier on developers by spelling out their requirements.

Instead, their newly proposed regulations were assailed by residents concerned that they will have to go before the commission if they want to mow their lawns, which happen to lie withing 100 feet of wetlands.

The commissioners tried to get the point across Tuesday that their new regulations add little to the existing state regulations, except that they are more specific where the state regs are vague.



They suggested that any resident who is concerned about the newly proposed regulations should sit down with state regs and proposed town regs—all 164 pages—and go through them looking for the differences.

They also suggested that residents should attend their meetings to find out what they are up to.

These are reasonable requests, but not very realistic ones; most people won't go to that trouble. Instead, people will ingnore the regulations (hoping, perhaps, that they will go away), and then they may get into trouble.

There is another way the conservation commission could help the public it serves; it could use the pages of the Cohasset Mariner to explain its new regulations to the people. We have welcomed commentaries from recycling groups and many other organizations that serve the public good, and we would welcome any submittal from the conservation commission.

Selectmen and harbor committee can finally agree on one harbor bylaw amendment to be voted on at the April town meeting: a highly coveted mooring can pass to a deceased mooring holder's spouse. Currently, only an individual can hold a mooring and there is no right of inheritance.

Shirley Kehoe is sorry to see Golden step down

Letters

To the Editor:

I was so sorry to see Jack Golden's letter of resignation. He was a great asset to the Cohasset Drug and Alcohol Abuse Committee. He will be truly missed.

He was so truthful when he termed "the inherent conspiracy of denial" in Cohasset. We do have a problem.

There is no need to try to hide your son or daughter's problem. It is better to admit it and get them the help they need. My daughter, Brenda, was up to an ounce of cocaine a day before I found out.

Because of Sgt. Brian Noonan's help my daughter has a second chance at life which many others don't have.

When Jack got involved in the drug committee I believe I was one of those many phone calls he received. He always had the time to listen to my many problems and encourage me.

Brenda was in detox at this time and waiting to get into a half-way house or rehabilitation center. Jack was pulling lots of strings for us and trying to get her in a few places but she chose her own.

I think Jack knows everybody in the world whether it be doctor, lawyer, clergyman, sheriff, judge and I wouldn't doubt that he might even know the President of the United States.

He helped me in so many ways. Sometimes he laughed with me, joked with me and even cried with me. He always put his arm on my shoulder to comfort me and tell me to hang in there. He really thought I had lots of guts but deep down there was more hurt than anyone could imagine.

He came to my home the day before Brenda was leaving for a long-term residential program for substance abusers and brought her a book to take with her and also talked to her for about an hour.

He took this time to show he cared and assured her that she was not a bad person for getting involved with drugs. She had been a cheerleader all through high school and an honor student.

She also had been on the Dean's List in college. I am happy to say that she has been drug free for eight months now and is doing very well in her program.

She even goes out to speak in high schools up in the area where she lives. She has also set a lot of goals and plans to go back to college in September.,

My son and I have appeared on the Geraldo Rivera show about our problem with drugs in our family, therefore we have never hidden it.

We also are not proud of it either.

If I can just help one person to do something about their drug problem then I feel as though I've accomplished something. Drug addiction is more than a habit, it is a destructive and lonely life that drains capable men and women of their ability to function and will to live.

I found this out when my daughter tried to take her own life. People use drugs to escape from painful problems and end up losing because of addiction. Let's beat this problem and help Jack out with what he worked so hard to accomplish and the help he gave to so many.

We love you and thank you for being there when we most needed it. Good luck in what you now pursue and we'll always be thinking of you. God bless.

Sincerely,
Shirley Kehoe & Family

Parnell says leash law is a good idea

To the Editor:

I believe that all communities should see the truth of how important it is to have a leash law.

This proposal should become a law, so what happened to me won't happen to someone else.

As a nanpy, I took five children from the ages 3- to 9-years-old and our dog on a walk to Black Rock Beach. While at the beach, a Golden Retriever, who was unleashed, came after our small dog.

I tried my hardest to pull the Golden Retriever away, but he would just pull me until I had to let go of his collar. Finally, we got the dog to stop, but our dog was on the ground not moving. Now, I needed to get help.

We were lucky that the other dog did not bite one of us or hurt our dog badly. It did give us all a scare and made us very frightened to go on another walk and take our dog.

A leash law would help protect people like us who want to go on walks without being afraid of dogs attacking us or our dog.

PSO thanks phone-a-thon contributor

To the Editor:

The fundraising committee of the Cohasset PSO would like to thank the parents who participated in the annual phone-a-thon.

Volunteers phoned every parent in the school system, asking for a pledge for a donation to thePSO. This money is used to fund the many enriching programs the PSO brings to the schools.

Parents will receive a letter from the PSO together with a return envelope for their check. If you were not contacted and would like to make a donation, you may send your check to Cohasset PSO, Box 30, Cohasset, Ma. 02025. (Contributions are tax deductible).

How will Greenbush line affect Cohasset?

To improve traffic flow at the station, the MBTA would provide a left turning lane and a right deceleration lane on Route 3A at the station driveway.

The MBTA also will push current plans by the town and the Massachusetts Department of Public Works to upgrade the intersection of King Street and Route 3A.

Cohasset purchased much of the rest of the right of way (from the station site toward Scituate) in 1982 from Penn Central, and uses it for open space. The MBTA said it could acquire the land either through a negotiated sale or by a special act of the state legislature.

In the vicinity of Sohier Street, the MBTA plans to run a mile-long passing rail in addition to the single line that will run from one end of town to the other.

Access to the railroad right of way will be fenced off to vehicular and pedestrian traffic with 6-foot high chain-link fences in this area and along much of the railway corridor.

In Cohasset Village, the track will cross Smith Place and Pleasant Street. The MBTA report notes that the railroad right of way currently is used for parking.

Polechronis said the authority intends to replace the 45-space parking on the right of way with a lot between Smith Place and Pleasant Street for 60 cars.

Fences also will be erected along the tracks in Cohasset Village to keep motorists and pedestrians out of the right of way.

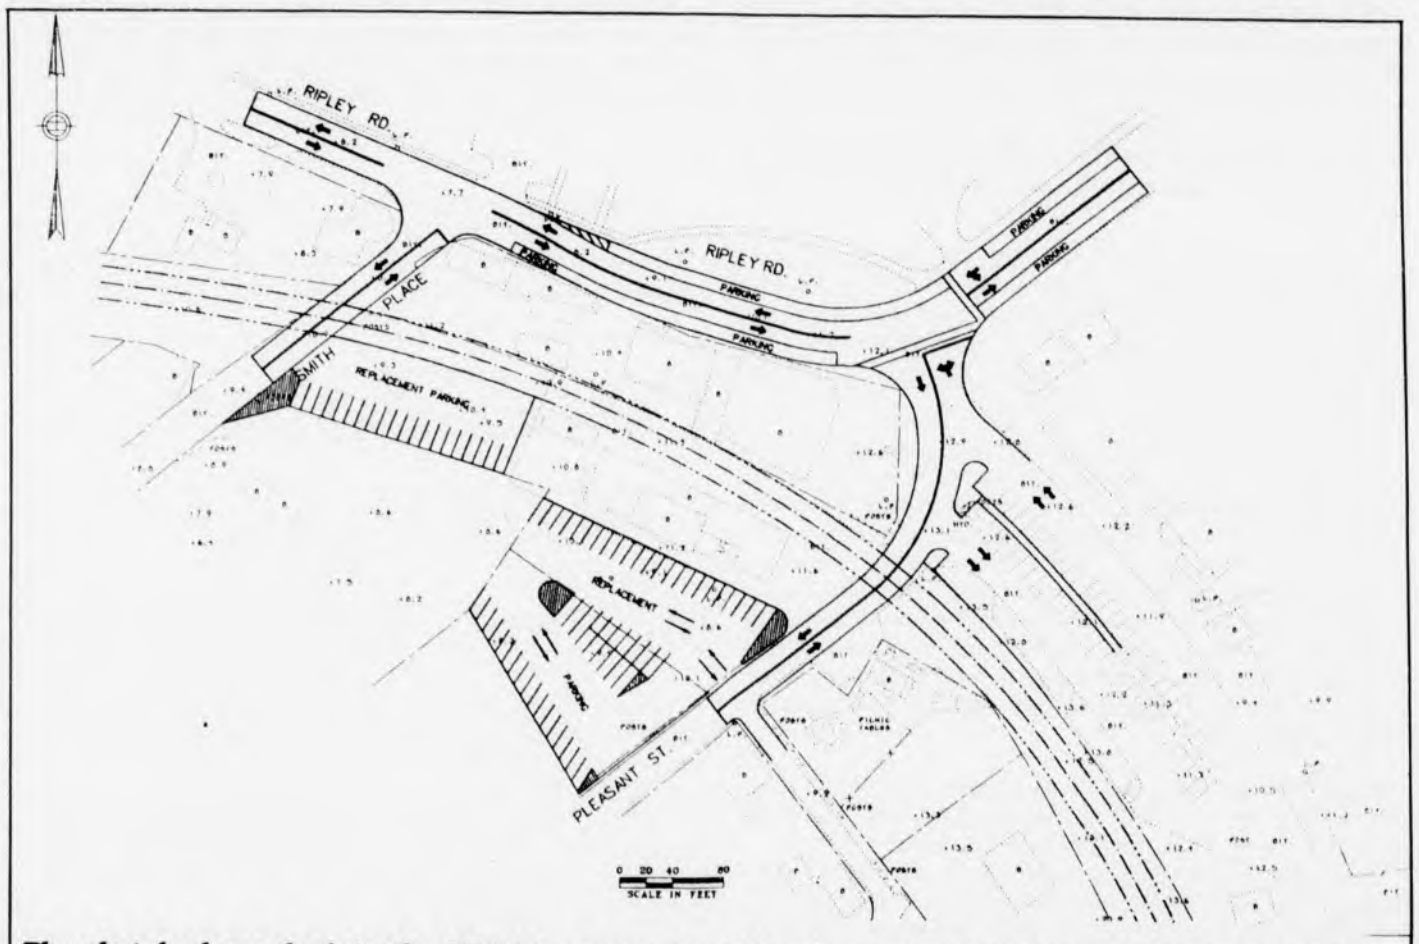
There are 12 grade crossings in Cohasset, eight of them public and four of them private.

The public crossings are at North Main Street, King Street, Sohier Street, Smith Place, Pleasant Street, Spring Street in two locations, and Beechwood Street.

The four private crossings include Rosano Lane, Sestito Lane, Castle Road and Lincoln Lane.

The public crossings will be outfitted with automatic gates with flashing lights and bells. The private crossings will have signs posted.

In Cohasset, as elsewhere, there would be a 90-second gate closure per crossing and a maximum of three crossings during a peak hour.



Polechronis said the commuter rail will run 12 round trips each weekday, and four or five weekend trips. During rush hour, trains will run each half-hour on the half-hour.

At non-peak times, the train will run every hour-and-a-half or two hours. The trains will run at 10:30 or 11 p.m. at the latest and 6 or 6:30 a.m. at the earliest.

The only time when there might be a considerable traffic tie-up because of a passing train would be when a train goes through the Sohier Street crossing at the same time a South Shore Music Circus show gets out.

"On such occasions, a gate closure during a music circus discharge interval will operate as usual to stop vehicles in both directions for up to 90 seconds.

"Exiting music circus traffic heading for Ripley Road will be delayed, but traffic directed toward Route 3A will exit normally. Police details controlling traffic at the music circus exit can ensure an orderly resumption of flow once the gates are lifted," the report said.

The sketch above depicts the MBTA's proposed parking lot at Smith Place and Pleasant Street.

NOISE AND VIBRATION

According to the MBTA report, 40 houses will be affected by noise from passing trains, and eight of those would experience 65 decibels— 10 more decibels than from existing traffic noise.

With regard to vibration, 36 houses will be affected. The MBTA intends to reduce the impact from vibration through "increased depth of ballast and the use of resilient rail fastening system."

Polechronis explained that the tracks won't be fastened together at such close intervals as in the past, so there will be less "clackity clack."

OTHER IDEAS

Debbie Cook, who was chosen by selectmen to serve on the citizens advisory committee, has been looking over the MBTA's plans for the past three or four years.

The state secretary for environmental affairs called for the creation of the citizens advisory committee to make sure all environmental impacts are addressed.

"We weren't asked to take a stand pro or con," she explained. "Of course, everyone on the committee has opinions. We decided as a committee to come up with a general statement of concurrence. What we feel is that the MBTA has adequately addressed the environmental issues."

But Cook had a suggestion for the MBTA that goes beyond a yea or nay with regard to the environment. "The MBTA looked at a lot of options for expansion, such as an enlarged bus system and the extension of various lines in different combinations, as well as a whole package of three lines.

"The station, which is not in the village, would include a parking lot for 300 cars, with provisions to expand to hold 500 cars as needed," she said.

"Another option should be explored. Develop the other two lines (Plymouth and Middleboro) which already have rail (which currently accommodates only freight trains), and because of the disruption that would occur here, go with buses to carry people to the commuter boat.

"The boat should be our equivalent of the Greenbush line," Cook said. "It would be cost-effective and would benefit the environment."

She said the idea of having 12 grade crossings, eight with gates, flashing lights and bells, miles of fences through town and at least 36 houses affected by noise is just too much.

The MBTA still could provide 150 parking spaces in Cohasset, but could use it as a park-and-ride lot, she said. "It would be a lot cheaper. In Cohasset, the fare for a ride on the Greenbush line would be $3.35."

Cook noted that the Greenbush line in total is projected to attract about 3,000 riders from other modes of commuting— in addition to reducing the number of cars on Route 3 and Route 3A, some would be pulled off the bus and others would be pulled off the commuter boat.

Route 3A through Cohasset carries 30,800 trips two ways each day, while Route 3 carries 120,000 trips. Cook said she wonders whether a reduction of 3,000— even if they were all to be pulled off only the roadways— would be cost-effective.

"I'm a great supporter of mass transit," she commented. "I just want the citizens to examine the information and decide for themselves whether the cost is worth the benefits."

Cohasset recycling news . . .

The following has been provided by the Massachusetts Recycling Initiative Campaign. The Campaign needs volunteers. If you would like to help call the Campaign at (617) 292-4824.

Massachusetts' solid waste problems are out of control.

We produce more than 6.5 million tons of garbage in Massachusetts every year—about 2,000 pounds per resident. In recent years, that amount has grown rapidly, and it will continue to grow.

However, our traditional "burn or bury" methods of trash disposal are increasingly not viable—environmentally and economically. Our landfills are running out of room; incinerators produce toxic air pollutants and toxic ash; and the skyrocketing costs of both options have strapped already tight local government budgets.

There is general agreement that reducing the amount of garbage we throw out is the common sense answer to this growing crisis. There is also increasing agreement that we have to stem the growth in packaging—which now makes up about one-third of the waste stream by weight.

However, our recycling efforts to date have had little impact. Only 7 percent of Massachusetts' garbage is recycled, a large part of which is a result of the Bottle Bill. The amount of packaging discarded in municipal solid waste is predicted to grow by 19 percent by the year 2000 (measured by weight). And more ways lo package even the most mundane product in imaginative and superfluous fashion are used every year.

The Recycling Initiative simply requires that, as of 1996, all packaging must either be reusable, made of at least 50 percent recycled materials, or made of recyclable materials. (Exemptions are made for certain packaging, such as tamper-proof medical packaging.) Recyclable materials are defined as those for which a statewide recycling rate of 35 percent or better has been reached by 1996 and 50 percent by 2000. Packagers would be responsible for ensuring that their packaging meets the law's standard. The state Department of Environmental Protection or citizens could enforce the law against any packager who fails to comply.

Cohasset Agrees
CARE
to Recycle Everything

The primary point of the Initiative is to use time-honored incentives to stimulate innovations in packaging and recycling systems, in much the same way that regulations have prompted development of replacements for lead in gasoline, chlorofluorocarbons in aerosol cans, and PCBs in electrical equipment.

A conservative, basic analysis of the Recycling Initiative shows that the measure would, among many things:

- At least triple current recycling rates in Massachusetts by 1996, with rates going from 7 percent today to at least 22 percent in 1996 and 32 percent in 2000.
- Extend the lifetimes of existing landfills and/or reduce the need for incinerators in Massachusetts in the 1990s, by eliminating the need to dispose of at least 2.3 million tons of solid waste between 1991 and 1995, another 4.8 million tons from 1995-1999, and 1.8 million tons per year from 2000 on.
- Significantly decrease water and air pollution in Massachusetts, by relatively decreasing the use of incinerators and landfills.
- Save millions of trees, millions of barrels of oil, and other natural resources, by reducing the need lo use virgin materials in packaging.
- Save taxpayers tens of millions of dollars through reduced solid waste disposal costs, because recycling is significantly less expensive than incineration or landfills.
- Create a significant net gain in jobs in Massachusetts, because recycling and producing packaging from recycled materials is far more labor-intensive than landfills, incineration, and making products from virgin materials.

Community Center programs

Young Childrens' Concert: Plan ahead for spring break. Rick Goldin, a musician-songwriter-storyteller, will perform a musical program for children in grades K-3 at the center on Thursday, April 19 at 11 a.m.

He focuses on brining genuine enjoyment to children as well as building their confidence and sparking their imaginations through song. Admission will be $2 at the door.

Pre-School Puppet Show: Join Pat Boylan and her puppet friends Friday, April 6 at 10:30 a.m. for a fanciful rendition of The Tortoise and the Hare and other stories. Kids participate in the show, meet the puppets and learn how to become puppeteers. Admission is $2 at the door.

A Teen Dance will be held at the community center on Friday, March 23, from 7:30 to 10:30 p.m. Grades 7-12 are welcome to attend. A deejay and light show will be featured. Admission is $5 at the door.

Gym Dandy will begin its last eight-week session on Thursday, April 12. Ages 3-12 months meet Thursday 11:45 a.m. to 12:30 p.m., ages 1-2 meet Thursday and Friday 10:15 to 11 a.m. and ages 2-3 meet Thursday 11 to 11:45 a.m. Kids learn through play on creative, tot-sized equipment.

Baby Sitting Coming To Aerobics: Starting soon, babysitting will be available during Monday, Tuesday and Friday 9 to 10 a.m. aerobics classes.

This service will open to all age groups. Low impact aerobics classes are given at the center Monday through Friday 9 to 10 a.m. Tuesday and Thursday 7 to 8:15 p.m. and Saturday 8:30 to 10:30 a.m. Sign up monthly and save.

Pediatric CPR: A two-part workshop will be held on Wednesday and Thursday, April 4 and 5 from 7 to 11 p.m. It covers the hazards to which children are exposed, rescue techniques, and CPR for infants and children. An American Heart Association certificate is awarded upon completion.

Contract Bridge with David Leopold begins its final eight-week session on Monday, April 2 from 8 to 10 p.m. Learn from a life master and leading tournament player. Beginners and Intermediates are welcome.

McNabb announces

John K. McNabb, Jr. of 53 Pond Street recently announced his candidacy for a three-year term on the board of health.

McNabb has an extensive background in environmental policy and regulation in both the private and public sector. At present, he is president and founder of McNabb Associates, an environmental policy consulting firm.

McNabb has been active in local politics— he served on the library board of trustees, the committee to survey the structure and functions of town government and was an unsuccessful candidate for selectman in 1986.

If elected, McNabb promises to work for strong environmental protection for Cohasset.

A graduate of Cohasset High School and Bowdoin College, he is currently pursuing a Master in Business Administration degree part-time at the University of Massachusetts at Boston.

John K. McNabb Jr.

Recreation Notes . . .

Last ski trip is March 25

The final ski trip of the season for the Cohasset Recreation Department will be to Mount Snow, Vt, Sunday, March 25.

The cost of this trip is $44 per person,and includes round-trip motor coach transportation and an all day/ mountain lift ticket.

Due to commitment deadlines, immediate registration will be essential, and you may call the Cohasset Recreation Department office at: 383-6791, for registration or further details as soon as possible.

The bus will leave town hall at 5:15 a.m. Sunday, March 25, returning at about 7:45 p.m. Mr. and Mrs. Earle Bestick will chaperone this trip and should be thanked for their efforts all season long, chaperoning ski trips as well as Blue Hills ski lessons. Their time, effort as well as expertise and dedication have made possible ski trips that have been delivered without flaw, to about 200 youths this season alone.

Should you need to rent equipment or take ski lessons for this trip; rentals are $18 and lessons are $14 per person, at Mount Snow, and you should pay cash for these the day of the trip. However, should you need either, please indicate so at the time of registration. Checks for fee payment should be made payable to: Town of Cohasset.

Those interested should call as soon as possible, but prior to 4 p.m. Saturday, March 17.

Low-impact aerobics

The Cohasset Recreation Department is offering fall sessions of Low-Impact, Aerobic Exercise classes, taught by Margret Watson, Tuesday and Thursday Evenings, from 6:15 to 7:15 p.m., Cohasset Town Hall auditorium.

Sessions are conducted in eight week cycles, costing $40, for two weekly classes, for an eight week period, i.e.: 16 classes is $40. However, you may join at any time, at any class, and the fee willl be pro-rated based upon the number of classes per week you would like to take, and the number of weeks left in the session.

Checks should be made payable to: Town of Cohasset, and sessions continue on a year 'round basis. Classes are structured in order that all levels of proficiency may participate comfortably.

Watson is a well known and accomplished area exercise instructor, and has taught for the recreation department for the past decade. The program is open to both residents and non-residents of all ages, men and women, however, early registration is advised; due to the popularity of the program, classes tend to fill quickly.

Should you require further details, please call the Cohasset Recreation Department office at: 383-6791, otherwise, you may register at any class.

Learn to refinish furniture

The Cohasset Recreation Department will accept telephone registrations for a furniture restoration-refinishing-revitalization-cane/rush, etc. to be taught by Kenneth Sargent of Cohasset Country Workshop, by calling the recreation office at 383-6791.

Sessions are four weeks in duration, meeting on Wednesday mornings from 9 to 11 a.m. at Cohasset Town Hall, and the per capita fee for the eight hour program is $40 per person, and classes are restricted in size to allow for individual attention.

Non-Cohasset residents will be accpeted for enrollment upon a space-available basis, and the next session is scheduled to begin Wednesday, March 28, however early registration is advised as classes fill quickly.

Daffodil Days March 20-21

Cohasset will be one of nine South Shore towns that will greet spring with "a host of golden daffodils," sharing in some 124,000 of the colorful blooms that have been ordered for the American Cancer Society's Daffodil Days here on March 20 and 21.

In businesses, banks, professional offices, hospitals and schools, the bright yellow blossoms will bring cheer to all who see them while bringing funds and hope to cancer patients served by volunteers of the South Shore Unit of the Cancer Society.

Pauline Sweeney, of Quincy, co-chair of the local effort, reports a record-breaking 248 boxes of the flowers ordered in advance.

"This means that we will be flying in at least 124,000 daffodils from the West Coast," Mrs. Sweeney says. "This is the largest order yet placed by South Shore towns and we understand that it is the largest for any Society unit in the State."

Communities involved in Daffodil Days locally are Braintree, Cohasset, Hingham, Hull, Milton, Norwell, Quincy, Scituate and Weymouth.

The daffodils are field grown and flown in from the West Coast, arriving at the Cancer Society office in Stoughton early on the morning of March 20.

Volunteers from each of the towns pick up the orders for their towns and deliver them to the purchasers. The flowers are in a tight bud stage, but will burst into bloom within 5 or 6 hours when placed in water.

A new "Odd Couple"

The Cohasset Dramatic Club is putting on Neil Simon's female version of "The Odd Couple" March 31, April 1, 6, 7.

Call 383-2768 for tickets, 383-2366 for information. $8; seniors $6. 8 p.m. curtain (7 p.m. on April 1).

The play is directed by Joe Doniger and stars Sally Rossi, Bonnie Haley, Don Massa, Ed Byrnes, Angi Walsh, Winnie Grazier-Kuhn, Lisa Fichtner and Gayl Varallo.

You will meet Trivial Pursuit players, their friends Olive (the slob) and Florence (the neatnik), and the suave Manolo and Jesus (the guys upstairs) in a hilarious evening of Neil Simon comedy.

The play will be staged at the intimate cabaret theatre at the CDC Clubhouse, overlooking town parking in Cohasset Village. Refreshments will be served.

Amateur gardeners to meet

The Amateur Gardeners of Cohasset will meet Tuesday, March 20, at 1 p.m. at the home of Alicia Seavy for a Mad Hatter's Party.

Kay Talarico will be co-hostess.

Girl Scouts selling cookies

The Cohasset Girl Scouts will sell Girl Scout cookies at the Cohasset Super Stop & Shop Friday, March 16 from 4 to 8 p.m. and again Saturday March 17 from 1 to 5 p.m.

Cookies come in seven varieties and cost $2.50 a box. Proceeds of the sale benefit the Patriots' Trail Girl Scout Council programs and camps and various troop activities.

Earthy concert April 1

The Earth Day Committee will sponsor comedian Evi Seidman and singer Barbara Herson in concert Sunday, April 1, at the First Parish Meeting House on the Common at 4 p.m.

Billed as a "Stand-up Environmentalist," Seidman has been performing for 10 years by using humor, satire, "rapping" and various theater arts to entertain while promoting a concept of planetary stewardship.

Herson developed EARTHTUNES in 1979, a unique combination of music and environmental education.

The 90-minute performance is free to the public, sponsored by the Earth Day Committee.

Antique-houses lecture set

The Cohasset Historical Society will present a special evening program Thursday, March 29, at the Unitarian Parish House hall.

The subject of the presentation will relate to repairing or altering and care of antique houses.

The speaker for the evening will be John Cole, preservation specialist, consultant to the Society For the Preservation of New England Antiquities and to local Historical Commissions and lecturer at the Harvard Graduate School of Design.

Cohasset is rich in its architectural heritage, having more than 50 homes constructed between the years 1695 and 1750. There are many more dating from the latter 18th and early 19th centuries. Many rank among the finest on the South Shore, and represent an historical asset to be carefully preserved.

Cole, who conducted a walking tour of the town common area for the society two years ago, is an authority on the "Care and Feeding of Your Early New England Home."

The March 29 evening program will begin at 7:30 p.m., with strawberry shortcake and coffee or tea preceding the talk. Admission to the event will be $5 for historical society members, $6 for non-members. Reservations may be mailed to the society at 14 Summer Street, Cohasset, MA 02025. Advance payment is a must for both members and non-members.

What's on Channel 53?

Thursday, March 15, 5:30 p.m. Children's Corner. Bob Detwiler reads children's books. Featured this week will be Emily and the Elf, Emily and the Mermaid and The Mare on the Hill.

Tuesday, March 20, 8:30 p.m. Bob Detwiler's Journal will feature librarians Richard Hayes of Cohasset and Diane Kadanoff of Norwell discussing their respective libraries. Topics covered will be funding, library use, effects of Prop. 2 1/2, community support etc.

Morning of meditation

Quiet Day is a morning of meditation and prayer on Saturday, March 31 from 9 a.m. to noon. It is a time to reflect on the meaning of the approach of Holy Week and where our Lenten "journey" has taken us. March 31 is the day on which we celebrate the poet and priest, John Donne. His poetry and centering prayer will add to the focus of this day which will be led by the rector and Shuma Chakravarty.

The Episcopal City Mission will sponsor a conference on economic justice through investments on Saturday, March 24 from 9 a.m. to 4:15 p.m. at St. Peter's Episcopal Church, 320 Boston Post Road in Weston.

The keynote speaker will be the Rt. Rev. Barbara C. Harris. Presentations will outline the legal and financial issues in regard to community investments. Workshops will highlight forms of community investment — cooperative housing, land trusts, community development credit unions, and employee-owned businesses.

More information about the conference, a copy of the conference schedule, and a registration form can be obtained through the Episcopal City Mission Office; 138 Tremont St., Boston, MA 02111 — 482-5800.

Year-round food drive

The board of Deacons of the Second Congregational Church will begin a year-round food drive to be focused on the first Sunday of every month (Communion Sunday).

You may bring food at any time during the month and place it in the collection box at the entrance way.

It then will be delivered to a pantry on the Monday following each first Sunday. Perhaps an offering of "a-can (or box)-a-Sunday" could be included in our pledge to the Kingdom!

INTERNATIONAL FAMILY

The Youth Exchange Service is looking for Christian families to host foreign exchange students.

"YES" is searching for families who are interested in sharing their love and understanding.

YES' students are 15-to 18-years-old and are scheduled to arrive in July for the 1990/91 high school year.

Each student is carefuly screened, brings his/her own spending money, and is fully covered by insurance.

For information about becoming a host family, please contact: Youth Exchange Service, 4675 MacArthur Court; Suite 830-C; Newport Beach, CA 92660; or call: 1-800-848-2121, ext. 33.

Authority of scripture

First Communion class will meet for three more Wednesdays at 4 p.m., March 21, 28 and April 4. This class is for children in grades one through three and is designed to give them a greater appreciation of Holy Communion. Each session lasts approximately one-half hour.

Poetry and spirituality is an informal gathering once a month where connections between poetry, spirituality, ourselves and God are drawn. This month's session will take place Wednesday, March 21, at 3:30 p.m. All are invited. Bring a favorite poem.

Evening prayer will be led by parishioners every Wednesday during Lent from 7:30 to 8 p.m. in the chapel. This worship is part of St. Stephen's prayer in the spirituality of the Episcopal Church. The service is found on page 115 of the Prayer Book.

St. Anthony's services

Sunday masses are held at 8 a.m., 9:30 a.m. and 11:30 a.m. Saturday masses are held at 5 p.m.

The daily mass is at 7 a.m. and on Saturday at 8 a.m. followed by Novena and Rosary

The Sacrament of Reconciliation is Saturday from 4:15 to 4:45 p.m.

During Lent mass will be held every Wednesday at 5 p.m.

The Way of the Cross, benediction will be held on Fridays at 7 p.m.

Religious Education

High school girls and boys are invited to spend a day with the Rev. Don Kimball March 24 at Boston College High School.

The whole day will be conducted by the Rev. Kimball and will include prayer, social/dance, conference sessions, and Sunday liturgy.

The Rev. Kimball is a nationally known D.J. and conference leader. If interested, please contact Lillian Sestito at 545-9808 or Alice McCarthy at 383-1691.

Adults who have not received the Sacrament of Confirmation are asked to contact the priests of the parish. They will be happy to assist you.

Would you like to read at mass? Students, from Grades 4, 5, 6, junior and senior high school, and college are most welcome. For information, please call Gail Collins at 383-9789.

Saint Patrick's Day Brunch

A St. Patrick's Day brunch will be held Sunday, March 18 at 2:30 p.m. at Kimball's. Tickets, at $12.50 a person, will be sold after masses. For information, call Barbara Donahue at 383-0132.

Choir Rehearsals for Holy Week and Easter will begin Thursday, March 15 at 7:30 p.m. New members are most welcome!

First Parish news

Canvass Sunday will be March 25. Soon you will receive more information but be thinking about how you support your church.

Annual operating expenses must be supported by gifts and pledges. Consider your contribution as part of your cost of living in our shared home for worship, service and fellowship.

(This year we will not conflict with the Cohasset Rotary Road Race on the first Sunday in April.)

The High School Youth Group has decided to put on a pancake brunch on Palm Sunday, April 8, to aid in raising funds for the white water rafting trip scheduled for May 11-13.

The next meeting of the group will be Sunday, March 18 at 7 p.m. in the Parish House living room.

Oxfam America's first annual South Shore Music Festival will be held Sunday, March 18, at 3 p.m. in Memorial Hall, Court Street, Plymouth. Tickets $6 (Children under 14, $4) on sale at the door or call 545-1701.

School news

Silber to speak March 28

Dr. John Silber, president of Boston University, will address Cohasset residents on "Education in the New Fiscal Reality" at 8 p.m. Wednesday, March 28 at the Cohasset High School auditorium.

Due to possible space constraints, entrance will be restricted to Cohasset residents from 7:30 to 7:45 p.m.

After 7:45 p.m. admission will be open to all on a space-available basis. This is a PSO sponsored education program. The PSO does not endorse any candidate for political office.

McNamara earns honors

Michael Wooding McNamara, the son of John and Susan McNamara of Fair Oaks Lane, Cohasset, MA, has earned honors for the fall semester at Skidmore College.

Group plans fund-raiser

The Community Volunteer Service, which is comprised of Cohasset High School students, is holding a fundraiser Monday, March 26, at Papa Gino's in Cohasset from 5 p.m. to closing.

Any food order take-out or eat-in is included in this fundraiser. A percentage of the cost will be awarded to the Community Volunteer Service.

Profits from this fundraiser will go towards buying supplies for Earth Day and will go toward future projects. Events that CVS has participated in are a walk-a-thon for meals on wheels donations, a Christmas wrapping party for Toys for Tots, a food and clothing drive for Wellspring, Inc., and a Valentine's Day Party for Council on Aging.

All of these events have been very successful and with the communities continuing support, the Community Volunteer Service will be able to carry out future projects. Any questions or comments can be directed to Gail Civale at Cohasset High School.

Morgan to study in France

A Cohasset resident, Anthony Morgan, son of Mr. and Mrs. William J. Morgan, is among 15 students from Choate Rosemary Hall in Wallingford, Ct. who will depart on March 26 to participate in the school's spring Term Abroad Program in France.

The students will return to the United States on May 26.

The group will divide its time between Pau and Paris; the students also will have the opportunity to travel in the Loire Valley as well as visit Cote d'Azur.

Spellers place in Metco bee

On Saturday, Feb. 7, Cohasset Metco students participated in the Metco directors association annual spelling bee contest. The spelling bee is for all Metco students grades 1-8 in all 32 Metco communities.

The Cohasset Metco students were: Kevin Andrews and Mark Selden, grade 2; Raheem Sheppard, Maurice Johnson, who was a second place winner, grade 3; Mazoe Barkon and Erik Allen, grade 4; Lashonda Johnson and Tameka Adams, grade 5; and Jared Hardwick, first place winner and Sybil Benita Johnson, second place winner, grade 6.

Stephanie Fox, Cohasset High School's artist of the month, chats with her classmates about the latest project.

Stephanie Fox is the CHS artist of the month. Her show of painting, drawing, pottery and weaving is on display in the case near the art room.

The CHS Art Club recently met for a special Haiku and watercolor painting workshop with Mrs. Wood and Ms. Lucas. Many students attended. The session began with studying Oriental Haiku, then students wrote their own Haiku. Watercolor paintings were done to compliment the poems. The art works are on display at CHS near the art room.

The following is a selection of the written work from the haiku workshop of the art club at Cohaset High School:

Forty-three percent of seniors to do independent study

Spring is on the way along with senior projects at Cohasset High School.

Committee members Lori Goldenberg, Scott Newkirk, Janice Batts, Jack Buckley, Virginia Burbank, Anne Porter, Colleen Foley, Carolyn Gray, Colleen Lucas, Mary Staunton, and Director Susan McFadd have been busy critiquing and making suggestions to the 30 senior class members who have submitted preliminary proposals.

Project ideas are varied, exciting and run the gamut from equestrian training, to painting the high school gym, to composing an original jazz composition for the high school's jazz band to perform at the spring concert.

Forty-three percent of the senior class plans to participate in this independent educational experience which will begin the day after April vacation and will run about four weeks.

Those who have submitted preliminary proposals and their project plans include:

Isabel Rainallo Alcover; assisting with religious education program and serving as a church lector.

Kerri Anglin; setting up a Math Lab at the High School to help students with their math assignments.

Jim Reidy; working as a Teacher's Aide with 6th graders at Deer Hill School.

Steffanie Fox; apprentice/intern at an artisan gallery designing jewelry.

Girls hoop team seeks return to power

By David McKee
Mariner staff

Cohasset High girls basketball coach Debbie Bostwick is seeking to return the Skippers back to their role as a power in South Shore basketball.

And she says that next year might be the year.

"Even though the program did really well in the past," she said. "I'm not focused on the past. The program is now mine and I'm looking to do the best that we can as a team. I love a challenge. And I think if we work hard, we will be in contention next year."

This year the Skippers finished with a 5-15 record in the South Shore Small League with a very young team.

They were led by their two co-captains, sophomore point guard Tonya Petersen and junior center Maureen Long.

Petersen led the team in scoring with a 10.5, was voted team MVP.

"She had an all-star caliber season," Bostwick said. "But they usually don't vote in sophomores."

Long, was one the team's leading rebounders and had to face many taller centers throughout the season.

"She always scrapped for rebounds and worked real hard," Bostwick said. "We had the smallest team in the league so she really had her hands full down low."

Other key contributers to the Clipper season were junior forward Kay Long, Maureen's twin sister, junior guard Bridget Leung, sophomore center/forward Kathleen Conroy and seventh grade guard Erin Murphy.

The Clippers also got some help from the JVs towards the end of the season.

Sophomore forward Sara Douglas, seventh grade guard and freshman center Renee Prisbell all played solidly in the last few games.

"The young kids held us together at the end," she said. "The were intimidated at first but they got used to the play and got some good experience."

Bostwick labelled this year a fine season.

"Our goal at the beginning of the season was to finish at .500," Bostwick said. "We missed our goal, but the kids really hung in there and always gave it 110 percent. The kids did a great job and we have everyone coming back."

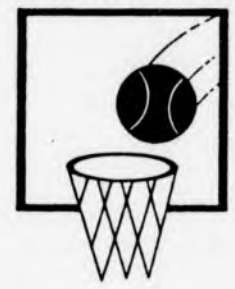
Bostwick had some adversity to deal with during her first year at helm.

Five players were suspended for a violation of school rules and missed the last part of the season.

Also some opposing teams ran up the score against the Clippers.

"The girls learned a valuable lesson," Bostwick said of the suspensions. "They made a mistake and had to pay the price, but they all will be back with a positive attitude."

As for opposing teams running up the scores against the Clippers, Bostwick said, "I guess we were paying for things that happened before, but I didn't let that bother me. I told the girls that there will come a time when those teams will be young and inexperienced, like we were this year. And at that time, we will exhibit more class in winning than they did."



A key to successfully turning around the program, according to Bostwick, is playing during the spring and summer.

"Right now the girls are playing in a spring league at the Hingham Sports Center against college kids and that is good experience," she said. "The kids will be playing in the Whitman summer league and many are looking into going to camps."

Bostwick is looking to have the team develop their rebounding and shooting skills.

"Being the shortest team we need to work on our positioning when we rebound," she said. "But I'm hoping Renee will develop, because we need her down low. Plus our shooting can always be improved on."

As for her team's strengths, she said, "We're young, quick and real aggressive on defense. I'm really looking forward to the coming season."

Hugo's closes...

tween April 1 and November were cancelled, Logue said he had not left any brides stranded either.

"We have spent the past two weeks placing receptions at comparable facilities," he said.

Although some sources listed the number of cancellations at 85, Logue said he had rescheduled 31 functions.

The receptions were booked into local country clubs and restaurants.

Logue himself is at loose ends. He says he has no plans at the present time, but doesn't anticipate taking any time off.

"I'll probably go to work for some other restaurant," he said.

Cohasset ski team places fourth in league

This past winter, unknown to many, the Cohasset High School ski team placed a very respectable fourth in its league of 10 teams.

The ski team is made up of a little under 30 dedicated individuals, many of whom participated in the weekly races held on Mondays.

Three students, Barth Weisenfluh, Rusty Starmer and Patrick Suhrbier finished in the top 10 out of a field of 80 racers.

These three individuals in-turn qualified for the Massachusetts High School State Skiing championships held at Berkshire East. Weisenfluh, Starmer and Suhrbier, all of whom are underclassmen, finished in the top half out of the 100 best racers in Massachusetts.

The ski team practices started in early December with three weeks of dryland training and as the season progressed the skiing practices were held at Prospect Hill in Waltham.

The team's coach, Jack Dane, was a trememdous help throughout the season and did a wonderful job coaching.

Parent coordinator Robin Suhrbier helped in organizing the team and taking care of its financial needs. She and Dane were the two most dedicated members on the team.

This year, the team's only graduating senior is Jason Cameron.

Patrick Suhrbier flies down the hill during competition in the giant slalom. At right, Rusty Starmer, Coach Jack Dane, Bart Weisenfluh and Suhrbier prepare for a lift up the mountain.

Cohasset Mariner

Vol. XII, No. 26 | Thursday, March 22, 1990 | 1-800-874-6969 | 50 cents

Selectmen seek seven overrides; voters to decide

By Alison Cohen
Mariner staff

On April 14, Cohasset voters will only be faced with seven Proposition 2-1/2 override questions following recent action by selectmen to remove a $1.9 million debt exclusion request from consideration.

Selectmen voted to remove the ballot question asking voters to bankroll the purchase of 37 acres of land to protect Lily Pond from pollution. The pond is Cohasset's reservoir.

The water commission asked for the action. They want to pay for the land acquisition from water revenues, grants and donations rather than taxes.

Purchase of the land is still subject to approval at town meeting.

Water department Superintendent Joe Hamilton told selectmen contributions from private sources would cover almost have of the first year's $228,000 price tag.

Since the first payment does not come due until the summer of 1991, Hamilton was confident that additional grant money and contributions could be raised to defray the costs.

Even in a worst case scenario, with no grants or donations, "the eventual impact on the water rates would be about 50 cents a day, approximately 30 percent increase on rates," Hamilton said.

(See page 5)

Meet your Cohasset selectman candidates

By Alison Cohen
Mariner staff

There are two openings on the board of selectmen. The term of office is three years. Incumbents Martha Gjesteby and Burtram Pratt are running for re-election along with newcomer, Jane Goedecke, former chairman of the advisory committee.

Martha Gjesteby

Background:

- Bachelor of Science degree from Simmons College in chemistry and graduate work in biochemistry from Harvard University;
- worked in biomedical research at the Sidney Farber center and Harvard Medical School ;
- civic and volunteer membership on the planning committee, school committee, capital budget committee, board of selectmen, member of the board of directors of the Cohasset Community Center, treasurer of the Metropolitan Area Planning Council, joint regional transportation committee, Massachusetts Municipal Public Works, South Shore Coalition;
- married and mother of four grown children, and grandmother of 3 1/2.

Martha Gjesteby said she is running for re-election because "I like public service." Her record of involvement suggests that "like" may be too mild a word given her long list of involvement.

Although she describes herself as a futurist, she believes her long history gives her a perspective that is invaluable as the town faces new challenges.

(See page 5)

Jane Goedecke

Background:

- Bachelor degree in political science from Wellesley College;
- worked prior to the birth of her children in publishing and sales & marketing;
- civic and volunteer membership as past-president of the Friends of the Paul Pratt Memorial Library, past-president of the Cohasset Chapter of AFS, a foreign student exchange program, member of the long range planning committee, school committee. Most recently, Goedecke spent four years on the advisory committee, 2-1/2 as chairman; and
- married with two children, Sam, 9, and Maggie, 11, enrolled in Cohasset Public Schools.

Jane Goedecke decided to run for selectman in order to put the knowledge she gained while on the advisory committee to good use.

"During my time on the advisory committee, I learned a great deal about the town and how it operated. It was a great education," she said. "I want to use it to help the town."

Goedecke believes that the selectmen can serve a vital function in a time of great financial trouble. She wants to be part of that.

The major challenge facing Cohasset is the financial situation, she said.

"We are faced with tremendous shortages of available funds at the same time there are increasing demands," Goedecke said. "We are living with the reality of shrinking services. The challenge is to maintain the character of Cohasset while reducing services."

Goedecke said it is vital that the town work to maintain the vitality of the business community.

"They provide valuable services to the townspeople and form an important part of the tax base," she said. "The selectmen must be mindful of the problems and needs of local business."

According to Goedecke, the town must also be vigilant in protecting the environment.

"Although environmental protection comes under the purview of other boards, the selectmen must be aware of environmental concerns.

Goedecke said her main contribution in helping Cohasset resolve these challenges and move forward is in her understanding of the complex nature of the problems, her ability to articulate the issues and work with all the citizens of Cohasset.

(See page 5)

Burtram Pratt

Background:

- graduate of Cohasset High School;
- retired in 1988 after a long career in printing, publishing, advertising, journalism and free lance writing;
- civic and volunteer activities include serving on the veterans' land committee, committee on town history, planning board, bicentennial committee, fence viewer, registrars of voters, board of selectmen, Cohasset Historical Society, Cohasset Rotary Club, South Shore Playhouse Associates, Inc.
- married and the father of two adult children.

Burt Pratt is running for re-election in order to continue the work he has been doing over the past three years.

"There are things in the works that I would like to see through to their conclusion," Pratt said.

The biggest challenge ahead of the town is the financial situation, he said.

"We have to pressure the state to give back the aid to run the town services people want and de-

Pratt also wants to continue to work on getting town-owned buildings "up to snuff." The police and fire station renovations are at the top of his list.

He said a percentage of the budget needs to be devoted to maintenance to protect the town's investment in buildings and equipment. He calls the neglect of town-owned property "penny-wise and pound-foolish."

"I also want to get on with low and moderate housing," Pratt said. "The state pushed hard to get the program started, but now they have no money to give us."

Despite the projects in the works, Pratt believes Cohasset is a long way from doing the job that ought to be done.

Pratt said his biggest asset for helping Cohasset is his experience and knowledge.

"I have a long history of involvement in the public and private sectors," he said.

He singled out the diversity of Cohasset's population and the willingness of citizens to volunteer their labor and knowledge to the town. Tapping that resource will be increasingly important, he

"This is a difficult time to be a public official," he said. But Pratt has been deeply involved and isn't ready to bail out yet.

Cohasset's week

Metroplan 2000 review set

The South Shore Chamber of Commerce is sponsoring a meeting to review MetroPlan 2000.

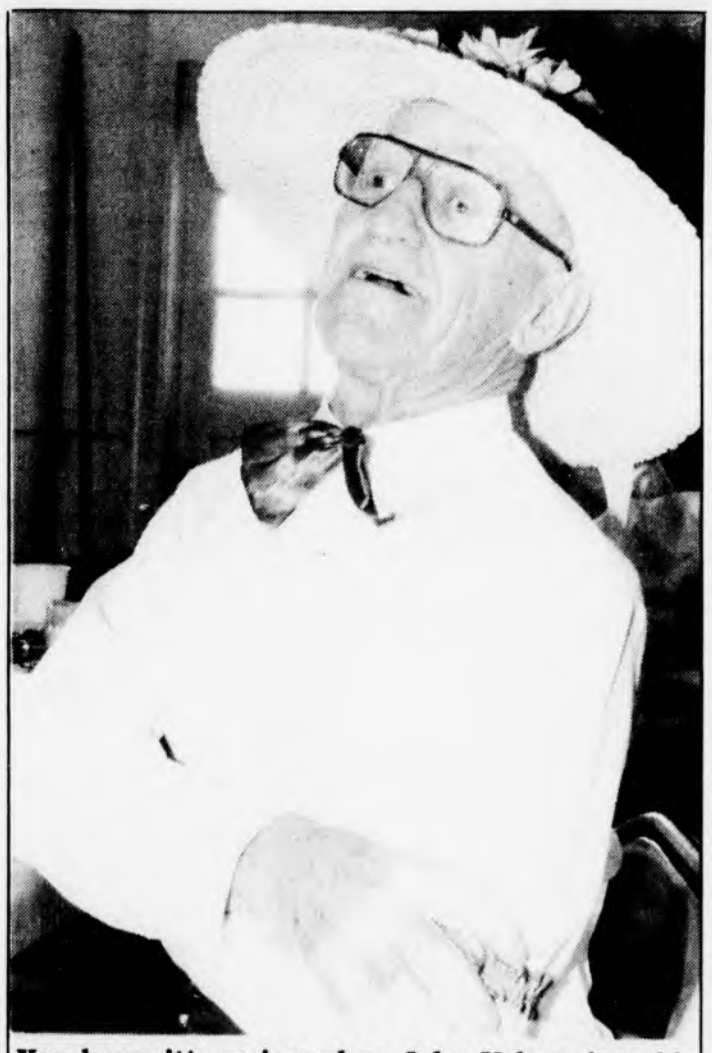
The session will be held at 36 Miller Stile Rd. in Quincy on Thursday, March 29. It will begin at 8:30 a.m. and should be completed about 10 a.m.

The chamber expects lively discussions to take place following a presentation of MetroPlan 2000 by the Metropolitan Area Planning Council.

State and local elected and appointed leaders have been invited, as well as business leaders and media representatives.

This meeting is open to the public. If you plan to attend, please R.S.V.P. your plans to Dorothy DiBona at (617) 479-1111.

"Facts" are on the way



Selectmen directed Executive Secretary Greg Doyon to prepare a fact sheet on the Proposition 2-1/2 override questions to help residents understand the questions on the ballot.

Selectmen want voters to have information about the consequences of both an affirmative and negative vote on each question. Unlike previous years, no private groups have organized to support or defeat the override issues.

Doyon was told to consult with Town Counsel Richard Henderson on the wording to avoid running afoul of rules prohibiting lobbying efforts.

In other action concerning Proposition 2-1/2, selectmen deleted the $28,000 wire truck from a $44,000 capital exclusion question on the April 14 ballot. Wire department Stephen Wigmore told the advisory committee that the present truck would last another year with $3,000 worth of repairs.

An all-purpose lawn maintenance vehicle will be purchased out of the money remaining in the question.

You know it's spring when John Valorz dons his Easter bonnet. Actually, John won the bonnet in a raffle at the Cohasset seniors' St. Patrick's Day party. The OPALS (Older People Active Life Style) of Hingham entertained.

In other business, the selectmen:

• Declined to schedule a public hearing on a proposed leash law, saying the animal study committee was a more appropriate venue.

• Voted to extend the deadline for completion of the reroofing job on the original section of town hall to April 14. The contractors had requested a 30-day extension on the original March 31 deadline.

• Heard from selectman Martha Gjesteby that the South Shore Coalition will begin a collective purchasing effort for the ten towns belonging to the group. Initial purchases will be for computer maintenance services, computer paper and sand. Other items will be added at a later date, Gjesteby said.

Renaissance group to meet

Persons interested in helping or becoming involved with Cohasset Center's village renaissance should attend a brown bag lunch meeting Monday, March 26 at noon at the South Shore Art Center.

The village renaissance is a grass roots organization hoping to help spruce up the village and harbor areas of town.

"Anyone who has any ideas or comments is welcome. We'd like to have as much input as possible," said Jackie Dormitzer, one of the project's coordinators. "If someone has an idea and con't make the meeting, they can drop of a note in the suggestion box at Smith Place or mail it to The Village Renaissance, P.O.Box 902, Cohasset, MA 02025-0001.

New copy deadline

Within the next few weeks, the Cohasset Mariner will be going to fully computerized pagination. New technology means new headaches and new rules.

From here on out, we can no longer guarantee that any submittal received after noon on Monday will get in the paper. All submittals must be typed and must include a name and number for verification. Thank you for your indulgence.

Advisors call for an override

By Alison Cohen
Mariner staff

Cohasset taxpayers will pay more, but won't get more for their money in fiscal 1991 if they go along with the operating budget recommendations of the advisory committee.

The committee finished its budget deliberations on March 8. The recommendations are at the printers and are expected to be in the hands of taxpayers a week before the town meeting to be held April 7.

According to the report's cover letter, the committee is recommending a total operating budget of $12,486,820.

When the budget process began, the advisory committee directed each department to prepare a level-funded budget request. Salary raises and other increased costs were to be subsumed in the level budget.

The town was unable to meet that ambitious goal. The recommended budget represents a $432,406 increase, which is equal to a 3.6 percent increase over fiscal 1990.

In order to fund the recommended budget, the town will have to pass a general override of $110,000. The committee estimated that the tax rate would increase from the current $9.60 level to $9.95.

According to Chairman Ray Kasperowicz, the school budget accounts for $270,000 of the increase. The increase in their budget was driven by contractual salary raises of 5.1 percent, Kasperowicz said.

The remainder reflects increased pension and medical insurance coverage, over which the town has no control.

Kasperowicz said the budget does not contain any increase in the overall level of services.

In calculating the budget and tax rate, the committee assumed that semi-annual state aid payments will be equal to the December 1989 payment of approximately $735,000. The committee also assumed availability of free cash to offset some costs.

According to the committee, "A cut in state aid might force reconsideration of our budget recommendations and/or the extent of the general override."

At the April 7 session of the town meeting, the town will consider the special town meeting articles and non-financial annual town meeting articles. The meeting will reconvene on April 23, after results of the April 14 election are known.

Battle brews over "Rosa B'gosa"

Selectman Rocco Laugelle called it Rosa B'gosa and wanted to consign it to the compost pile. By any other name, it's still rosa rugosa, or beach rose.

Laugelle proposed using a charitable contribution from an anonymous source to remove the rosa rugosa at Veterans' Memorial Park and replace it with neat and tidy granite posts.

"He's talking no flora," selectman Diana Kornet said. "The bees and butterflies love it."

"We like flora," selectman Martha Gjesteby chimed in.

Kornet protested that greenery shouldn't be removed lightly.

"It's a litter catcher," Chairman Burt Pratt complained. "It doesn't look good."

Kornet and Gjesteby decided to go out to the park and examine the salt air-loving plant to see if granite is better than green.

"Look at it, but lets not let this gift get away," Pratt cautioned them.

They promised to return Monday, March 26 ready to vote (green) thumbs up or down on the much-maligned plant.

How much money is planted in your yard ?

Count it up. A couple of flowering shrubs, a hedge and a maple tree from the nursery could amount to as much as $600. You've probably made a considerable investment, in plants alone. A living investment that needs attention to grow.

Take this little quiz, to find out if your landscaping investment is increasing or decreasing in value:

- ☐ Are any of your bushes yellowish?
- ☐ Do any of your trees or shrubs have dead or dying branches?
- ☐ Did your flowering shrubs fail to bloom as well as expected ?
- ☐ Are insects nibbling holes in the leaves ?
- ☐ Are the leaves and branches sparse or stunted ?

If you answered yes to any of these, call us for a free , no-obligation survey and price quote. Our ornamental tree and shrub inspection, pest control and fertilization programs are designed to promote healthy and attractive plants. And healthy landscaping means a healthy increase in your property's value.

Baird, McNabb, Morgan spar for health board seat

By Alison Cohen
Mariner staff

Three people want the only slot available on the board of health. Newcomer John McNabb and last year's contender Hugh Morgan plan on giving incumbent Bill Baird a run for his money.

The board of health term is three years.

William Baird

Background:

• B.S. in mechanical engineering from Lafayette and M.B.A. from Boston College. Additional professional course work in environmental issues and hazardous wastes.

• President of Webb Engineering Associates of Cohasset, an environmental engineering and hazardous waste management firm.

• Civic and volunteer activities include sewer study, hazardous material committee, watershed protection, recycling transfer station committee, board of health, Little League and youth soccer program.

• Married with 4 children enrolled in Cohasset schools.

William Baird is running for re-election because he thinks he has the information and experience to make a valuable contribution to the board.

"For the first two years, you listen more that contribute," Baird said. "I think you should be on the board for at least six years for continuity and the opportunity to contribute what you've learned."

Baird said the major health and environmental issues facing Cohasset are capping the old landfill and dealing appropriate with leachate collection, resolving the Cohasset Heights landfill situation and protecting Lily Pond and the watershed from contamination.

Baird believes being an engineer has been an asset for Baird and the health board as a whole.

"My background has helped taxpayers save money by finding less expensive ways or more technical ways to solve problems," he said.

At the same time, Baird does not want to see more than one engineer on the board. He believes the board needs a variety of backgrounds and approaches to function optimally.

If re-elected, his goal is to maintain and improve the environment in town.

"Every citizen should contribute to his community," Baird said. "I think this is the best way I can contribute."

John McNabb

Background:

• B.A. in psychology from Bowdoin College and M.B.A. candidate from UMass-Boston.

• Currently working as an environmental consultant and lobbyist for the Environmental Lobby of Massachusetts and Mass Health Officers. Prior employment with the state department of environmental protection.

• Civic and volunteer activities include membership on the town's government structure committee, library board of trustees, assistant scout master, membership in a number of environmental groups like Audubon, Sierra Club, etc.

• Single, no children.

John McNabb chose to run for board of health to provide strong environmental protection for Cohasset.

"I think the health board is the perfect place to think globally and act locally," McNabb said.

He believes environmental issues will grow in importance for the health board.

One specific area of concern is Cohasset Heights landfill. Careful monitoring against the possibility of pollution of the groundwater, wetlands and leachate break out is essential.

Protecting the town's water supply is another key issue.

McNabb supports the purchase of land surrounding Lily Pond to reduce the possibility of septage overflows, pesticide runoffs and other accidents.

McNabb applauds the recycling efforts to date and would like to see the town move forward.

"It's easier and cheaper to recycle than pay $44 per ton to haul it to SEMASS.

Radioactive waste materials, Strait's Pond and the clam flats are issues McNabb would also put on the board's agenda sooner rather than later.

McNabb said the skills and experiences that he can bring to the board include a long history working with local, state and federal agencies and officials to resolve problems and issues.

Hugh Morgan

Background:

• Graduate of Cohasset High School
• Employed by MBTA as a revenue agent
• Member of the American Legion
• Married with two children

Hugh Morgan is running for election to the health board because he wants to be a candidate for the people.

Morgan wants the board to look at alternative methods of sewage disposal or push for a sewage treatment plant.

The expense and failure rate of traditional septic systems drew his ire. Morgan wants the board to investigate techniques used around the world to see if there is a better and cheaper way to go.

According to Morgan, Cohasset needs to come to terms with a variety of landfill issues.

Capping the old landfill without forcing an override and keeping dump stickers affordable for senior citizens are high on his list of priorities.

Gjesteby aims for re-election

"I am committed to helping Cohasset deal with Proposition 2-1/2's fiscal constraints while maintaining services for people," Gjesteby said. She considers financial problems the overarching challenge for Cohasset in the coming years.

"We lost federal financial support, and the state money may not be forthcoming," she said. "The citizens want us to be prudent with their money. The decisions we must make won't always be popular."

Cohasset also faces conflicts over conservation and harbor bylaws in the coming year, according to Gjesteby.

Gjesteby said her scientific training allows her to review and analyze technical information and often conflicting testimony in order to reach an informed decision. She then tries to pass that information on to her constituents. She describes her leadership style as being one of consensus-building.

"I don't want to cram anything down the community's throat," she said.

Gjesteby feels the town would be better served by an earlier and more comprehensive budget review process. She believes selectmen need more detailed information in order to make the best possible decisions.

She would like to see joint planning sessions of all department heads. Such a process would lead to more coordination and sharing of information and resources.

Gjesteby also supports increased regionalization of purchases and efforts. The South Shore Coalition, of which she is a member, is instituting regional purchase of computer maintenance services, computer paper and sand. Other items will be added at a later date.

Gjesteby believes her expertise and experience will be invaluable as Cohasset faces leaner times.

Voters to decide override questions

According to water commissioner Ron Goodwin, payment should come from water rates, not tax payments because not all residents get their water from the town. Some get their water from Hingham and others have wells.

When selectman Rocco Laugelle raised objections to the purchase, Goodwin countered that the cost of cleaning up a polluted Lily Pond "would make $1.9 million look like a drop in the bucket.

"It's pay me now or pay me later-- if we pay later, we always pay more."

Goodwin told selectmen that the water department had gotten a bargain on the land.

"We got the owner to agree to a price below his estimate or our original appraisal," Goodwin said. The owner had originally requested $ 3 million for the land, and the town appraised it for $2 million.

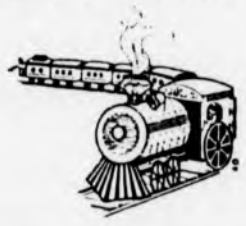
The property, located near the water plant's intake structure, is the only developable land left around the pond. It has been approved for 11 building lots.

The water commission is also asking for a 5 percent rate increase at town meeting. The increase would raise about $30,000 a year.

Goodwin said that he was personally opposed to raising the rates unless voters approved purchase of the Lily Pond property. Because the first payment on the property would not be made for 15 months, Goodwin felt no rush to increase rates.

The last rate increase was two years ago.

In other action, the selectmen voted to approve selling Henry Rattenbury a 9,359-square-foot right of way off Bancroft Road. The town is securing two appraisals for guidance in setting the price.



Goodwin joked that he would " first offer the right of way to Rattenbury at $1.9 million."

Goedecke notes successes

Goedecke also pointed to her success in introducing the concept of long range planning in a broader sense than just capital budget review while serving on the advisory committee.

"I am proud of the work I did to increase communication and sharing of ideas between town departments," she said. "I would like to continue that work on the board of selectmen."

Four compete for library trustees posts

By Alison Cohen
Mariner staff

Many people in town consider the Paul Pratt Memorial Library to be a jewel. It is one of the few services that is used on a regular basis by all segments of the community.

Four women are vying for a position as library trustee to guide the library through stormy financial times and maintain the quality of services that Cohasset residents have been able to rely on.

The term of office is three years. There are three opening on the board.

Sheila Evans

Background:
- Graduate of Smith College.
- Employed as marketing consultant for eight years.
- Volunteer activities include trustee of Smith College, trustee of Cohasset Central Cemetery, trustee of Paul Pratt Memorial Library, board member of the Dana Hall School of Wellesley, board member of the Cohasset Community Center, board member Massachusetts Association for the Blind.
- married with 3 children and 2 grandchildren.

Sheila Evans is seeking re-election to the library's board of trustees in order to help the library survive the financial crisis that threatens the town's institutions.

"My experience on the board is invaluable for helping the library through this difficult time," Evans said.

Evans sees the major challenge facing the library one of providing the services that the town treasures given the budgetary constraints.

She contends that there is no place left for the library to make cuts.

"The library's share of the town budget is less than two percent," Evans said. "The amount of money saved by making cuts in the library budget doesn't amount to a hill of beans."

The cost of those cuts to the library and its patrons is huge in comparison, according to Evans.

"The library has a wonderful collection of books, but if we are not able to keep the library open it doesn't help anyone," she said.

Evans is committed to maintaining and expanding the computerization project.

"Eventually it will represent a great labor savings," Evans said. "No institution worth its salt can stand still."

Evans said her major contribution would come from the proven experience of her ten years on the library board.

Sigrid Carey

Background:
- Art school graduate and fiber artist.
- Employed at Hæmonetics.
- As a member of the South Shore Spinners, she has served as their librarian and editor of the newsletter.

Sigrid Carey is running for library trustee because she believes everyone should run for office and serve their community.

"I use the library a lot. It's a nice little library," she said.

She doesn't feel she can identify challenges confronting the library or specific areas where the library can cope with budget cuts since she isn't familiar with the budget.

Carey believes the strengths she would bring to the board of trustees are common sense and a practical approach to things.

"I feel as though everybody should run for public office," she reiterated. "There are only four people running for library trustee."

Doris McNulty

Background:
- Graduate of Simmons College school of library science.
- Retired after a career that included serving as a professional librarian for the U.S. Navy, in private industry and in a school setting.
- Civic and volunteer activities include Chairman of F.I.S.H., membership in the Discussion Club and the Community Garden Club of Cohasset.
- Married with three children and four grandchildren.

Doris McNulty is running for re-election to the library board of trustees because of a lifelong interest in libraries.

"It is one area where I can contribute something to my community," McNulty said.

According to McNulty, the biggest challenge for the library will be coping with fiscal constraints.

"We have cut as much as we can on staff and the book budget must be a certain percentage of the total budget in order to be eligible for state library aid," she said.

McNulty believes that the library has limited ability to raise funds and doesn't consider that an appropriate way to fund a public service.

"This is a town service, it should be town-supported."

McNulty is a firm supporter of the computer system. She believes the library will be able to save money through more efficient clerical services and collection of overdue fines when the computer system is fully operational.

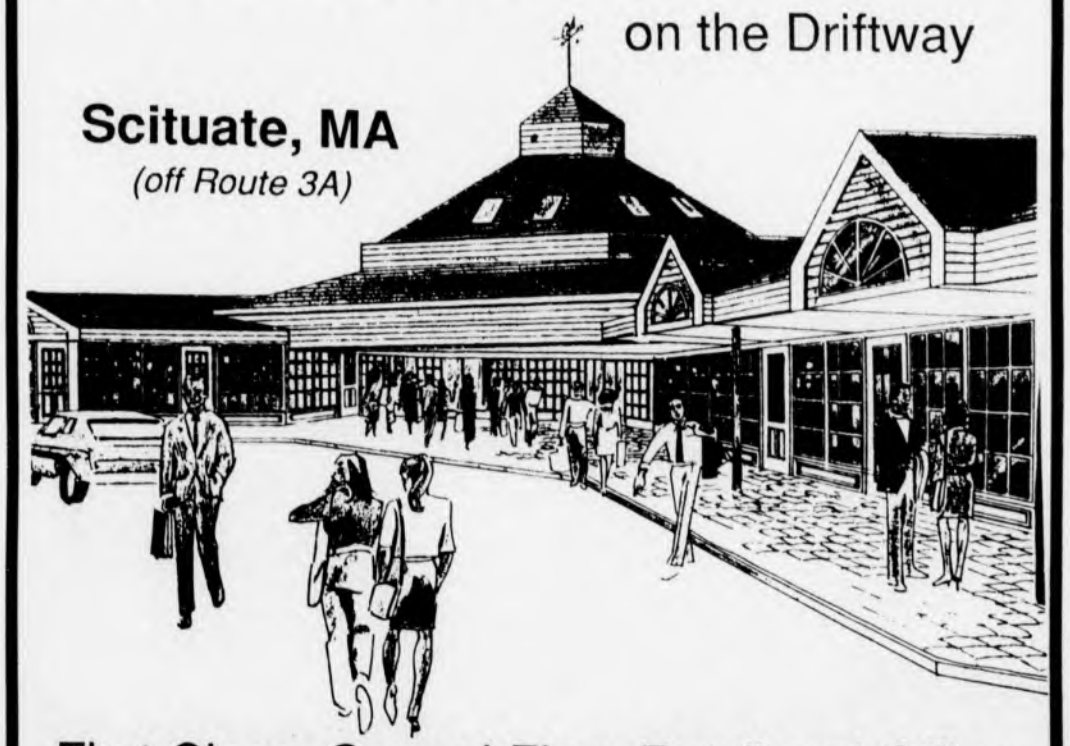
She believes her greatest contribution will come from her long acquaintance with libraries and a continuing determination to provide as good a library as possible within the fiscal constraints faced by the town.

Lucille McLoughlin

Background:
- Graduate of Manhattanville College, with graduate work at MIT.
- Volunteers at the library and with F.I.S.H. A member of the DAR, she served as their national chairman for motion pictures while living in New York.
- Widowed and mother of 5 children and 8 grandchildren.

Lucille McLoughlin is running for library trustee because she has served the library in every volunteer capacity except that one.

"I am very fond of the library and I enjoy it,"she said. "The librarians are marvelous."



When asked what the major challenges are facing the library, she answered emphatically, "Money."

McLoughlin doesn't know where the library could or should make cuts, given how underfunded it is at present.

"We owe the librarians better wages. They work very hard and are very helpful," she said.

Her answer when asked about her qualifications and the contribution she could make as trustee was equally short and to the point: "Old age and lots of experience."

Selectmen back Vo-Tech expansion

By Alison Cohen
Mariner staff

Monday night, selectmen unanimously endorsed South Shore Votech's plans to build a $5 million dollar addition to the Hanover campus of the regional school.

Cohasset has supported plans for an addition at the Hanover campus in 1988 and 1989. Their support was unwavering.

"This is a very appropriate investment," selectman Diana Kornet said. "We get a very big return for our students for very little investment."

In order for the bond issue to fly, all eight member towns must approve the bond issue at a special town meeting. If only one town votes against the project, it is defeated. If no special meeting is called or no action is taken on the request, it is considered an approval.

Currently, the votech programs are split between campuses in Abington and Hanover. The new building will allow the school to consolidate all programs at the Hanover site. According to David Chittim, Cohasset's representative on the regional school committee, the construction is essential.

The Abington programs are housed in a school leased from the town of Abington at a cost of $200,000 per year. The lease is slated to expire in 1992.

The state has told the school committee that it will not approve renewal of the lease, calling the facility inadequate due to a lack of hot water and handicap access in addition to a general state of disrepair.

The votech administration and school committee are also pushing for approval of the bond issue as soon as possible in order to capitalize on currently available construction reimbursement funds.

Chittim told the selectmen that if the bond issue is approved by all eight member towns prior to June 30, the state will reimburse 75 percent of the construction costs. After that date, costs could skyrocket for member towns.

"We'll never see that kind of reimbursement by the state again," Chittim said.

Although Chittim described the district as "living on great hope," the odds do not favor passage.

Consolidation into a single campus was first proposed in 1986, projected at a cost of $15 million dollars. In 1988, the building subcommittee recommended a $14 million project that was rejected by two communities.

The committee went back to the drawing boards and calculators and proposed a $12.5 million project in 1989. That was defeated 7 to 1.

The current, "bare bones" project would require the elimination of one program and consolidation of two more in a free-standing building, but would be able to absorb nearly every student currently enrolled at the Abington site.

The cost to Cohasset taxpayers is estimated at $1300 per year, assuming the number of Cohasset students at the votech does not increase. Chittim said that would translate to 35 cents per individual taxpayer.

If the bond issue is defeated, the regional school will lose $400,000 in revenue from out-of-district students, according to Chittim. He told selectmen that tuition from those students is used to off-set levies on member towns.

Chittim also said the school will be forced to eliminate six to eight programs as well, making it difficult to meet the needs of students from participating towns and calling the viability of the regional school into question.

Around town

With Sallyann Chatterton

❑ The annual Lake Placid Regional skating competition took place recently, and once again the Cohasset contingent won several medals!

That's with clubs coming from as far away as Virginia and Chicago to compete folks, so take your hats off to these gals when you see them. Lauren Wood earned herself a gold in the couples category, a silver in freestyle V (age group16-20) and a silver in figures.

She also skated with the team who earned a silver in compulsory VI, a bronze in precision team and a silver in their production "Coming to America."

Kim Ward was another winner, skating in the 13-15 age group. She earned a silver in freestyle IV, a silver in precision, and was on the team that earned a third in Production.

Michelle Ward skated for the 9-11 age group, and won a fifth in freestyle III and a bronze in precision III and a silver in team production.

Kara Protulis skated in the 13-15 age group and won a silver in figures IV, a silver in interptative VII and fourth in spotlight and a fifth in freestyle VII. Kara also skated in the team production where they won a silver, and precision team where they placed third.

Michelle Buckley skated in the 9-12 age group and won a fourth in spotlight VI and a third in figures III.

There was an added attraction this year, dads were drafted to skate in the production number!! They had a grand time, and it was the first time that they had skated with the team, much less with their daughters!

It was Peter Wood's first and last time, his daughter Lauren will graduate this year. Memorable indeed.

❑ Congratulations go to Jeff Hartwell, a junior at Colby College in Waterville, Maine. Jeff is majoring in economics and government and made the Dean's List last semester. He also is vice president of commons up there. It is too bad that it is too late to run for governor of Massachusetts, he would make a wonderful candidate. Perhaps next term?

❑ Becky Bates McArthur called to remind anyone that did not order them, there are still Girl Scout cookies left, and you can order some by calling her at 383-0362.

❑ There is s strange sight around town this year, Bill Enos is home! This is the first time in 53 years that he was home for St Patrick's Day, as he is usually doing his work for the Red Sox.

As we all know the strike was on so here he was. Wonder if Bill's wife, Grace, will strike next, she's used to his travelling at this time....

❑ Jane Herzog has purchased the Cohasset Cove Seafood Store, the one that is located across from the motel, and she will open it March 27.

❑ Most of you read about Dick Poland, who was badly burned in a fire recently. He is in Jordan Hospital and doing nicely, and may have visitors.

The hours are 12 to 2 p.m. and 4 to 8 p.m.

If you wish to send him a card he is at Sandwich Street, Plymouth MA 02360 (no room number necessary). I'm sure he would love to hear from all of us, get well soon!!

❑ Speaking of hospitals, Pam Douglas has been in the South Shore hospital since December! And, she has quite a while to go!

Pam broke seven bones in her leg in a car accident and is in traction. She would like to thank all of her friends and all of the people that have sent her cards, and we are sure she would like to hear from more. That is a long time to be out of commission!

❑ Dot MacDonald is one proud mom these days! Dot's son, Fran, was in the restaurant Flounders in Scituate and saved a woman's life. The woman was choking. She sent Fran some flowers; she was so grateful, it must be an awesome feeling to save someone's life! Hats off to you Fran.

❑ Lauren Wood skated in the minuteman competition held in Concord and did she do a swell job. She earned a gold in figures in the 16-20 age group, a gold in footwork in the same age group and a silver in spotlight.

Lauren will skate in one more competition as a senior, but will continue afterwards as every college she has looked at will have a rink.

What will Mom and Dad do on weekends when she graduates? Probably still go to competitions, no matter where they are held.

❑ Leo's Exxon had another honor bestowed on them recently, their little league team, the Red Sox, presented Leo with a plaque. It has the place of honor on the wall of Leo's office, be sure to take a peek at it. They are all so proud!

❑ There will be a South Shore Soccer Camp this summer, run by Jon Anderson and Larry Shultz, and available through the Cohasset recreation department. It will be held in August, so watch for more details as they become available.

❑ That's the news from here, please call me with your latest bit of news, we need to hear from you.

FOR AN IDEA OF HOW DIRTY YOUR ORIENTAL RUG IS, RUB THIS AND LOOK AT YOUR FINGER.

Oriental rugs are constantly picking up various types of soil. Some are greasy and some are gritty. But they all can eat away at your treasured possession.

For your Oriental rug to retain its beauty and value, it should be cleaned at least once every three to five years.

At Grillo Oriental Rug Cleaning, we carefully examine each rug, then give it the most suitable treatment. Sometimes that means gentle machine-washing, other times it means our 'Art-Safe' hand-washing. And our exclusive equipment and methodology enable us to remove the deep-set grit that others miss.

Furthermore, unlike harsh commercial cleaning, our individualized, museum-quality care is always safe, always effective.

First parish to canvass

Canvass Sunday, March 25

All members and friends of First Parish are invited to join the canvass committee for an informal buffet luncheon Sunday, March 25, any time between noon and 2 p.m. in the Parish House, to talk about the proposed budget, the canvass, or any concerns.

The committee hopes to see many that day and asks that pledge cards be returned as soon as possible and no later than during the luncheon.

The parish committee must finalize its budget for fiscal 1990-91 before the May annual meeting, so it needs the results of the canvass before the end of April.

Easter music

All those who wish to join in the performance of the Vivaldi "Gloria" should be aware that first required rehearsal is Thursday, March 29.

The High School youth group is planning for its fundraising brunch to be served April 8 following the Palm Sunday service of worship.

Earth Day Celebration

On April 22, Cohasset churches and civic organizations will join in observance of the 20th anniversary of Earth Day. They will gather on the common by the meeting house pond to sing some songs and plant a tree.

The group then will disperse to clean up various public areas throughout the town, returning to the transfer station late in the day for a closing ceremony.

Preparations for Earth Day will begin with a guest lecture on recycling and ecology planned for 4 p.m. at the meeting house on Sunday, April 1.

An invitation has been extended to various community groups to "adopt a site" (one of the town parks) for the year and provide continuing care.

Any persons interested in having the church participate in this aspect of the program should call the church office or a member of the parish committee.

Lent project begins

Lent Project

A special project for Lent from the Church School and C.E. committee is a book drive of new or slightly used children's books.

They can be brought to church any Sunday and placed in a special box. They will be given to area shelters for the children staying there.

Nursery

The parents of the nursery-age children are now volunteering in the nursery to help the teenagers.

Anyone interested in helping out (you don't have to be a parent) can sign up at the nursery room door or see Becky McArthur.

Youth News

The 1990 summer work project orientation meeting will be held Sunday, March 25 at 4 p.m. for the Hancock County Service Project.

A maximum of 30 volunteers will travel to Orland, Maine (near Ellsworth) Sunday, July 29, and return Saturday, Aug. 4; to work with the Emmanus H.O.M.E. project, a craft center that also sponsors new home starts and various service opportunities.

The trip is open to all current 9 — 12 graders, and parents are invited to the orientation meeting.

One great hour of sharing offering will be taken Sunday, march 25.

For more than 40 years the church has been saying "yes" to those in need through O.G.H.S.

This year's theme, "Share the struggle, share the joy!" emphasizes that participation is essential to the continuing fulfillment of god's mission of love in action.

Church holds election supper

The Beechwood Congregational Church of Cohasset will hold its Annual Election Supper Wednesday, April 4, at the church at 6:30 PM.

The dinner includes roast beef, mashed potatoes, green beans, harvard beets, cole slaw, rolls, dessert and coffee.

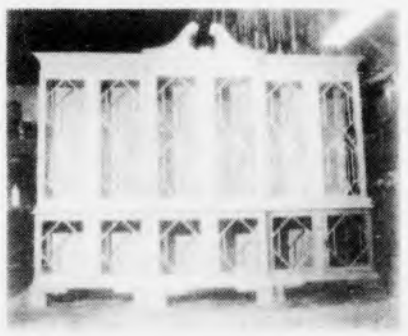
Tickets cost $6.95 for adults; half price for children. Seating is limited. For reservations, call 545-3447

Passover meal April 12

The Second Congregational Church board of deacons presents the Passover meal on Maudy Thursday, April 12 at 6:30 pm in Bates Hall.

The meal is for anyone interested: singles, families, freinds etc..

The cost is $2.50 for adullts and $1.50 for children to cover cost of the meat provided.



Reservations are required by Sunday, April 8.

This is the meal and order of service ("seder") patterened after the passover which Jesus and his disciples were celebrating on the nignt when Jesus instituted the "Last Supper ".

The congregation will make no attempt to reconstruct an authentic passover ritual of either Christ's time or of present Judaism, but merely a presentation of some of the aspects and symbols to help better understand and appreciate the traditions of which Jesus was a devoted follower.

There will be meat (lamb and chicken) provided. The deacons ask those attending help in the preparation of some of the other symbolic foods and remainder of the meal.

NERVE INTERFERENCE

Every muscle and organ in the body is linked to the brain by a vast network of nerve fibers. Thirty-one pairs of nerves pass through openings (intervertebral foramen) in the spine to form the vital connection between the brain and virtually every cell in the body. If any one of these nerve fibers were to be interfered with, the body part to which it is linked would suffer. The chiropractor knows that a likely area of nerve interference is the opening in the spine where the nerve branches out to its eventual destination. Were this opening to distort due to a misalignment (subluxation) of adjacent vertebrae, the nerve's ability to relay information would be compromised. In such cases, it would be the chiropractor's task to detect the subluxation, correct it, and restore the flow of nerve impulses to the affected body part.

Chiropractic offers a natural and drugless approach to correcting such points of interference. In this fashion the source of the problem is addressed by allowing natural impulses to serve as the corrective method of the problem. For a more comfortable tomorrow, call DR. DEBRA M. TRANBERG, SCITUATE HARBOR CHIROPRACTIC, 80 Front St., Scituate, 545-7388, and DR. SUSAN EMMER, CHIROPRACTIC & FAMILY WELLNESS CARE, 87 Sohier St., Cohasset, 383-1330. By appointment. Workers Comp. cases and most insurance plans accepted.

HINT: The chiropractor plots areas of numbness in the body to discern which nerves are experiencing interference.

Rosa B'gosa, Part 1

Once upon a time in a country east of the sun and west of the moon a plant grew. And grew. And did so in spite of salt and sand and windy weather.

And the darting bees revelled about it in a dizzy, buzzing flight. The butterflies would alight on the sweet petals and let the sun warm their wings.

Some looked upon it and thought it exceeding fair. Rosa, they called it. Rosa rugosa.

But even in this fair land, paper napkins and bits of litter were dropped from careless hands. Carried by the wind, the refuse became entangled in the leaves.

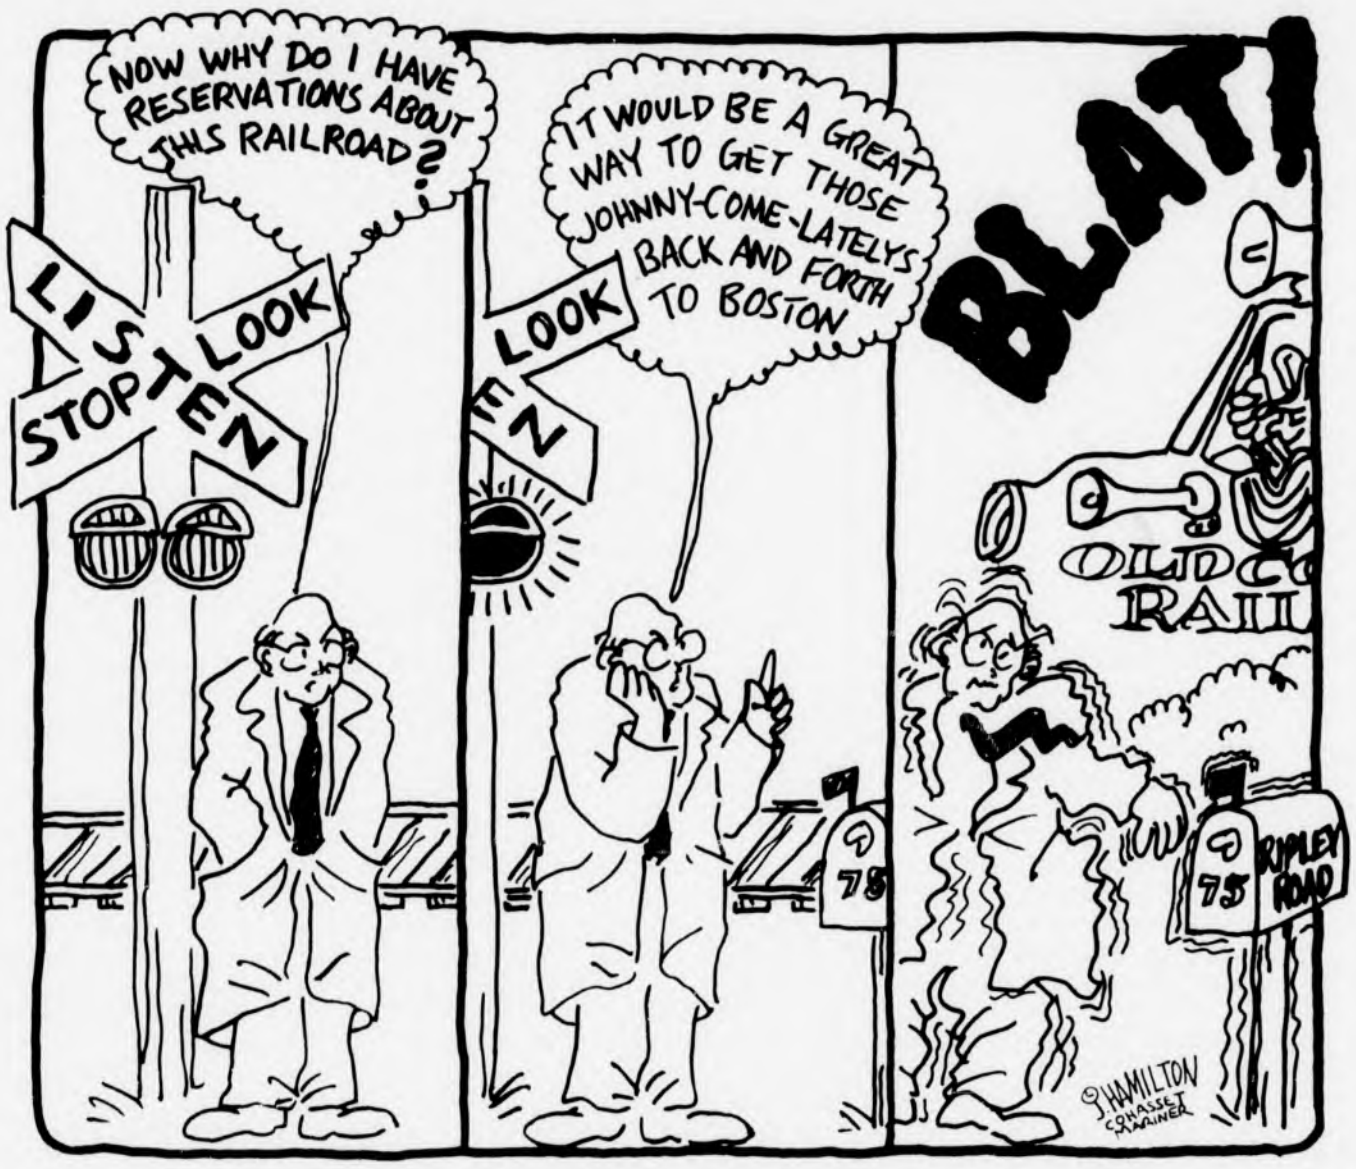
And others looked at the bedraggled plant and said "Icky. We must make our land neat and tidy. Oh let's get rid of that litter-catching weed."

And so the war of the rosas began.

The lovers of new-mown lawns and granite pillars called for the end of lowly, but sweet rosa.

Set against those forces of eradication were the flower ladies.

"Oh save the flora. Save the fauna," they cried.



And sides were chosen and banners created.

And the lowly court jesters and wandering minstrels clapped and were happy for news that was not of treasury and taxing kind.

Whither the war? How fares the rose?

No one can say quite yet, gentlefolk. But ere the spring is one week gone, the fate of rosa will be sealed.

So do not wander too far away. This tale is too much fun not to tell.

Selectman Burt Pratt has expressed resignation about the planned restoration of the Old Colony Railroad's Greenbush line. According to the MBTA, houses along the rail line will be affected by noise and vibration from passing trains.

Letters

Waal says citizens group misled the community

To the Editor:

A letter appeared in the March 8 edition of the Cohasset Mariner which was signed by a newly formed group, the Citizens for Equitable Environmental Legislation.

The letter contained numerous statements that are both inaccurate and misleading. The correct information needs to be presented to the public in order that they can truly understand the effect that these new regulations will have on them individually as well as the entire community.

The April 1989 Cohasset town meeting adopted the Cohasset wetlands bylaw, which was subsequently approved by the attorney general in November, seven months later.

Until that time, the commission operated solely under the state wetlands protection act and its accompanying regulations. This gave the commission broad, but often undefined authority within the area of its jurisdiction.

Cohasset has now joined nearly 100 other cities and towns in the commonwealth which have passed local bylaws to supplement the state act, addressing local concerns and filling the various gaps left by the state regulations.

The Cohasset wetland regulations, like the state regulations and those of other town boards, are meant to expand upon and explain the requirements of the bylaw by providing the homeowners with clear, concise and uniform standards.

The authors of the March 8 letter suggest that the Cohasset regulations are far more restrictive than the existing state regtulations. No statement could be more inaccurate.

State law gives conservation commissions jurisdiction over defined wetlands and an adjoining 100-foot buffer zone. The jurisdiction of the commission under the Cohasset wetlands bylaw is exactly the same.

This does not mean, nor has it ever meant, that every single project within this area will be prohibited. The commission's jurisdiction and authority to regulate are triggered only when such projects impact upon a defined resource area or protected interest.

The March 8 letter also incorrectly states the facts with respect to variances. Our regulations have provisions for variances and they discuss when and why a variance may be applied for and granted.

However, the Cohasset regulations currently do not require that any fee be paid to request a variance, let alone the fee of $4,000 as stated in the letter.

Such a fee is required by the state at a stage in proceeding s before the Massachusetts Department of Environmental Protection, well after the local conservation commission hearing stage.

Additionally, nowhere in the proposed regulations are specific home improvements prohibited, as implied by the letter. The residents of Cohasset are not served by such false, inaccurate and misleading statements.

The proposed regulations will establish clariity and uniformity in the policies and performance standards, often lacking under the state regulations.

Cohasset regulations also will assist the commission in performing its duties as defined by the State wetlands protection act and our local Cohasset wetlands bylaw.

We respect every citizen's right to enjoy his property and to make environmentally responsigble improvements. These regualtions will provide those living near wetlands the standards by which we will be reviewing their projects.

Our mandate is the protection of critically important wetlands resources and the environment that makes Cohasset unique.

Jeffrey C. Waal, Chairman
Cohasset Conservation Commission

All roads will be swept

To the Editor:

We have had many calls here at the highway department regarding a timetable as to when certain roads will be swept.

Due to the amount of sand on our roads, I predict it will take approximately two months to complete this project. Please keep in mind that there is only one sweeper and one sidewalk broom to do the whole town. Be assured however that all roads will be swept.

Yours Truly,
Harold W. Litchfield
Highway Surveyor

Town leash law should be enforced

To the Editor:

This letter is written in order to inform the public about Article 56 in the warrant for the town meeting to be held on April 7.

Article 56 is a citizen's petition which is intended to clarify sub-paragraph f, Section 12, Article VII of the general bylaws of the town of Cohasset. Article VII deals with safety and public order.

Section 12 addresses dogs specifically.

Sub-paragraph f merely implies that dog owners must keep their dogs from running on others' property and public areas. It fails to specify who is responsible and how the dog must be under the control of their owner. This bylaw is not being observed by many residents.

Article 56 of the town warrant is submitted in order to clarify the responsibility of the dog owner by stating the means by which their animal must be controlled.

Article 56 states, "Any owner or keeper of a dog who shall permit such dog to be in any street or public place without either being effectively restrained by chain or leash under the direct and positive control of such owner, keeper, or other person or attended by a person exercising control, or who shall permit such dog to run upon property of another without the express permission of the owner or occupant of such property, may be punished by a fine..."

The people of Cohasset are urged to contact the selectmen to let them know that you support additional hours for the animal control officer. He is presently employed 10 hours a week. These hours are inadequate to address the problem of numerous dogs which daily are allowed to run loose in all areas of town.

The fact that the town has withdrawn from the county (for dog licensing) now means that the dog license fees go directly into our general fund.

The fees for licenses were increased this year and this money would be well-spent to enforce the law, if it passes. No one should be placed in the postion of being intimidated by a dog which is not under the control of its owner. Judging from occasional articles in the local news, this does happen.

Sincerely yours,

Elizabeth Warren
11 Sankey Rd.

Third grade Brownies Alexandra D'urso, Lauren Genovese and Courtney Kassane enjoy a pizza party at Papa Ginos.

Papa Gino's donates to Girl Scouts

Melissa Smith, general manager of the Cohasset Papa Gino's, presented a check for $500 to the Patriot's Trail Girl Scout council on Wednesday, March 7, at the Papa Gino's in Cohasset.

The $500 check is part of a $4,000 donation from Papa Gino's of America, Inc. to the Patriot's Trail Girl Scout council. Accepting the check on behalf of the Council was community director, Becky Bates McArthur.

The Patriot's Trail Girl Scout council is New England's largest and the nation's sixth largest Girl Scout council. The council serves 65 cities and towns in the Boston metropolitan area, from North Reading to Marlborough to Scituate.

The donation will be used by the Patriot's Trail council to bring scouting to the homeless, girls at risk, new immigrants, and girls with disabilities.

At the check presentation, the Cohasset Papa Gino's honored 12 girls with a pizza party. These girls were chosen because of their excellent community relations work.

The first graders from Troop 4771 recently made Valentines and wreaths which they brought to the Ripley Road Nursing Home.

The Daisies from Troop 4625 decorated spoons at Christmas time for Project Bread.

The third grade Brownies from Troop 4770 helped out at many senior citizen luncheons.

And the Juniors from Troop 4389 made fire starters and posters for the Village Fair.

All of the girls participated in Christmas caroling throughout Cohasset during the holiday season.

Papa Gino's employees raised the money last summer through the sale of coupon books at their restaurants throughout New England and New York. Over $250,000 was raised for the Papa Gino's "Children's Appeal," which provides support to youth-oriented organizations such as Girl Scouts, Boy Scouts, and Special Olympics.

Papa Gino's is donating a total of $25,000 to all of the New England Girl Scout councils.

Three promoted at Cohasset Savings Bank

Three members of the staff of Cohasset Savings Bank have been promoted to supervisory positions.

Barbara Caldwell of Scituate has been named assistant manager of the main office in Cohasset.

Caldwell has been an employee of the Bank since 1979, first as a teller in the North Scituate office and, since 1987, as head teller in the main office. She was formerly employed 10 years by Shawmut Bank and has taken courses at the American Institute of Banking.

Joni Reynolds, of Cohasset has been named head teller at the main office in Cohasset. She joined the bank staff in 1985 and had been employed previously by the Bank of Boston. She is a graduate of Fontbonne Academy in Milton and attended Boston State College.

Maria Saldi, of Cohasset has been promoted to head teller at the North Scituate office of the bank. She has been an employee of the Bank since 1984 and is a graduate of Cohasset High School. She previously had been employed at Lincoln Trust.

Maria Saldi of Cohasset, Barbara Caldwell of Scituate and Joni Reynolds of Cohasset all have received promotions at Cohasset Savings Bank.

Local realtor cited at convention

Mary Ellen Neagle, who negotiated the most sales and who listed the most property in the Cohasset office of the Jack Conway Company during 1989, received an award during a recent company convention.

Bowman and Co. holds fashion show

Tickets are available for "An Evening of Fashion" by Bowman and Company of Cohasset on April 4 at 7:30 p.m. at the Weymouth Elks Hall, 1197 Washington Street (Route 53), Weymouth.

The show is sponsored by the Weymouth Chapter of Friends of The New England Home for Little Wanderers, the fashions will be modeled by members of the chapter and volunteers, and all proceeds will benefit The New England Home for Little Wanderers.

The Home is a non-profit, non-sectarian, private child welfare agency serving troubled children from 6 to 18 and their families through its many programs and services, including facilities in Jamaica Plain, Dorchester, Norwood, Walpole, Waltham and Watertown.

Makeup tips will be offered by Beverly Butts, a Mary Kay Cosmetics Consultant.

The New England Home for Little Wanderers was founded in 1865 as an orphanage, and is still thought of by many people as the same; however, The New England Home today offers a range of residential, day, special education, counseling, adoption and foster care programs.

The cost of services for one child today is estimated at $80,000 per year. The New England Home serves more than 1,000 young people each year, trying to reunite a broken family whenever possible.

Tickets for "An Evening of Fashion" may be obtained by calling the chapter treasurer at (617) 337-4822. The show clebrates the Home's 125th anniversary, the Friends' 30th anniversary, and the 50th anniversary of The Home's making a home for Britain's "Blitz Kids" during World War II.

Masonic Lodge open house

Konohasset Lodge, A. F. and A. M. will host an open house Sunday, April 1, from 1 p.m. to 4 p.m. at 5 Brook St., Cohasset.

Anyone interested in learning about freemasonry is encouraged to attend. There will be members present to assist you. Light refreshments will be served.

Cohasset Cub Scouts tour Hull Lifesaving Museum

Twenty one Cub Scouts from Pack 38, Cohasset, met on the sea wall off Nantasket Avenue in Hull to begin their tour of the Hull Life Saving Museum.

As the boys looked out at Boston Light, Museum Director Judeth Van Hamm described Boston Harbor, the ships that once sailed there, and the shipwrecks and rescues that were made.

Moving into the museum, Van Hamm described what life was like for the men who worked at the life saving station at the turn of the century.

The boys saw the galley, the mess room, and the boat room, each furnished as it would have been in the station's active days.

The boys then were turned loose on a scavenger hunt that took them throughout the museum building searching for such things as trap doors, flue holes, and old glass.

In the radio room, the boys used telegraph keys and a crank telephone. They made their initials in "signal code flags" and tried their hand at writing with an old-fashioned ink pen.

The loft above the boat room had old uniforms and hats for trying on, and the watch tower had binoculars for scanning out at Boston Harbor

A sure sign of enjoyment, boys could be seen begging their chaperones for a few more minutes at the museum before they had. to leave.

Van Hamm invited them all back for the special activities on April 28 and 29 when "a 100-year-old life saving station comes alive'"

The Cub Scouts of Cohasset Pack 38 had a wonderful time touring the Hull Lifesaving Museum.

Candidate's Day

Meet the candidates at the Tuesday luncheon March 27 at 11 am.

Seniors will have the opportunity to ask the candidates questions and learn all the facts first hand to help in making a wise choice on election day, April 14.

Watecolor class

Learn the tools for artistic growth. Special talent is not necessary, for it is the act of doing that produces private masterpieces.

The lessons are for both beginners and advanced watercolorists. They help beginners move beyond lucky accidents to achieve greater control.

These same techniques provide the spontaneous stimuili which excite the advanced artist to move in new directions. Tne class meets Thursdays between 1 and 3 pm.

For information to sign up, call 383-9112. All adults are welcome to join. The program will start April 5, at 1 pm.

PSO artist of the month

During March, the Cohasset PSO artist of the month program will introduce the students of Osgood School to work of artist Grandma Moses.

The program is taught by volunteer mothers who are given a printed biograhy of the artist and a sheet describing objectives of the lesson as well as pointers for its success.

It seems clear from her autobiography, that the life of Grandma Moses offers an excellent opportunity to teach children another lesson: It's never to late to learn something new!

If you have begun a new activity since retirement, the PSO would love to have you go to school and assist a mother in the classroom for this project.

All that is required is giving encouragement to the children as they try their hand at imitating Grandma Moses' s style with oil pastels.

Mothers will be responsible for setting up supplies and giving biographical background. As children are working, any personal anecdotes you would like to share would be great.

If you would like to participate in this project, there will be a sign-up sheet posted at the center. If you have a special classroom you would like to visit, please make a note of it so the PSO can try to match you to the time requested by that teacher.

For more information, call Lynn Garden at 383-9881. To sign up for the project, call 383-9112.

METCO spelling bee

On Saturday, Feb. 17, the METCO Directors' Association sponsored its second annual Metco spelling bee. Students from grades 1 - 8 throughout the 32 Metco communities participated in this academic event.

Several Deer Hill Metco student stook part in the spelling bee

The fourth grade students were Erik Allen and Mazoe Barkon.

The students from the fifth grade were Lashonda Johnson and Tameka Adams.

Amazingly , the winner and the runner-up for the sixth grade group were both from the Deer Hill School.

The second place winner was Benita Johnson who won a ribbon, and Jared Hardwick, won a $50 savings bond and a gold medallian for winning first place.

Cohasset quiz kids are the best

By Michael Kasameyer and Edward Taylor
Special to the Mariner

March 8 was the date for the first of four quiz shows to be hosted by each of the sixth grade clases in turn.

Mrs. Magnussen's class was the first to produce the show. The host and hostess of the first show were Ryan Sawchuck and Megan Fahey.

The show was filmed at Continental Cablevision in front of a live studio audience (Deer Hill sixth graders). Mrs. Magnussen's students ran the machines and cameras because it was their turn to host.

The team members from Mrs. Cisnero's room were: Jessica Hurley, Jessi Flynn, David Hansen, Melisssa Weier, with Andy Collins as alternate.

Mrs. Magnussen's team consisted of: Greg Schultz, Cameron Hynes, Laura Slotnick, Neven Bunstein, and alternate, Hillary Strong.

Mr. Becker's team was made up of: Michael Coates, John Whitehouse, Heather Proctor, Holly Pereira, and Heather Littlehale as alternate.

Mr. Schultz's team members were: Liz Good, Eric Henry, Jen Cullivan, Amy Theriault, and Brett Mac Quarrie.

The purpoe of the shows is to review school material and to teach the children how a TV studio works.

The winning team for the show was Mrs. Magnussen's class with Mr. Shultz's team a close second.

The show will be aired on cable channel 3 at 7:30 pm on March 8 and March 22.

Deer Hill students excel in writing

By Tafana Fiore and Rory Winters
Special to the Mariner

During January, the sixth grade participated in a creative writing contest

Each week, the students had to pass in a story on an assigned topic.

Stories were judged twice; first by other sixth grade students and then by one of the teachers

There would be a first, second, and third place winner each week, as well as students who earned special "teacher awards." These winning stories were awarded points each week.

Here are the final results of the contest:

Mr. Schultz's room:
1st - Jen Cullivan
2nd - Liz Good
3rd - Lauren DeVito, Abby Pease and Megan MacNamara

Mrs. Cisneros's room:
1st - Tafana Fiore
2nd - Jessi Flynn
3rd - Katie Medinger and Rory Winters

Mrs. Magnussen's room:
1st - Greg Schultz and Laura Slotnick
2nd - Danielle Nohe
3rd - Jen Ripley

Mr. Becker's room:
1st - Allison Ritts
2nd - Caitlin Connolly, Lily Faulhaber and Simeon Ketchum
3rd - Gina Rosano and Katie Ross

Crafts selected to all-star team

Jonathan Crafts

Jonathan Crafts of Cohasset has been selected to play on the Massachusetts Stars. The team will be coached by Ken Hodge, former Boston Bruin, and Vin Magno from Canton. Other South Shore players include Bobby Allen from Hull and Andrew Cibotti from Braintree.

The team was selected from players who play in the Metropolitan Boston Hockey League (MBHL). The league is made up of approximately 15 select teams which span as far west as Springfield, as far north as Lowell, and as far south as the Cape.

Crafts played this year for the Seahawks squirt A team, which lost only three regular season games.

He also played for an MBHL select team, St. Moritz, which plays out of Boston. St. Moritz plays teams state-wide and has only lost four regular season games in the past three years.

The Massachusetts Stars will play in Ottawa, Canada in late June. The tournament will feature the number one select teams from Montreal, Ottawa and Toronto, as well as select teams from Michigan, Illinois, Vermont and New York states.

Morgan said if elected he would promote joint meetings of the health board, sewer commission and other commissions. By working cooperatively, he hopes the town can find better solutions to common problems.

He cited his management background and commitment to the ordinary citizen as the strengths he would bring to the board.

"I'm looking to save the taxpayers money," Morgan said.

Cohasset lacrosse scores with assist by Lobel

By David McKee
Mariner staff

Every night you see his smiling face on your TV.

Usually he is joking with Liz Walker or showing yet another tongue-hanging, gravity-defying Michael Jordan dunk.

But last Friday night, WBZ-TV sportscaster Bob Lobel took time out of his busy schedule to participate in "A Night of Sports Talk" at the Cohasset Community Center with the proceeds slated for the Cohasset lacrosse team and the Friends of Cohasset School Sports.

Lobel spoke on a wide range of topics, from his view on the role of television in sports, to the recent controversy over the telecast rights for the Boston Marathon.

LET THE FUN BEGIN

Lobel, sipping on a Diet Coke and dressed in one of his best TV sports coats, strolled into the community center a little after eight o'clock with a stack of sports spotlight tapes in hand.

He patiently waited in the back as Patriot Ledger sports reporter and Cohasset resident, Ron Hobson, Lobel's warm-up, finished his talk on the perils of covering the Patriots for the past 20 years for the same newspaper.

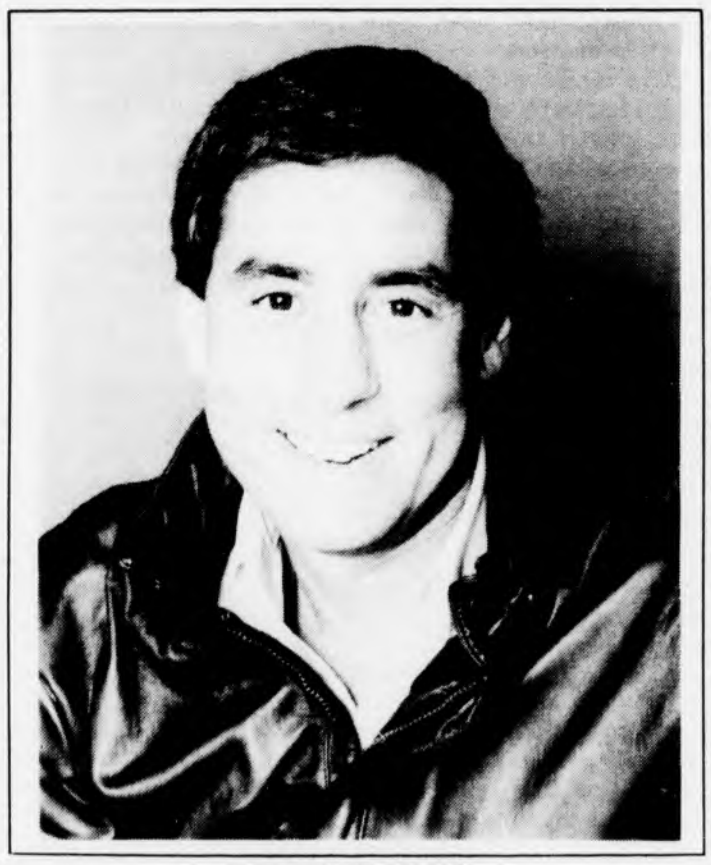
As Hobson introduced Lobel, he said, "I think I got 'em warmed up for you."

Lobel joked, "Yeah, I see you got 'em eating out of your hand."

For that line, Lobel received the first of many laughs throughout the evening.

Lobel began his talk on sports by commenting on the owners' lockout of major league baseball players, which at the time was still going on.

"I hope they decide it one way or the other and I hope they do it tonight," he said. "If I were to describe both sides, I'd say they're like two pigs at a trough."



He then spoke of the frustration of being a baseball fan.

"You can say, 'I as a fan will rebel and not go to Fenway because of this,'" he said. "But there will always be someone out there who will take your seat."

He was asked by Hobson if he would go to any sporting events if he didn't have to cover them for a living.

"Well, I haven't been covering sports my whole life," he said. "Before I was into teaching and education, but because food and shelter were important to me, I changed careers."

As the crowd laughed, Lobel said. "That's just a joke. But seriously, part of me would want to go. But maybe only one event a year."

Bob Lobel

Lobel then talked about what he thinks his task is as a sports anchor.

"I've always felt that it is much more entertainment than journalism," he said. "My job is to get people to watch sports, so I have to be much broader. And a way, I feel, to appeal to a broader audience is to use a sense of humor. After all, it's not brain surgery, it's only television."

Asked to give an opinion on the Red Sox as people, Lobel said, "The Red Sox are not a bunch of likeable guys collectively. But there are some nice people."

SERMON AT THE PODIUM

This question caused Lobel to launch into a self-described sermon on hero worship.

"Society puts a lot of people on pedestals for a lot of the wrong reasons," he said. "These people (athletes) are what they are. But just because they have some extraordinary ability doesn't mean you should emulate them. The pedestal should be reserved for those people sitting across from you at your table."

There was a smattering of applause after that line, and Lobel joked, "Well that's my sermon for the night, the collection plate will be around shortly."

Someone then sneezed in the audience and Lobel with mock piety retorted, "God bless you." Again the audience laughed.

Asked his opinions on the Celtics, Lobel said Larry Bird will never be traded from the team..

"Bird can be very difficult," he said. "And I think Red (Auerbach) is the only person (in management) that Larry respects. But I have never seen an athlete handle the media better."

Lobel was next asked about his views on the controversy surrounding the granting of the exclusive rights for the Boston Marathon to WBZ-TV.

"I love the marathon," he said. "It's three hours of fun and I'm thrilled about it. But, hey, I'm just a soldier in the army of Westinghouse. And if there's anything I've learned in this business, it's not to go swimming in shark-filled waters."

He did admit that if the rights had been granted to WCVB instead of WBZ, he would have been disappointed with his station's management.

After several more questions from the crowd, Lobel showed several videos of the "Best of Sports Spotlight" complete with his own narration.

The videos, which ran about 20 minutes, had the crowd laughing heartily and topped a fun filled evening of sports.

Though there were many funny highlights shown by Lobel, the best had to be the clip of a hockey referee picking his chewing gum off the ice and putting it back into his mouth, while simultaneously trying to break up a fight between two players.

At 9:30 p.m. Lobel had to go back to the station to get the 11 o'clock news ready, but that did not prevent the people in attendance from giving him a rousing round of applause when the videos were finished.

Community Center co-ed aerobics

"Keep Fit" classes are available at the Cohasset Community Center. They are held Thursday evenings from 7 to 8:15 pm and Saturday mornings at 8:30 am (90 minutes on Saturday).

This class in ongoing and you may join by the month or attend on a drop-in basis. Call 383-0088 to register or obtain more information.

New Friendships Major Ingredient In Living Patterns at Townhouses Of The Scituate Country Club

Residents at the Townhouses of the Scituate Country Club join together to help select decor for new model planned for the 36-unit community...."We all live here and the interior of the new model is important to all of us," explains resident Katie Coyman as she looks over the decoration book. "I am a sales executive and living here has made me happier than I have ever been. I enjoy my home, my walks around Third Cliff and I look forward to lots of golf this spring."..... Realtor Bob Mullin, at left, and his wife Millie, at right, are interested in the challenge of the new model as Professor Barbara Napoli, the newest resident of the community....."This is one of the friendliest places we have ever lived, " said Mullin. "Millie and I were the first residents to move in and we consider all of the 16 families here our new friends."

Key to success: hard work and big bucks

By David McKee
Mariner staff

Way back in the good old days, hard work was the only price a high school athlete had to pay to succeed on the field.

But those days are over.

Thanks to Prop. 2-1/2, and proposed state aid cutbacks, more than hard work is needed to make high school athletic teams on the South Shore these days.

What is needed is the "M-word"-money. And lots of it.

A sampling of South Shore towns, shows that user fees, fees paid by student-athletes after winning a spot on the roster of any high school team, are more the rule than the exception.

A few towns, such as Carver and Norwell don't have user fees, but there are others like Marshfield, that charge in the hundreds of dollars for something that used to be taken care of in taxes.

MONEY TALKS, PHILOSOPHY WALKS

"Philosophically I don't agree with user fees and so don't a lot of people," Scituate athletic director Paul Svensen said. "But if athletic departments want to survive, it's something they have to do."

Because of tight fiscal times, Scituate High School will start charging user fees next year for the first time ever.

"We've got to raise some money," Svensen said, "or some programs will be cut."

Marshfield High School principal Peter Deftos, whose school charges $148 per person per year to participate in athletics, said there is no other alternative.

"I feel it's a regressive double tax," he said. "Public schools and activities should be paid by public funds. But this is the last resort we have; it's this or nothing."

Deftos explained that the sports budget at Marshfield High was cut from $156,000 to $78,000 last year.

Asked what the sports program at Marshfield High would have been like if the user fee was not instituted, Deftos said, "It would have meant no freshman programs, no JV programs, no hockey at all, no tennis, no golf and no cross country.

And that's just last year. This year it would have been worse."

Deftos said that only a Prop. 2-1/2 override would eliminate the need for user fees.

"We anticipate taking in $60,000 from user fees," Deftos said. "At the present time we have received about $48,000, but spring sports are coming."

CUTTING TO THE BONE

Nobody wins if cuts have to be made in a school's athletic department.

Cohasset High School athletic director Clark Chatterton explained the dilemma faced when programs are forced to be cut.

"There are two schools of thought on making cuts," he said. "One is you cut the lower programs, like the freshman and JV teams

"But then two or three years down the road, the varsity program is eroded because you have no development of young talent.

"Or you just cut out a sport entirely like hockey or something. But either way there is going to be disappointment."

Chatterton says that user fees are here to stay and in the future will not be limited to just sports teams.

"I think you'll see this in not only athletics, but all extra-curricular activities," he said.

"Everyone's out there fighting for a piece of the dollar and with a 2-1/2 percent growth limit and an inflation rate of five percent, things will only get tighter."

IN THE LONG RUN

Hanover athletic director Harry Gerrish reluctantly supports user fees, but only if they don't continue to spiral.

"It's a way of doing things," he said. "But I can't see it continuing to rise. Right now it's an amount that a student can earn in a summer and pay without having to rely on his family.

"I was opposed to it, but we had to do something. I hate to have a kid pay to play. But when it comes down to playing or not, then I choose this."

Silver Lake athletic director Ralph Frazier, whose regional school has four towns supporting it, said the use of user fees must be watched.

"I think I'd rather have user fees than not have sports," he said. "But I'm concerned that the fees could inhibit kids from coming out for teams."

He explained that most schools are flexible in situations of financial need.

"I don't like it, but most kids can afford it right now," Frazier said. "And if you look at it, it's a pretty good deal to keep your kids involved for 10 to 12 weeks on an activity that will help them in a lot of ways in life."

Does Frazier think user fees are here to stay? "They've been here long before me," he said. "And they'll still be here after I'm gone."

Town	User fee per athlete
Carver	$0
Cohasset	$50 per season, no family limit.
Hanover	$75 for year, $125 family limit.
Hingham	$50 for year, no family limit.
Kingston	$70 for year, no family limit.
Marshfield	$148 for year, $222 family limit.
Norwell	$0
Pembroke	$70 for year, no family limit.

Historical homes progam

The Cohasset Historical Society will hold a special evening program Thursday, March 29th devoted to "The Care and Feeding of Your Early New England Home."

The speaker for the evening will be John Cole, architectural consultant and authority on the subject of early architecture, its maintenance and preservation. The event will be held at the Unitarian Parish House, North Main Street, at 7:30 PM.

Strawberry shortcake and coffee or tea will be served before the talk. If you would like to attend, you sould send advance reservations for the evening event to the society at 14 Summer Street, Cohasset. Reservations are $5 for society members, $6 for non-members. Please make checks payable to the Cohasset Historical Society.

Cole, an appraiser and marketing expert on historic New England homes, heads Cole & Associates, of Ipswich, Mass. He recently conducted a walking tour of Cohasset's town common area for the historical society, illustrating the early forms of New England architecture found at Cohasset's common.

Cole also is a consultant to the Society for the Preservation of New England Antiquities and to historical commissions of the eastern Massachusetts area.

Are you contemplating alterations or major home repairs to the inside or outside of your early New England home? Have you wondered whether or not you might be doing something that would adversely affect its value?

Is there a town-wide effect to these changes - either good or bad? If you would like the answers to these questions or have a general interest in the old houses of New England, make reservations for the historical society's special March 29 evening presentation.

New collection opens

The Cohasset Public Schools and the Paul Pratt Memorial Library have announced the opening of the Early Childhood Resource Collection for books and materials.

The ECRC will be housed in the Paul Pratt Memorial Library in the children's room.

This project is funded through a federal grant that provides support to young children, with and without special needs, their families and early childhood providers.

The ECRC will open during the week of April 2 - 9, to celebrate the Week of the Young Child, sponsored by the National Association for the Education of Young Children.

The topic of the celebration is "Quality Child Care: Good Beginnings Never End." An open house will be held at the library Tuesday, April 3 to launch the collection.

Books and guides on a variety of subjects will be available for loan to families, early childhood providers, and other interested individuals. Topics include: current trends in early childhood, families with young children, parenting, curriculum planning, special education, young children and play, integration in schools, and administration of early childhood programs.

Hands-on materials such as Etch-a-Sketch, small blocks, Lite Brite, and flannelboard stories also will be available for loan.

An annotated bibliography will be available at the library and the superintendent of schools office at 143 Pond Street. The bibliography also will be distributed to early childhood programs in Cohasset.

Time for Easter Egg hunt

The Cohasset recreation department will conduct the 14th annual Easter Egg Hunt for children 3 to 11 years of age, Saturday, April 14, at noon at the Deer Hill School field.

This year, there is again the distinct possibility that the Easter Bunny and helpers will be on hand.

Children will be divided into three separate chronological groups:

Group 1. Ages 3 and 4 (with parent)
Group 2. Ages 5 - 7
Group 3. Ages 8 - 11
Children younger than three also may attend, but with at least one parent

This year's program sponsors are: Cohasset Rotary Club, Veteran's of Foreign Wars - Post 9146, American Legion Post 118, the Cohasset Police Association and the Cohasset Chamber of Commerce.

Rain date will be Saturday, April 21 at noon at the Deer Hill School field.

During the past few years, the Easter Bunny and helpers have visited Cohasset residents who are hospitalized or homebound, during the Easter season.

Should you know of anyone that you feel could benefit from a visit by the Easter Bunny and helpers, you may call either the recreation department office at 383-6791 or Mrs. Manuel Salvador, and in either case, arrangements will be made.

Candidates corner . . .

Jane Goedecke

During a recent coffee hour, Jane Goedecke, candidate for Cohasset's board of selectmmmen, was asked for her position on the MBTA's proposed expansion through Cohasset.

"While I am strongly in favor of improved public transportation for Cohasset, the questions of environmental impact and cost still must be answered"

"I will be following the hearings and reading the reports and urge all Cohasset residents to do the same," Goedecke said during a neighborhood gathering in the home of John and Nancy Kinchla.

The MBTA's expansion plan report, which is not yet public, should be available for inspection soon at the Cohasset Public Library. Public hearings on the matter will be held in April.

Goedecke is running for election to one of two seats available on the Cohasset board of selectmen during the April 14 town elections.

Goedecke supporters are offering a series of get-acquainted coffees for the candidate. Upcoming this week, opportunities available include a coffee Sunday, March 25 from 7:30 to 9:30 PM for Fair Oaks Lane and Sohier Street residents hosted by Sue McNamara and Beth Christoffel, both of Fair Oaks Lane.

On Tuesday, March 27, Laura and Terry Atherton of Clay Spring Road will host a coffee beginning at 8 PM. The following day, Wednesday, March 28, Susan and Wilson Pile of Elm Street will invite friends and neighbors to meet Goedecke beginning at 7:30 PM.

Persons interested in attending one of these coffees to meet candidate Goedecke may call Sarah Pease at 383-1406.

John McNabb

John K. McNabb, Jr., a candidate for Cohasset board of health, urged the board to ban the disposal of de-regulated radioactive wastes in Cohasset.

"Low-level radioactive wastes do not belong in solid-waste landfills, transfer stations, or incinerators," McNabb said. "However, that is just where they will end up if the Nuclear Regulatory Commission goes ahead with its plan to deregulate about one-third of the low-level radioactive wastes from nuclear power plants.

"The regulation I propose would help protect Cohasset residents from the potential cancer-causing effects of low-level radiation," McNabb said. "We must keep these nuclear wastes out of Cohasset."

McNabb noted that the regulation he proposes is carefully drafted to avoid some of the problems other towns have faced with such prohibitions. For example, it affects only radioactive wastes which come from government facilties or from facilities licensed by the US government - and will not affect radium watches, smoke detectors, television sets, and other common household items which have small amounts of radioactivity.

"This regulation will help protect public health," McNabb said, "and should be adopted. The very least we will accomplish by passing this regulation is to help send a message to the NRC that low-level nuclear wastes don"t belong in landfills."

Half of all arrests involve drugs

By Alison Cohen
Mariner staff

If things go as Police Chief Joseph Kealey wants, Cohasset should see a reduction in the amount of illegal drug and alcohol use, an improvement in traffic safety and the updating of traffic regulations, installation of a 911 system, and computerization of police department records.

Kealey told selectmen at Monday night's meeting at least half the arrests the department makes involve drugs or alcohol to some extent.

"I still think alcohol is the biggest problem, and it's appearing in younger and younger people," he said. "Our arrests are about 10 to 1 alcohol, as opposed to drugs."

He recommended that the town and school system beef up drug and alcohol education among school children and adults.

"I believe the education should start at home and in the schools and should be done by educators," Kealey said. "By the time we see the kids, it's too late."

The Chief endorsed the notion of a permanent town committee on drug and alcohol abuse to "keep the issue in the forefront of public attention."

He also told the selectmen that too often citizens do not realize or respect the constraints the police department must operate under.

"We are a law enforcement agency. We have to do things legally," he said. "We can't knock down doors just because someone suspects drug activity is going on."

Kealey wants to install a 911 system now rather than wait forever for the Legislature to implement the enhanced 911 system.

"We can't wait any longer," he said. "If E-911 comes in, then we can always change over."

Kealey is not in favor of the use of civilian dispatchers by the police and fire departments.

"Why spend $125,000 to hire civilian dispatchers (for 24-hour coverage)," he said. Instead of dealing with a new series of negotiations over salary and benefits-- and the possibility of a new union, Kealey recommended spending the money on additional officers.

A traffic update was also high on Kealey's list of things to do.

He suggested that the department compile accident statistics and have Norfolk County survey problem areas for traffic safety.

Updating the regulations themselves was also on his mind, reminding selectmen that traffic rules and regulations hadn't been revised since September 1967.

"We still have rules that say 'no parking in front of Johnny Jones' house on Atlantic Avenue with no house number and three families may have come and gone," he said.

"We have 23 years of updating to do."

Kealey said he would be working with the town clerk's office to pull together all the rules and regulations that have be passed in the past two decades.

Keeping up with another sort of paperwork was also high on Kealey's list of goals and objectives.

"The paperwork we generate is considerable," Kealey said. "Everything calls for a report."

Kealey wants his officers able to do all their reports on computer.

Kealey joked that he wanted to get into the 20th century before the 21st century rolls in.

After hearing Kealey's presentation, the selectmen voted unanimously to accept the goals he had laid out.

Schools harvest big Apple crop

By Alison Cohen
Mariner staff

Cohasset schools harvested a bumper crop of Apples over the past six months.

Patricia Baird, president of the Parent School Organization, said the Cohasset school system garnered $2.34 million in Stop & Shop and Bradlees register tapes to be exchanged for computer equipment and software.

"So far, we have ordered seven Apple II C+ systems, three MAC plus systems and four Apple IIGS systems," Baird said. "We will order another five more computers tomorrow."

In addition to the complete computer systems, Baird said that the PSO has submitted orders for nine disk drives and an assortment of software.

According to the Stop & Shop company, Cohasset did better by far than any other town in southeastern Massachusetts.

Baird said the secret of Cohasset's success is that they tackled the project on a town-wide basis rather than pitting school against school.

"We had the entire town behind us," Baird said. "We received tapes from the senior citizens center, town hall employees, church goers and library patrons."

Every single one of the tapes passed through Baird's hands on the way to the computer exchange. Baird isn't really anxious to see that particular shade of pink again too soon-- but she said all the work was worth it.

"We never would have acquired all those computers for our school system," she said, "and it didn't cost the taxpayers a cent."

The tapes had to be bundled into groups of $1,000, then batched into groups of $10,000 and finally put into bags representing $50,000 worth of tapes.

Officials wrestle with '91 budget

By Alison Cohen
Mariner staff

With town meeting hovering near, the selectmen continue to fine tune the budget.

At Monday night's meeting they wrestled with several recommendations from the advisory committee.

The advisory committee recommended a three percent cost of living increase for non-union personnel. This was in conflict with the two percent raise recommended by personnel committee.

Selectman Rocco Laugelle was emphatic that

'Earth Day' evolving into 'Earth Month'

By Alison Cohen
Mariner staff

They say that things have a way of expanding to fill the time available. For Cohasset, that means that Earth Day is slowly and surely turning into Earth Month.

The Earth Day committee is planning a wide variety of events to focus attention on the environment and what can be done to protect it.

The committee plans on asking the selectmen to declare April "Earth Month". Residents will be asked to "take the pledge"to do their part to save the planet.

Earth Month is being kicked-off, appropriately enough, on Sunday, April 1 with a performance at First Parish Meeting House that begins at 4 p.m.

The festival features Evi Seidman, the "stand up environmentalist" with special guest Barbara Herson, who mixes puppetry and music in a presentation called Earthtunes.

Seidman and Herson came to the attention of the Earth Day committee when committee members saw them performing at an educational conference.

Both performers have a unique and entertaining way of raising consciousness about the need to protect the environment while there's still an environment to protect.

There is no charge for the performance.

Many community groups and organizations are getting deeply involved, according to Sharon Becker of the Earth Day committee.

The committee developed lesson plans for use at the schools to get the students involved. Students have also developed projects of their own.

Students at Deer Hill are developing individual

Sailor, take warning

Local boaters with the great good fortune to hold a town mooring need to circle April 2 in red. That's the date by which their mooring fees must be paid or else.

According to the treasurer/collector's office, the mooring fees are actually due on April 1. Because that day falls on a Sunday, they will accept payments made by 4:30 p.m. on April 2.

"That means in hand, not postmarked," warned an assistant collector.

Delinquent payers-- and that includes checks returned for insufficient funds-- can kiss their mooring good-bye.

No demands for payment have been sent by the treasurer/collector's office.

"The bills were sent out three months ago and a legal notice was placed in the Ledger," an assistant collector said. "That's ample notice."

McAllister off cable panel

Donald McAllister resigned from the town's cable television council March 10 "because of the increased demands on my schedule."

McAllister, who served on the council from its inception, said he enjoyed serving and would consider participation in the future should time permit.

Why your paper was late

We're sorry that your paper was a day late last week. Here's why.

Our delivery truck was making its rounds in the early-morning hours last week when the driver came upon a pile of gravel that had been spilled on Route 3.

The driver swerved to avoid it, but the truck went off the road and into some bushes in the soft shoulder.

There was no damage or injury, but the delay in waiting for a tow truck to pull our truck back on the road made the papers late in arriving at the Post Office.

We apologize for any inconvenience the delay might have caused.

Spring forward, fall back

Daylight Savings Time officially begins at 2 a.m. Sunday, April 1, as the hour hand on the clock is moved 60 minutes ahead, presumably to provide an extra hour of sunlight to farmers.

Remember, set the clock ahead one hour when you go to bed Saturday night, and avoid the embarrassment of finding yourself an hour behind everybody else on Sunday morning.

It won't be an April Fool's Day joke.

Fuel adjustment rises

The state Department of Public Utilities has approved an increase in the fuel adjustment portion of Eastern Edison Company bills for March, April and May.

Separately, Eastern Edison is waiting for a one-month reduction in the wholesale component of its energy charge calculation on customer bills during April.

A residential customer using 500 kilowatt hours of electricity would see a 35 cent increase in the March bill, a 49 cent decrease in April and a 35 cent increase in March, according to Eastern Edison.

The price is adjusted to reflect the accurate costs of the fuels used to generate electricity and the prices it pays its wholesale supplier, Montaup Electric Co., for electricity.

Eastern Edison said the fuel charge increase resulted from higher costs paid by Montaup for fuels burned to generate electricity.

Who's on "Pierson"

When "Pierson to Person" airs Thursday, March 29, Joseph R. McElroy, co-chairman of the Curtis House Committee, will be on hand to discuss the work of the committee, Alzheimer's disease and the need for a South Shore facility for patients with Alzheimer's.

Shirley C. Kehoe will be the second guest on the show.

Kehoe is a member of the board of directors of Grandparents as Parents (GAP) and will also be talking about her daughter's drug addiction.

The program is hosted by Wigmore Pierson and airs each Thursday night from 8 to 9 p.m. on Continental Cablevision.

Cohasset residents can catch Pierson and his guests on channels 3 and 53.

Residents of Hanover, Hingham, Norwell and Scituate can watch Pierson and his guests on channel 53.

Reach out and look it up

It might strike some as an embarrassment of riches and others as a failure by businesses to do their homework, but if no one backs out, Cohasset residents may have four phone books cluttering their counters.

Currently, the telephone company delivers a regional directory and the Rotary Club publishes a Cohasset-only phone book as a fundraiser. It would seem that a would-be dialer could find just about any number needed, but at least two companies are soliciting ads from local businesses for a Scituate-Cohasset book they tout as the new Manning phone book.

Efforts to reach spokesmen for the two companies have been unsuccessful, but local merchants aren't thrilled about all the soliciting.

Mark Cirone, president of the Rotary Club, doesn't think a commercial venture will hurt the fundraising efforts of the club.

"We finished soliciting for our ads," he said. "And people are familiar with our local phone book."

Cirone said all profits from the Rotary's phone book go to scholarships for Cohasset seniors. Last year, the Rotary gave away more than $18,000.

The Rotary's new edition is expected to come off the presses on or about the third week in May.

"We mail it free to every household in Cohasset," Cirone said.

Additional copies of the directory will be available at a minimal charge by writing to the Rotary at P.O Box 36, Cohasset, MA 02025.

New copy deadline!!!

Within the next few weeks, the Cohasset Mariner will be going to fully computerized pagination. New technology is great, but it means a change in the rules.

From here on out, anything submitted for publication must be in by mail, rail or drop-box by 12 p.m. (HIGH NOON) on Mondays. We can not guarantee publication of anything submitted after that time.

All submittals must be typed and include a name and phone number for verification.

Bumper Apple crop for schools . . .

Baird had help getting the tapes together. Robin Balch and Kathy Hernberg from the resource room rewarded children by letting them help out on the computer project. The children got to operate the calculator and bundle up the tapes.

Baird also singled out Olga Nohe, Beth Christoffel, and Sue Brister from the PSO and Diana Kinch from the church groups for their hard work on the project.

"And Janice Crowley helped organize the project and set up the bookkeeping system," Baird said.

Totalling the tapes revealed some interesting things.

Cohasset collected tapes from Cape Cod, Connecticut and Rhode Island. Someone bought $350 worth of groceries in one fell swoop, and lots of people go to Stop & Shop for a cup of coffee and a doughnut.

"And somebody in town hall bought a lot of cat food," Baird said.

All those tapes-- the beentsy ones as well as the biggies-- went into making up that $2 million bonanza.

All the schools will benefit from the computer windfall. The Apple II C+ systems will be used primarily at the elementary school level and in the resource room, the MAC plus systems will be used in the foreign language lab, the math lab and the English lab, while the Apple IIGS systems will be spread around evenly.

"The IIGS has really good sound quality," Baird said. "The elementary student who has cerebral palsy has been using one. It really makes a big difference for her."

Baird said the school had thought out the computer purchases carefully.

"They could have ordered 23 or so of the lesser systems, but they tailored their orders to their needs and the uses the computers would be put to," she said.

Although understandably weary of pink, Baird said it was a positive experience.

"Stop & Shop needs to be commended for thinking about this and helping the children," she said. "And the entire town should pat itself on the back."

pledges, while Osgood students are making a bulletin board.

The high school has scheduled a full calendar of events. Students will be running a logo contest, an art contest and devoting energy to recycling.

Other activities include a locomotion day when students will be challenged to get to school by any method except car. To help them along, alternative high school director Jack Buckley will be holding a clinic to teach students how to tune up their bicycle.

The garden clubs in Cohasset are getting involved as well.

The Cohasset Garden Club donated funds to plant a tree on the common. Club member Barbara Power will be meeting with tree and parks department head Peter Laugelle to choose just the right tree for the common.

The club has designs on the grounds at Osgood School as well. Osgood will be benefitting from their green thumbs during the month.

The Amateur Garden Club will tackle the barren spots around town hall.

The largest of the garden clubs, the Community Garden Club, will be planting trees in the Courtyard for Honoring at the high school. Constitution Park should be sprouting a new look by Earth Day- - the club plans to complete the second phase of the park by that date.

All residents and organizations will be offered the opportunity to "adopt a site". Participants will be able to pick a spot in town to maintain and keep clean of litter throughout the year.

The Earth Day Committee has planned workshops featuring the North River Watershed Association discussing water protection on April 11 at

First Parish events

The service of worship Sunday, April 1 will feature a 9:30 a.m. choir rehearsal at the meeting house a 10:30 a.m. service of worship also at the meeting house and 10:30 a.m. church school at the Parish House.

Flowers will be given by Galt and Sue Grant.

The sermon is "We are Fools for Christ's Sake" and the music is "Adoramus Te Mozart" and "Cantique de Jean" by Racine.

At 11:30 a.m. there will be a coffee hour at the meeting house with hostess Carol Martin.

Child care is provided in the carriage house during the service.

On April 22 members and friends of First Parish are encouraged to go to the town common at 2 p.m. for a tree planting ceremony and then depart to collect litter from various sites around the town.

At 4 p.m. those participating will regather at the transfer station where trash and recyclables will be collected and where there will be a brief closing ceremony.

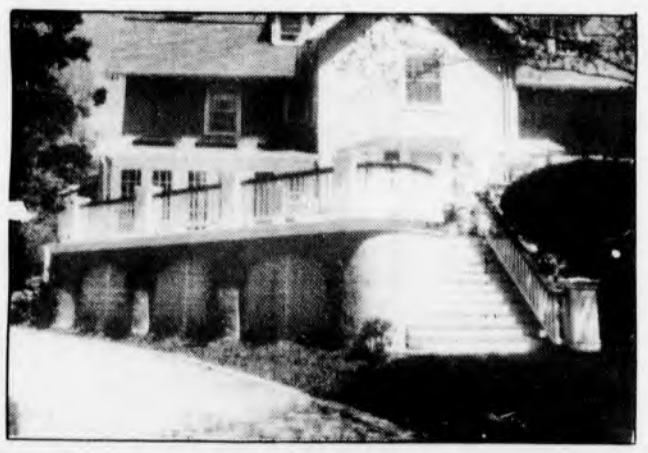
This activity will be the religious education program for that Sunday. A kick-off event in preparation for Earth Day will be held at the meeting house at 4 p.m. April 1.

The music and worship committee will meet Sunday, April 1 at 8 p.m. in the parish house.

The garden committee has started planning for the renovation of the box garden to the side of the parish house.

This will necessitate replacing the current overgrown box and replacing it in a similar configuration. If anyone has any thoughts on this project, please call Linda Gardner, 383-9881.

The First Parish talent show "Act-Out Cabaret II" is coming Saturday, May 5. Talent is needed.



High school youths will meet Sunday evening April 1 at 7 p.m. in the Parish House living room to plan a fund-raising brunch to be served April 8 following the Palm Sunday service of worship by trying our hand at cooking some pancakes.

Schools face disaster, Hart warns

By John Magadieu
Mariner staff

As town meeting approaches, the school committee is continuing to press its case for overriding Proposition 2-1/2.

In an exclusive interview with the Mariner Friday, Superintendent Stephen Hart warned that the Cohasset school system could be teetering on the brink of disaster.

While educational costs have risen, he said, the state has made significant cuts in its so-called chapter 70 expenditures, aid for local education.

In 1986, Hart said, the state picked up the tab for a little more than 36 percent of the cost of education to communities throughout the state. This year, the state is picking up just shy of 27 percent. In Cohasset last year, the state reimbursed the town 19 percent of the cost of education; this year it is reimbursing the town only 13 percent.

Hart said there also have been dramatic reductions in other programs the state has supported in the past, such as reimbursement for school transportation costs, school improvement council funding and the Horace Mann grant enrichment programs.

These reductions in aid come at a time when the school population is about to go on the upswing, according to Hart. The growth in Cohasset's school population is projected to be 12.8 percent through 1994. That figure places Cohasset's growth rate al nearly double the statewide projection.

"This is just an explanation of why we have to rely on local funding," Hart said. "We're looking for people to influence their legislators to restore the aid back to what it was last year."

Hart also hopes his explanation will help the voters understand why the school department is looking for a 5.1 percent increase in its budget for next year; he noted that the advisory committee will recommend the increased budget.

Selectmen spare rosa rugosa at vets park

By Alison Cohen
Mariner staff

Flower power proved to be stronger than stone at March 26 selectmen's meeting. Consequently, the rosa rugosa will live to bloom again at Veterans' Memorial Park this summer.

Selectmen voted 3 to 2 to spare the rosa. Defending the beach rose despite its prickly personality were selectmen Martha Gjesteby, Diana Kornet and Ned Tebbets.

Gjesteby raised the subject, saying, "I've heard from members of the garden clubs and had humorous messages left on my answering machine."

Gjesteby said she made a site visit and supported keeping the rosa rugosa in place.

"The debris needs to be cleaned up, but the flowers are indigenous," she said. "It's part of the environment."

Kornet agreed.

"The hedge is unsightly at this season," Kornet said. "It's a prickly row of things you wouldn't want to fall into with your bike, but things change."

Kornet proposed postponing a decision until the the hedges bloom.

"We do need to keep it clean," she said. She recommended the park be assigned to a volunteer group as part of Earth Day's "adopt a site" program.

Selectman Rocco Laugelle was unmoved.

"It's nothing but a mess," he complained. "Paul Berry's dump up there looks cleaner."

Laugelle made it clear that he had nothing against flowers in general or rosa rugosa in specific.

"It really comes in handy at Sandy Beach," he said. "It holds back the sand."

Chairman Burtram Pratt suggested a compromise move that would remove the rosa in the front section and replace it with granite pillars, mulch and seasonal plantings.

He said his plan was in keeping with similar parks in the area, such as Governor's Island.

"Governor's Island needs some rosa," retorted Gjesteby.

Robert Davenport suggested that combining the pillars and chains with the rosa would prevent people cutting through the rosa hedges and causing them to look so scraggly and disreputable. His suggestion fell on deaf ears.

Ultimately the vote came down to a life or death decision for the lowly beach rose.

Let it be said that although the petals may be fragile, the plant endures through wind and salt and selectmen's votes.

The bells of St. Stephen ring out merry tunes under the deft hand of carillonneur Sally Slade Warner.

Introducing the 2-Step Adjustable Rate Mortgage at Quincy Savings Bank.

If you're a first-time home buyer or a professional who relocates frequently, chances are you'll sell your home within the next seven years. And if you do plan on being in your home for less than seven years, Quincy Savings has a new mortgage in step with your plans. Called the 2-Step Adjustable Rate Mortgage, it could save you thousands of dollars on your next mortgage.

How it works

For the first seven years, your 2-Step Adjustable Rate Mortgage has a below market fixed rate. After seven years, your interest rate will be adjusted to a fixed market rate that will be in effect for the remaining 23 years of the loan.

The 2-Step Adjustable Rate Mortgage at Quincy Savings gives you the lowest possible monthly mortgage payment. Plus it increases the amount of house you can afford. For example, if you're looking at homes in the $150,000 range, you could save more than $3000 over the next 7 years. (Or you could buy a home that costs $5000 more right now.)*

For more information, stop by your nearest Quincy Savings Bank. Or call (617) 471-3500 and ask about our new 2-Step Adjustable Rate Mortgage. It's the mortgage in step with the times.

*Based on 80% financing.

Avoid chemicals in readying your lawn

By Alix White
Special to the Mariner

Tip of the week: lawn care

It is time to prepare your lawn for the many months of play and entertainment that you and your family will be expecting from your "outdoor room."

If you have young children and pets, chemical treatments are dangerous and, in the long run, they are expensive and build up the thatch in your lawn.

For a healthy lawn, develop healthy earth.

If you are not sure about your soil, get a soil test. If your lawn is acidic, apply lime now (although fall applications are best.).

Be sure to tune up your lawn mower. Sharpen its blades before you need to mow.

Trouble-shooting at the RTF: new programs

Plastic: plastic containers from milk, water, juice, detergent, shampoo, cleaning agents, antifreeze, motor oil containers (reasonably clean) can be placed in the special bin.

The bin is in the transfer station now-- ask for directions if you don't see it.

Used clothing: clean, usable, wearable clothing may be brought to the box in the Boutique.

This is an Explorer Scout's project. The clothes are taken to the Pine Street Inn.

Used waste oil: preparations are being made for a waste oil container at the RTF. Watch this space for more information.

At home, save your oil in capped jugs-- even that little bit from your lawn mower. More oil has been spilled by homeowners improperly disposing of their waste oil than was spilled by the EXXON Valdez.

Note

If you drive to the South Station area on a regular basis, could you take a load of clothes to Pine Street Inn during your lunch break?

We need extra drivers to make this project work. If you can help, please call Arthur Lehr at 383-0388.

Steel & tin cans (also called bi-metal): cans from food & coffee, non-returnable beverage and pet food cans with labels are acceptable.

Rinse the cans or soak overnight a dishpan.

Aerosol and paint cans cannot be recycled.

Bi-metal cans are magnetic, aluminum cans aren't.

Internships open at N. E. Wildlife Center

The New England Wildlife Center in Hingham now is taking applications for summer internship openings for both aviculturists (bird-rearing) and bird of prey handlers.

The internships are open to college and high school students. The aviculturist intern will assist center staff with the rearing of orphaned songbirds and other bird species.

The bird of prey handler will assist the staff in the presentaiton of education programs at area zoos. Training is provided and no previous experience is necessary.

The minimum time commitment for these internships is eight weeks. The New England Wildlife Center is located at 19 Fort Hill St., Hingham. For more information contact Vicky Smythe, program director, at the NEWC office, 749-5387 from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. Sunday through Friday.

Around town

With Sallyann Chatterton

❑ Remember the wonderful evening that I told you about a few weeks ago? It was an event to honor football players, hosted by the Quarterback Club of New England.

Well, there were some Cohasset people that took advantage of a wonderful event with their sons...Pat McCarthy, John Rolandelli, John Bishop, John Conroy and Jim Theriault all were present for the awards ceremony, and saw Paul Farren receive his Cappelletti Award, a thrill for them as much as for Paul! We hear that the dinner was grand, the company superb, and the hole night was a success.

We'll bet that Mr. and Mrs. Farren, Paul's mom and dad, were delighted to be there too! It was quite an honor to receive, and everyone is proud of you, Paul!!

❑ Speaking of events, there was a lovely shower held for Jeannine Pompeo at the Lothrop House last weekend, and all the attendees are still talking about it!

One of the highlights was the wonderful idea that Ann Pompeo had... she displayed her Mother's wedding dress, along with her accesories, right by the front door as people walked in.

Mimi was so thrilled! The food was superb, the bride-to-be really was radiant, and the house itself was super!

The town is so lucky to have access to a place like that, and the things of historical memories are a treasure indeed!

Congratulations go to Jeannine...and to her able bridesmaids who put together a smashing success.

❑ It is time to tell you about Cohasset Talks, and Wigmore Pierson's guests for the month of April (where did February go?).

Thursday, April 5 sbould be an informative meeting for all of us. Wig's guests will hold a debate... Jane Geodecke, Martha Gjesteby and Burt Prattt, all candidates for selectmen will be debating, it should be good!

Once again this year, there will be all-day coverage of the Cohasset Town Meeting (and it will be televised if there need to he any further meetings).

On Thursday, April 12, there will be a review on upcoming town overrides and the candidates for Town offices.

On Saturday April 14 at 7p.m. they will begin coverage of the election results, and go on until conclusion-live and direct from the Town Hall.

That is quite an agenda, please tune in! Wigmore Pierson does a great job of keeping us informed, take full advantage.

❑ We are happy to report that Ruth Silvia is feeling a lot better and we hope that she will be home real soon!

❑ Congratulations to Bob Cunningham and Sue Whitaker at the birth of their baby girl.

❑ After writing about Dick Poland last week, it is with a great deal of pleasure that I tell you that he is home! You may have seen his picture on the front page of the Quincy Patriot Ledger last week, we sure were glad to! Here's to a speedy recovery, Dick!

❑ The Beechwood Congregational Church is holding its annual election supper on Wednesday, April 4 at the church at 6:30 p.m.

The dinner will include roast beef, mashed potatoes, green beans harvard beets, cole slaw, rolls, dessert and coffee. Tickets cost $6.95 for adults and children are half price.

You have to make reservations so call 545-3447.

❑ It sure is nice to see Bob Pape "around town" again. Bob spent a lttle time in Florida, and he sure looks wonderful!

❑ Congratulations go to Mary Ellen Neagle, who received an award recently at a company convention. Mary Ellen works for the Jack Conway Company, and won for negotiating the most sales and listing the most property in Cohasset during 1989.

❑ Speaking of women in the business world, theee members of the Cohasset Savings Bank workers were promoted to supervisory positions recently.

Barbara Caldwell was named assistant manager of the main office in Cohasset, Joni Reynolds was named head teller of the main office in Cohasset, and Maria Saldi was named head teller at the North Scituate office of the bank.

Congratulations ladies!

❑ Congratulations go to Jonathan Crafts, who certainly has made a name for himself in the hockey world! He was selected to play on the Massachusetts Stars, a team coached by Ken Hodge. The Massachusetts Stars will play in Ottawa Canada in late June, and the tournament will feature the numer one select teams from Montreal, Ottawa and Toronto, as well as select teams from Michigan, Illinois, Vernont and New York!

We hope to hear more about the whole thing, Jonathan, in the meantime you are a winner in our eyes!!

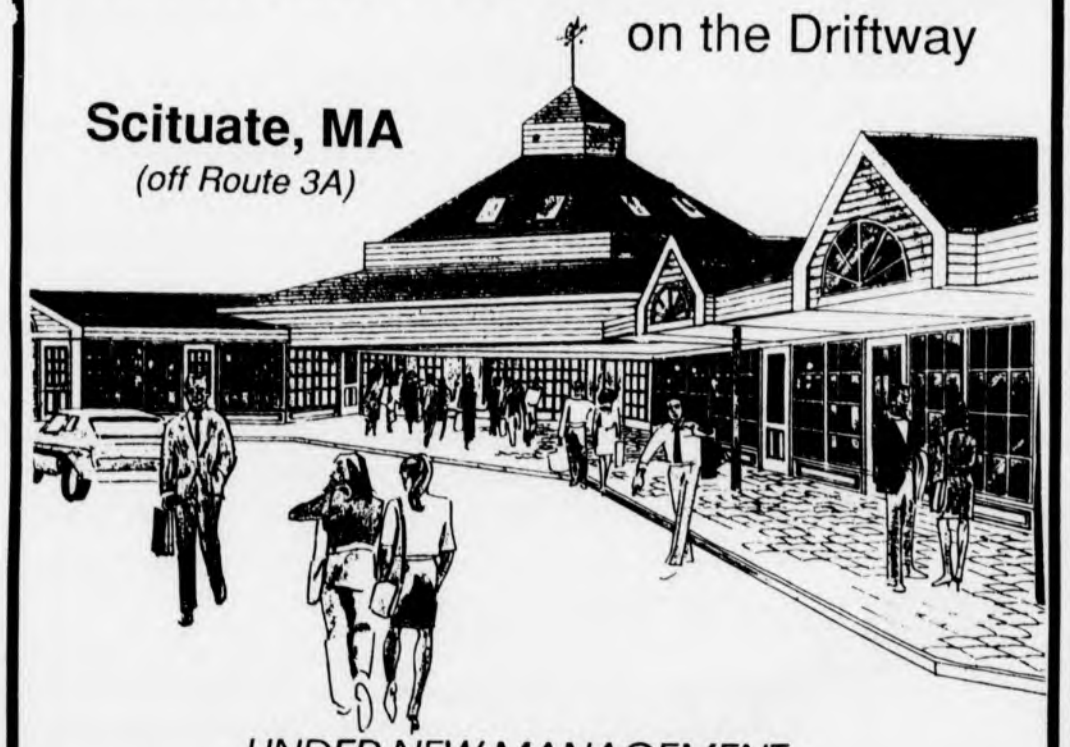
❑ Be sure to mark April 14 on your calendars moms and Dads, that is the date for the 14th annual easter egg hunt sponsored by the recreation department. It will be at noon at the Deer Hill School field. There is a rain-date, April 21. Have fun!

Derek Thayer makes a tug boat at the C.H.S. "Evening of Living Arts."

Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence A. Willwerth Jr. of 381 Jerusalem Road are proud to announce the birth of their granddaughter, Sondra Rose Hart, on March 11.

Sondra's parents are Mark Hart and Jean Marie Willwerth-Hart of Nantucket.

Paternal grandparents are Mr. and Mrs. John Hart of Cambridge.



❑ Don't forget to set your clocks this weekend to "spring ahead." And call he with your latest news!!

Goedecke outlines issues

At a March 20 coffee hosted by Margaret Cotter and Judy Simons and attended by many Cohasset newcomers and young mothers, candidate for Selectman Jane Goedecke carefully explained the complicated workings of Town Meeting, the over-ride ballot, and why the ballot for the over-ride is coming before the Town Meeting. She also emphasized the importance of being an informed voter and attending Town Meeting.

Goedecke outlined what she considers to be the major issues of this campaign, responded to questions regarding the fiscal state of the town, Proposition 2 1/2, and the role of the assessors.

If elected to the Board of Selectmen, she would like to see strong leadership in contract negotiations, more focus on long-range planning and creative solutions to town planning, and further consideration of regionalization of various equipment, resources, and purchasing.

Upcoming coffees are planned as follows: Thursday, March 29, 7:30 p.m. at the home of Rhonda and Michael Myers on Cedar Lane and Monday, April 2, at the home of Katherine and Paul Lemieux, 7:30 p.m.

Please call Eileen Corbet at 383-6467 if you are interested in attending.

McNabb eyes landfill

John K. McNabb, Jr., candidate for Cohasset Board of Health, recently called for increased scrutiny of the Cohasset Heights Landfill.

"The Board of Health must require sufficient groundwater monitoring to ensure that leachate from Cohasset Heights does not reach Lily Pond," McNabb said. "Increased efforts are also needed to prevent odors from the landfill operation.

"I am also concerned that the Board has not yet required Cohasset Heights to provide the financial security needed to pay for the control of potential pollution from the landfill after CHL goes out of business," he said.

"We also need to pay attention to plans CHL has to construct new landfills," McNabb noted. "CHL is in the process of preparing an Environmental Impact Report (EIR) for construction of a 27.5 acre new landfill in "Area 5" on Scituate Hill in Cohasset," said McNabb.

"CHL has also purchased other properties in the area of Scituate Hill and along Route 3A, including the former 'Deck Point' property," he said. "If CHL is planning to eventually site additional landfills beyond Area 5," said McNabb, "Cohasset could become famous — or infamous — as the home of the "dump mile."

Flynn holds fundraiser

Rep. William J. Flynn, Jr. of Weymouth, candidate for state senator in the Norfolk/Plymouth district, had a political fundraiser on Wednesday, March 14.

"The turnout was even better than I had anticipated," Flynn said. I saw a lot of familiar faces and met many people who are interested in getting involved with the Flynn for state senator campaign.

"Although, I realize that raising money is an integral part of a campaign, I want to concentrate on the issues of this campaign," he said.

"Our campaign is going to be a grass-roots campaign involving volunteers with the guiding principal of this campaign being serving the public interest not the special interest.

"If we can prevail in this effort, then any man or woman can aspire to political office and be successful. This election should be decided by the voters in the towns of Cohasset, Duxbury, Hingham, Hull, Marshfield, Scituate and Weymouth, not by outside, special interest," he said.

Senate hopefuls to debate

All four candidates for the Norfolk-Plymouth state senate race have accepted Rep. Robert B. Ambler's invitation to debate, according to Ambler's campaign coordinator Ted Wheeler.

"We've had positive responses from all the opposing campaigns and I am anticipating a very exciting event." Wheeler said. "The candidates are all quite diverse, with opinions on all ends of the spectrum. The debate will serve as an excellent forum for the public to hear all the candidates and their platforms."

Rep. Ambler will be joined in the debate by Rep. Bill Flynn (D-Hanover), former Marshfield school committee member John Creed and Weymouth selectman Brian McDonald.

Clarification

Jane Goedecke, candidate for selectman, issued the following clarification to the profile published in last week's Mariner:

"In discussing the financial constraints on the town, I believe I said that the challenge is to maintain the character of Cohasset and try to reduce expenditures without harming essential services.

And in the interest of peace in my family, may I correct the ages of my children. My son, Sam, is 11 and my daughter, Maggie, is 9, not the other way around."

Editorial

Please do your duty

Around the world, from Nicaragua to Hungary to China, people have been willing to live and die for a right we boast about but seldom exercise-- the right to vote.

If you were supposed to register to vote by March 16, but forgot, got sidetracked or had more important things to do, shame on you.

Although it is too late for you to register to vote in the town election on April 14, go register now so you can vote in September.

According to Frances Mark, 47 new voters did register. Most of them were high school students, brought out by a voter registration drive at the school.

Mark also said that independents led the pack, leaving Democrats and Republicans in the dust.

Now, for those of you who are registered, but who plan to be anywhere but Cohasset on election day, getting an absentee ballot should be as much a part of your vacation plans as packing the suitcase.

Getting an absentee ballot is one of the easiest things you'll ever do.

First, go to the town clerk's office or send a letter requesting an absentee ballot.

If you send a letter, be sure to include your name, your legal address, the address you want the ballot mailed to and your signature.

If you fill out the application in the office, you will be able to cast your vote on the spot.

If you are voting by mail, return your ballot quickly. According to Mark, she must have the ballot in hand on election day.

Mark stressed that means in the office on April 14, not postmarked April 14.

Absentee ballots can be obtained anytime between now and the day before the election.

Apparently a lot of Cohasset residents have plans that will take them out of Cohasset for April vacation week-- Mark has already received 75 applications for absentee ballots.

If you think that getting the ballot sounds like a lot of trouble, think how much trouble your grandmother or great grandmother went through to get the right to vote.

Or think of that lone man in Tiananmen Square facing an army tank.

One person can make a difference. But to make your vote count, you have to cast it.

So vote. It's the right thing to do.

Housing funds available

Despite statewide cuts, the Cohasset Housing Partnership has been informed that there is still money available for the purchase of affordable housing by first-time home-owners.

Special consideration would be given to families who are native to Cohasset or who work here, if the town cooperates in the affordable housing development process.

At a recent meeting with selectmen, the Partnership was urged to continue to educate the public-at-large on issues involved in affordable housing. Selectmen also said that they would attempt to help the Partnership locate possible affordable housing sites.

The Cohasset Housing Partnership is seeking town boards' advice on its mission statement and guidelines.

Senior corner...

Message from the director:

Aren't we lucky to be living in Massachusetts in springtime?

Every winter, I threaten to move south but during April I'm keenly aware of why, after all these years I am still here. It's so exciting to find the first crocus popping it's head up followed shortly by jonquils and hyacinths: to awaken to the sound of robins: a walk without freezing. It's so wonderful to look out the window and see the children playing and running around the duck pond.

Spring-it's the rebirth of life year after year and it's so invigorating.

Mark your calendar for April 11—12:00 Noon—My Aching Back!

The Council on Aging is pleased to have Dr. Susan Emmer, chiropractor nutritionist, present a discussion on the "Why's" of back pain. Come bring a brown bag lunch and there will be a question and answer period following the discussion.

For reservation, call 383-9112.

Lunch-in with Pat

On Friday, April 20, Pat Ryan, Shine Coordinator, will be at the Senior Center at 12 noon to discuss with you the changes in Medicare & Medex. This is information we all should have, so we can plan for the future.

Bring your lunch and we will serve coffee, tea, and dessert. Call 383-9112 to reserve a space.

Bowling

The bowling group is looking for you!

Every Wednesday, morning at 9:30, Bill O'Connell has the coffee on and goodies to eat. All Seniors are welcome to come and it's very good exercise, fun and wonderful way to meet new friends.

Bill said we don't have to be a good bowler, but we do have a good time!

Choral Arts Society spring concerts set

Members of the Harbour Choral Arts Society are hard at work preparing for this spring's concerts which will feature the beautiful Requiem by French composer Maurice Durufle.

Ken Clinton, director and founder of the Harbour Choral Arts Society, is looking forward to this spring's concerts which will be held at 8 p.m. on Saturday, April 28, at St. Stephen's Church in Cohasset, and at 8 p.m. on Sunday, April 29 at the Carter Memorial Methodist Church in Needham. Mr. Clinton explained that the concert sites were selected in large part because of the instrumental requirements of the Durufle piece. "The composer was an organist and this piece requires accompaniment by a particular type of organ. We are very happy to be able to perform this beautiful Requiem in the two locations," he said.

David Carrier, an accomplished organist, will provide the accompaniment for the Durufle piece.

The rest of the program will present a spring motif and will feature two selections written by Harbour Choral Arts Society tenor Carol Nicholeris. One is a new treatment of a traditional spring tune, "Now is the Month of Maying," and the other is a musical adaptation of "My Garden," a nineteenth century poem written by T.E. Brow. The group will also sing one of Mr. Clinton's recent compositions entitled "A Prayer for Spring," which is a musical treatment of one of Robert Frost's poems. In addition, R. Vaughan Williams' "The Spring Time of the Year" will be performed.

The Harbour Choral Arts Society is a non-profit organization whose 60 members are dedicated to the presentation of quality choral music. To defray expenses the group is seeking individuals and/or businesses willing to purchase sponsorships or advertisements in the program booklet which will be distributed at the two spring concerts. Anyone interested in supporting the Harbour Choral Arts Society may get more information by calling 878-6331.

Artistic students display their talents

They billed it as an evening of living arts, and it was all that and more.

Cohasset High School opened its doors and revealed the talent of local students in every realm of personal and creative expression.

After spending six months in dance class under the tutelage of Sharon Weber from the South Shore Conservatory of Music, students from Deer Hill, the junior high and senior high came together in a production entitled "We are the world, We are the children."

The dancers conveyed through movement, music and expression the interconnectedness of people and the environment in which they live. The message was one of personal responsibility-- starting with the man in the mirror-- to make this a better place to live.

After the dance program, attendees were free to roam the school checking out the art work, woodworking skills, literary and audiovisual creations of Cohasset kids.

Even the business education department was open so residents could see how technology has merged with imagination to make learning and working more productive, more enjoyable and more creative.

Spring fair scheduled

Derby Academy's annual spring fair will be held from noon to 3 p.m. Saturday, May 12 rain or shine at the school on Burditt Avenue in Hingham.

The fair will feature music by the Scituation Swing Band, clowning around with the Flying Pie Circus Clowns and a lunch or snack at the Gourmet Galley. You also may meet authors Jan Brett and Ted Roscoe.

Traditional favorites, including the moonwalk, pony rides and games also will be featured. And there will be a plant table for that perfect Mother's Day gift.

Admission is free.

Local dentist visits Osgood

Local dentist, Dr. Barry Tufts, showed Mrs. Hurley's first graders how to save their smiles.

Tufts demonstrated the proper way to brush teeth using a model and talked about healthy choices in food and drink. Each child received a new toothbrush and promised to use it every day.

The visit was videotaped and shown on Videotime, the school cable television program.

Math whizzes score high

Math students at Cohasset High School did themselves proud in two math competitions in March.

High scorers in the New England Math Competition were Charlotte Begley, Jason Hunter, Zach Hochkeppel, Nathan Fiori, Brian Shultz, Dan DeMichele and Kate Barret.

Five students did an outstanding job in the Advanced Placement Calculus competition. Kudos go to Noah Hill, Zach Hochkeppel, Melissa Christoffel, Jim Long and Brian Shultz for their performance.

Seventh Grade Effort Honor Roll

The teachers of the seventh grade team announced the names of students who made the effort honor roll for the second term.

Students who were honored earned high effort grades in all subject areas. The teachers congratulate the students for their diligence and conscientiousness.

Receiving honors were Peter Bishop, Candice Buckley, Melissa Cannarozzi, Kate Carroll, Jessica Connor, Ann Dane, Tom Greco, Caitlin Hurley, Jessica Jenkins, Jim Magner, Corinna McMackin, Dawn Meehan, Kristin Niessink, Molly Pease, Sarena Quemere, Megan Rhodes, Jeremiah Stevenson and Melissa Thatcher.

PSO election slated

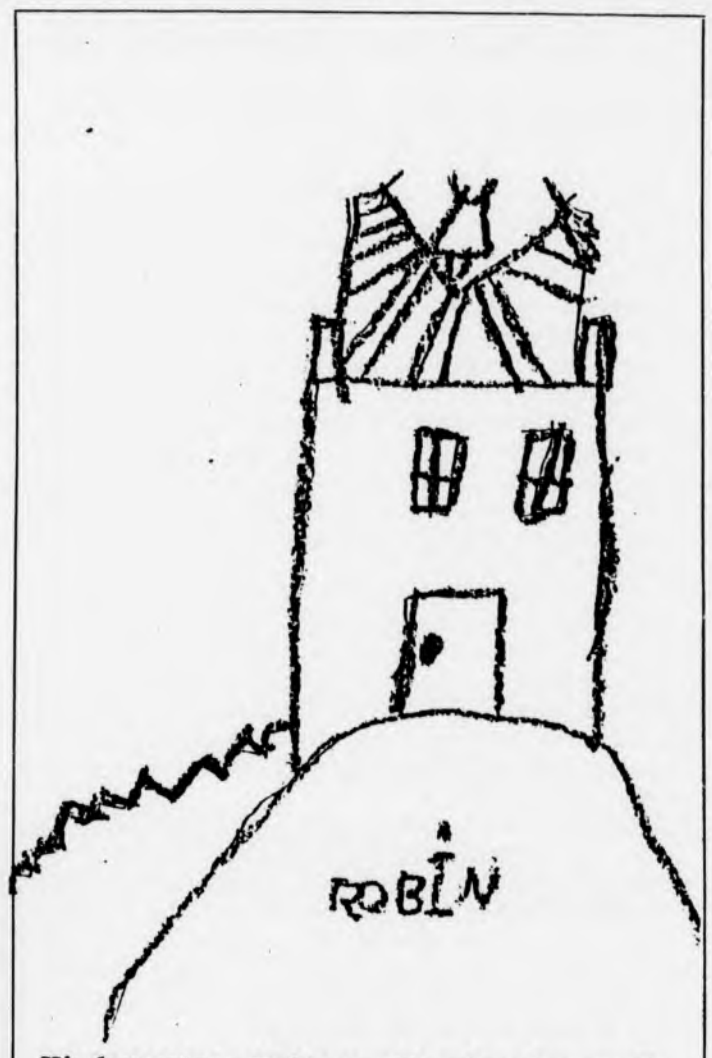
The PSO Nominating Committee has convened to prepare a slate of nominees for the 1990-1991 Executive Board. A list of candidates will be mailed to the general membership in April and voted into office at the Annual Meeting on May 10.

If you would be interested in serving on the Executive Board, would like to make a recommendation, or would like more information, please contact any Nominating Committee member: Monica McKenney (Chairman) 383-1338, Pat Baird 383-6997, Debbie Hanian 383-9476, Dorothy Nicynski 383-1329, Debbie Eaton, Sue McNamara 383-6945 or Pam Prendergast 383-0909.

B.U. graduates

Boston University awarded academic degrees to 947 students this winter.

Receiving degrees were Cohasset residents Blythe D. Berents, BA in Economics and Philip D. Bernstein, BA in Political Science.



Edison offers scholarship

Eastern Edison Co. will award up to three $1,000 scholarships to race minority or handicapped graduating high school seniors who live in one of the 17 communities served by Eastern Edison's Brockton division.

Eligible candidates must be accepted at an accredited two- or four-year institution and plan to pursue a career in electrical engineering, drafting and design technology or business administration.

Deadline for filing applications is April 16. The awards are based on scholastic achievement and financial need.

Interested persons may call Elaine Hunt, employee relations manager, for more information at (508) 580-1213.

Osgood kids are a-pealing

They came, they saw and they rang those bells.

Marie Price's kindergartners climbed the narrow, winding stairs to St. Stephen's carillon playing room and then mounted a ladder into the bell tower.

While they stared into the mouth of a six-ton bell-- the largest of the 57-bell carillon-- carillonneur Sally Slade Warner played a medley of children's songs, including "Parade of the Wooden Soldiers," "Rubber Ducky," and the theme from "Sesame Street."

Warner wasn't the only one to play the carillon.

She let the children sit down at the keyboard and try their hand at "Hot Cross Buns" and "Twinkle, Twinkle Little Star". Even the teacher got into the act with a swinging rendition of "Amazing Grace."

When the children left, they all agreed that the tour was "awesome."

Many Cohasset students earn place on honor lists at colleges and prep schools

Proctor Academy announced that two local students have been named to the school's honors lists.

Sophomore Chris Bartow, son of Mr. and Mrs. Stephen C. Bartow, and Freshman Mark St. Onge, son of Mr. and Mrs. Harry St. Onge, all of Cohasset, both finished the Winter term on the Effort Honor Roll.

James A. Dormer, son of Mr. and Mrs. Daniel M. Dormer of 24 Old Coach Road, is doing an internship this semester with CIGNA in Hartford. Dormer is a senior majoring in economics at Trinity College in Connecticut.

Jean Garvey of 3 Bayberry Lane, a senior at Stonehill College, was named to the dean's list with honors for the last semester.

Honors require an overall 3.2 cumulative average.

Five Cohasset students qualified for the dean's list for the 1990 fall semester at the University of Massachusetts Amherst.

To qualify, they had to receive a 3.5 grade point average or better on a four-point scale.

The Cohasset students who qualified are: Erica M. Ford of 145 Border St., Nicole C. Gamst of 73 Forest Ave., Melissa S. Greiner of 40 Nichols Rd., Stephen R. Hackenburg of 6 Heather Dr. and Heather G. Ripley of 1795 Main St.

Marc A. Mercurio, son of Joseph and Rosemarie Mercurio of 3 Cedar Acres Drive, was named to the second term honor roll with high honors at Boston College High School.

High honors are awarded to sophomores, juniors and seniors who have achieved a quality point average of at least 3.85 with all grades being no lower than a "C+". For freshmen, high honors are achieved with a quality point average of 3.6 or higher and all grades "C+" or better.

Library Friends net $7,400

The Friends of the Cohasset Library, Inc. board of directors reports that a town-wide fund appeal has brought in nearly $7,400 from 325 individuals and families. Membership chairman Frederick Garrison reported these results of a renewal drive in June and a town-wide appeal in October.

The board received a request from Barbara Power, chairman of the library trustees, for increased Friends' support of the library operating budget. The trustees requested $7,000 in new support. Mrs. Power explained that the library would otherwise have to reduce open hours and book purchases because tax limitations prevent the town from funding level service.

Following an hour of discussion of this new direction for the Friends organization, the board voted to allocate $7,000 for next year's library budget. Last year the Friends gave $2500 for new furniture and furniture repair, and $2100 for family passes to the Children's Museum, the Aquarium, the Science Museum, Plimoth Plantation and the Museum of Fine Arts.

Friends board members are: Anne Costello, President; Linda Wakeman, Vice President; Lyle Heap, Secretary; Mildred Harrington, Treasurer; Frederick Garrison, Membership; Ann Bowdoin; John Crandell; Carole Ann Dean; Frederick L. Good Jr.; Lucille McLoughlin; Joan Remington; Peggy Soltesz; Patience Towle; and library trustee representatives Lucia Woods and Melvin Waldfogel.

The board wishes to invite others to make a tax-deductible contribution for support of library services to : FRIENDS OF THE COHASSET LIBRARY INC.

'Female Odd Couple' set

Why won't the neatnik and slob survive as roommates? You can see for yourself. Come see at the opening Saturday, March 31 at 8 p.m. of Neil Simon's "Female Odd Couple."

The show, which will be presented by the Cohasset Dramatic Club, also will run April 1 at 7 p.m. (note one hour earlier), Friday April 6 and Saturday, April 7 at 8 p.m.

Call 383-2768 for tickets. First come, first served; no reserved seating.

Go early to play trivial pursuit. Popcorn will be provided; wine, beer and sodas will be available for purchase. The play will be staged at the Cohasset Dramatic Club Clubhouse in Cohasset Village.

Easter Bunny hosts lunch

Join the Easter Bunny and Friends for lunch at Cohasset Community Center on Saturday, April 7 from 11 a.m. to 1 p.m. Activities include a magic show with Goldie the Clown, face painting, a photo with the Easter Bunny, a raffle, and Easter crafts. Each child will go home with a pair of bunny ears.

The menu includes hot dogs and chips, assorted homemade salads, fruit salad, homemade desserts, juice and coffee.

Admission is $3 for adults and $3 for kids. For further information call 383-0088.

Time for Easter Egg hunt

The Cohasset recreation department will conduct the 14th annual Easter Egg Hunt for children 3 to 11 years of age, Saturday, April 14, at noon at the Deer Hill School field.

This year, there is again the distinct possibility that the Easter Bunny and helpers will be on hand.

Children will be divided into three separate chronological groups:

Group 1. Ages 3 and 4 (with parent)
Group 2. Ages 5 - 7
Group 3. Ages 8 - 11
Children younger than three also may attend, but with at least one parent

Art Center reception slated

On Tuesday, the art work was lying about all a-jumble, but the executive director of the South Shore Art Center promises that Sunday's reception-goers will see a magnificent exhibit.

Lanci Valentine surveyed her domain with obvious pleasure at the wide range of talent that would soon grace the gallery walls.

"There is some wonderful work here," she said.

The all-New England juried exhibit of art covers the whole nine yards of media and styles. Out of 352 entries, jurors John Baker, Walter Crump and Jo Sandman found 60 outstanding works to display.

Gallery visitors will find that the exhibit consists primarily of paintings-- virtually every sculpture and pottery piece was rejected.

One happy exception is a delightful sculpture featuring cacti and a sun in bold colors and texture.

The paintings that could be seen had no common theme in style or subject matter. It's definitely a something-for-every-taste show.

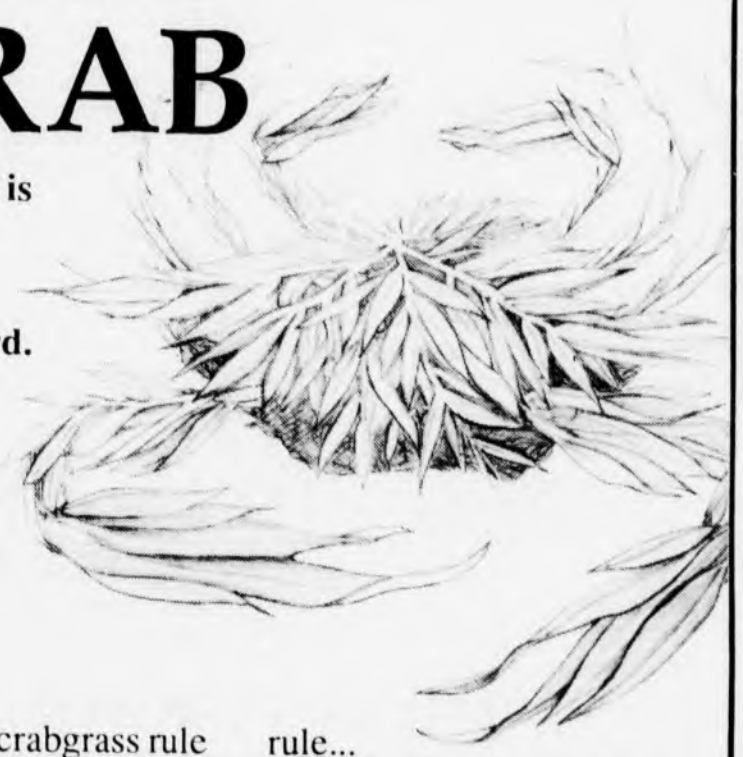
The exhibit opens Sunday, April 1 with a reception from 4 to 6 p.m. Immediately prior to the reception is a gallery talk at 3:30 p.m.

Art lovers can enjoy the exhibit through April 26 at the center located at 119 Ripley Road in Cohasset. There is no charge for admission, but donations are gladly accepted.

For additional information, call 383-9548.

Story hour signups open

Registrations are currently being accepted for spring story hour series at the Paul Pratt Memorial Library.



The series begins on April 26, and lasts for six weeks. Sessions will be offered at 10 a.m. on Thursdays and Fridays.

Each 45 minute program consists of several picture book stories and simple fingerplays, songs, and crafts. Children must be at least 3 1/2 .

To register, stop by the Children's Room, or call the children's librarians at 383-1348.

New Theatre stages 'Cinderella' musical

That New Theatre in Norwell is now selling tickets for the Rodgers and Hammerstein musical "Cinderella," the group's final production of their 1989-90 season.

Performances are scheduled at the Cushing Center at 7 p.m. on Friday and Saturday, April 20 and 21, and Thursday through Saturday, April 26, 27 and 28. Matinees will be presented on Saturday and Sunday at 2 p.m. on April 21, 22, 28 and 29. All seats are $10, with groups of 20 or more at $7.50.

Tickets can be purchased by calling 878-1298 or 826-7983, or by mail to TNT, P.O. Box 270, Norwell 02061. Mail orders should include a self-addressed stamped envelope. Checks, Mastercard and Visa are accepted.

Last year's "Peter Pan" sold out all performances so those interested in attending are encouraged to purchase tickets early. Seating is first-come first-served. Groups of 20 or more will be assigned seating sections.

Girl Scouts and mothers note scouting's birthday

Over 100 Cohasset Girl Scouts and their moms gathered March 19 to celebrate the 78th Anniversary of Girl Scouting in the United States.

Each troop prepared its own pot-luck dinner. The menu included lasagna, spaghetti, chicken, salads, vegetable casseroles, apple pie, strawberry short-cake, chocolate trifle and various other goodies.

After an opening flag ceremony presented by the troop leaders, everyone sang "Happy Birthday" around a large birthday cake. Each troop then had an opportunity to share a short program with the group.

Presentations included songs, folk dances and skits featuring the Girl Scout laws.

The girls also made contributions to the Juliette Low World Friendship Fund. This fund was established in memory of the founder of girl scouting and is used to provide assistance to scouts and guides for international travel and girl scout gatherings.

The evening closed with a Friendship circle with everyone singing Taps.

A special thanks goes to all of the leaders and moms for their help with the troops in Cohasset.

Beginning of holy week

Palm Sunday, April 8, begins Holy Week. St. Stephen's will process with palms in to the church singing "All Glory Laud and Honor" accompanied by the carillon.

Maundy Thursday through Easter Vigil marks three days of worship in one. It begins with the service Maundy Thursday, April 12, at 7 p.m. This year the congregation will commemorate Jesus' washing of his disciples' feet and not have the Agape meal.

There is no blessing and dismissal at the end of worship on Maundy Thursday because the service leads into Good Friday. The Good Friday liturgy will be held from noon to 3 p.m. on April 13. This year St. Stephen's will include hymns and music as part of our meditation.

The Easter Vigil is a candlelight service on Saturday, April 14 at 7:30 p.m. It symbolizes the resurrection with the lighting of candles bursting out of the darkness. A party follows the service in the Bartow Room.

Easter Day services take place Sunday, April 15 at 8 and 10 a.m.

Earth Day Kick-Off

A local celebration of poetry, humor and music and family fun happens Sunday, April 1 at the First Parish Meeting House on the Common at 4 p.m.

"Stand-up Environmentalist" Evi Seidman and Earthtunes performer Barbara Herson speak and sing about the environment.

The Earth Day Committee is sponsoring the event, which is free to the public.

Kasey Smith

Smith is student of month

Kasey Smith was named February student of the month at Cohasset High School.

A newcomer to the drama club, her work as stage manager for "Bye, Bye Birdie" and art director for the drama festival entry, "The Miracle Play" drew plaudits from English teachers, Ron Emmons and Jo-Ellen Wood.

Kasey, who has also been named artist of the month at the high school, volunteers each morning with the junior high art classes.

"Kasey is a truly outstanding student," said Colleen Lucas, art teacher at the school. "She is kind, warm, intelligent and talented. She is tops."

Cohasset spellers excel at annual bee

A seventh grader has won the school championship in the fifth annual spelling bee open to students in grades seven and eight.

Nicole Vasseur was declared the champion after spelling "obsessive" and "philosopher" correctly.

Diane Saldi, a grade eight student, was runner-up and will serve as alternate.

Vasseur will participate in the regional spelling bee at Weymouth South High School in April.

Both girls received medals from the Patriot Ledger.

The seventh grade runner-up was Jessica Jenkins and the eighth grade runner-up was Brian Duffy. All participants received a certificate and a silver dollar provided by the PSO. Other finalists at the school assembly were the following:

Grade 7: Ben Redfield, Jeff Littlehale, Jim Magner, Chris Adams, Emily D'Urso, Candice Buckley, Nick Welz, Jason Crossman, Sarena Quemere.

Grade 8: Tyler Studds, Chris Rolandelli, Peter Ferenz, Jason Pearsall, Matt Graves, Jon Ford, Katherine Andrews, and Karen Kristiansen.

Drinkwater wins laurels

Matthew Drinkwater, a freshman at Trinity College in Hartford, Conn., has been named to the faculty honors list for the fall semester.

To make the list, he had to achieve a semester grade point average of A- or better, with no individual course grade below B-.

Drinkwater is the son of Marifrances McIntosh of 609 Jerusalem Rd. and Gary Drinkwater of Hull.

Scholarship deadline nears

April 18 is the deadline for receipt of applications for scholarships to be awarded by the Friends of South Shore Hospital.

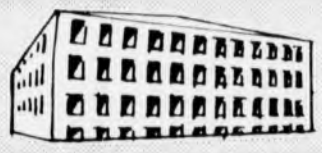
The scholarships will be awarded to high school seniors who have been accepted into any health care related fields in accredited institutions, and who reside in any town served by South Shore Hospital.

Applications are available at the main desk in the front lobby of the hospital, and should be returned to Beatrice Coleman, Chairwoman of the Friends' Scholarship Committee.

Chamberlain on honors list

Geoffrey D. Chamberlain of Cohasset made the Derby Academy headmaster's list for the second term of the 1989-90 school year.

He was among 34 Derby students who achieved an A- or above in all academic subjects.



Pozatek earns honors

Andrew J. Pozatek of Cohasset earned second honors for the second term of the 1989-90 school year at Derby Academy.

He was one of 48 students who achieved a grade of B or better in all academic subjects.

How much money is planted in your yard ?

Count it up. A couple of flowering shrubs, a hedge and a maple tree from the nursery could amount to as much as $600. You've probably made a considerable investment, in plants alone. A living investment that needs attention to grow.

Take this little quiz, to find out if your landscaping investment is increasing or decreasing in value:

- ☐ Are any of your bushes yellowish?
- ☐ Do any of your trees or shrubs have dead or dying branches?
- ☐ Did your flowering shrubs fail to bloom as well as expected ?
- ☐ Are insects nibbling holes in the leaves ?
- ☐ Are the leaves and branches sparse or stunted ?

If you answered yes to any of these, call us for a free , no-obligation survey and price quote. Our ornamental tree and shrub inspection, pest control and fertilization programs are designed to promote healthy and attractive plants. And healthy landscaping means a healthy increase in your property's value.

Need some help trimming that full figure?

By David McKee
Mariner staff

Did you chow down on cheese cake this winter?

Or did you just swill so many brewski's that you resemble the Michelin Man?

Well you had better do something and fast because summer is coming and you know what that means- time to fit into that hot bathing suit.

"This is the perfect time to get started with an exercise program," said Craig Tarantino of the soon-to-be-opened New England Health and Racquet Club in Hanover.

"Soon people will be wearing less and less clothing and it is a good time to get started," he said.

EXERCISE FOR LIFE

But even if fitting into a hot bikini or pumping up your pecs for the beach is not high on your priority list, the benefits of regular exercise cannot be ignored.

"Exercise can add years to your life, will give you more energy and will noticeably improve your appearance," said Christina Langone of the Webb Fitness Center in Norwell.

"You might get sore at first, but if you hang with it and do things the right way, it will only benefit you."

This time of the year is the busiest season for fitness clubs throughout the South Shore. A fact that was not lost on New England Health and Racquet.

"We targeted opening at the beginning of April," Tarantino said. "Because we want to be there to fill the need. Our philosophy is to have a super club atmosphere and we've tried to incorporate all kinds of activities to fill different needs."

New England Health and Racquet and the Webb Pro Fitness Club typify today's fitness clubs.

Gone are the rusty barbells and smelly sweat socks of olden days. Today, clubs offer the latest in high tech exercise equipment so that anyone of any age or exercise level can feel comfortable working out. Some of the most popular and efficient new exercise equipment includes Nautilus weight machines, Lifecycles, Stairmasters and running tread mills. There are also swimming pools, free weights, and for those looking to relax, whirlpools.

"This isn't a Joe-Jock place," Langone said.

"There are a few here, but most of the people are here just trying to get into shape. We have all ages, from high school students to 70 or 80 year olds."

Joyce Swanson of Weymouth was stretching out at the Webb Fitness Club last week.

"This is a good way to relax and get rid of some stress," she said as she completed a round of toe-touches.

"I'm more encouraged to exercise here," she said. "At home, I won't do it. But here it's a different story."

SEE AND BE SEEN

Also today's fitness clubs are places to see and be seen.

"Of course the reasons for joining a club depend on the individual," Tarantino said. "But the three biggest reasons for joining a club are appearance, health and social.

"A lot of people want to improve their appearance. And there are others who are joining for reasons of longevity. But many join for the social aspects. Clubs are a good place to meet people. People can come after work or during the weekends and they will meet a lot of nice people."

Rod Millet of the World Gym in Pembroke agreed that fitness clubs are no longer just for the serious athlete.

"We have programs that appeal to the first time weight lifter or to someone who is training for bodybuilding competitions," he said. "And this is one of the busiest times of the year. It is a time for people to get into swimwear. The motivation levels are often higher now than any time during the year."

Steven Crays of the Total Fitness Center in Marshfield also sees people of all ages and lifestyles getting into the fitness kick.

"We are seeing more sedentary people these days," he said. "People are aware these days through reading articles or whatever, that exercise can really benefit them in a lot of ways. And now more people are trying to get into shape or just stay in shape. The health reasons cannot be ignored."

CHS athletes begin spring training

By David McKee
Mariner staff

While the Boston Red Sox are down in sunny Florida getting ready for the upcoming season, the Cohasset High School spring athletes are not so lucky.

The Skipper athletes have begun their own spring training of sorts, only theirs is outside in the everchanging New England weather.

Tryouts for the spring varsity season have been going on for the last week or so and on this Tuesday, it was business as usual for the Cohasset High School athletes.

The weather was somewhat cooperative on this day. It was about 45 degrees and the sun was shining. However there was a chilly breeze in the air and the sun was fading fast.

Over at the softball field, located at the front of the school, coach Mike Gill was putting his team through the paces with a intra-squad scrimmage.

The field they played on was located at the bottom of a sloping field and had a very short perch in left field.

Any batter who got good wood on the ball could easily knock the ball into the street.

A team of Skippers stood in the field and players took turns facing the pitcher.

After each batter hit the ball and the play was made on defense, Gill, who was standing on the sidelines in an Oakland A's cap, would critique the players.

Gill was hoping that his pointers would make his team play more like the world champion Oakland A's. But from watching them practice, it is safe to say that Jose Canseco and Rickey Henderson should not be worrying.

Most of the girls at the practice had long sweat pants and windbreakers on. Many of the fielders had sunglasses as the field was directly under the sun.

Over at the baseball field, coach Ted McDermott was also having an intra-squad scrimmage among his players.

He, like Gill, critiqued his players on their play. The only differences between the two coaches were that McDermott had no Oakland A's cap on and stood behind his pitcher on the field.

In between every pitch, a player would hit fungoes to the outfielders to keep them busy. The outfielders would catch the ball, throw it back to the hitter and then focus on the play from the scrimmage. It was a good system to get ready.

Like the softball players, the baseball players were ready for the cold. Most had long pants and sweatshirts on.

The pitcher, however, had shorts on. Pitchers are sometimes different than the rest of the ballplayers.

Over at the tennis court, boys coach Ed Amaral was putting his team through the paces before they surrendered the court to the girls team and coach Betty Zadel.

All the courts were in use as the boys worked on their basic groundstrokes. A lot of the players had shorts on.

"It's been cold and windy so far," Amaral said of the team's early practices. "We have to get used to it though, because this is how it will be for a lot of our early matches. It's not too bad today. At least it's not windy like yesterday."

Asked what he is working on with his team, Amaral said, "Right now we are focusing on instruction and conditioning. We have to make sure everyone is ready for the season. But this is our first day where we are doing ladder competitions to see who might play where."

Asked if the team makes any concessions to the weather, Amaral said, "If it is absolutely cold, we don't go. But we take the time to stretch out and get loose before we get going."

Asked whether he thought the players were crazy for wearing shorts, Amaral said, "I tell them to wear sweats because you can always take something off, but some wear shorts anyway."

With only some scrimmages and a week or so to go before the season gets underway, the Skipper spring teams will have to take full advantage of their practice time.

But some sports like baseball, softball and tennis were not made to be played in 40 degree weather. Just ask any Cohasset High School athlete.

Senior Michelle Massa is the key to the success of the girls' tennis team.

Local adults go to the head of the class

(All photos by Jon Shutz)

The Cohasset school system invited local residents to become "teacher for a day" recently.

Participants were guaranteed the opportunity to find out what goes on in the classrooms and cafeterias of the three schools.

Mariner photographer Jon Schutz caught volunteer teachers Nancy Sandell, Jane Goedecke and James Hooley in the act.

Judging from the pictures, a good time was had by all.

James Hooley is right at home as teacher for a day.

Jane Goedecke leaves the campaigning behind to read to a fifth grade class.

School committee member Nancy Sandell gets an up close and personal look at life and learning in Cohasset schools.

IT USED TO BE, AT 13, LITTLE BOYS BECAME INTERESTED IN LITTLE GIRLS.

Boys and girls used to use straws to sip sodas at the drug store.

Now they cut the straws in half and use them to snort drugs deep into their nostrils.

Times have changed. Our children need our help.

We need to talk with our children. And talk. And talk. This way, we'll learn what they think about drugs. What they know about them. What they don't know.

Then, once we understand their perspective, we'll be in a better position to offer our own. Then we'll be able to talk about the dangers of various drugs. And about what our children can do to avoid them.

It takes courage to talk to them like this. And to do it effectively, it takes homework–like reading articles, attending meetings and talking to other parents. Otherwise, our children won't see us as informed sources. And they'll get their answers elsewhere.

As a parent, you can get answers to your own questions by contacting your local agency on drug abuse.

Orchestra to stage 'opera sampler' for all

By Mary Ford
Mariner staff

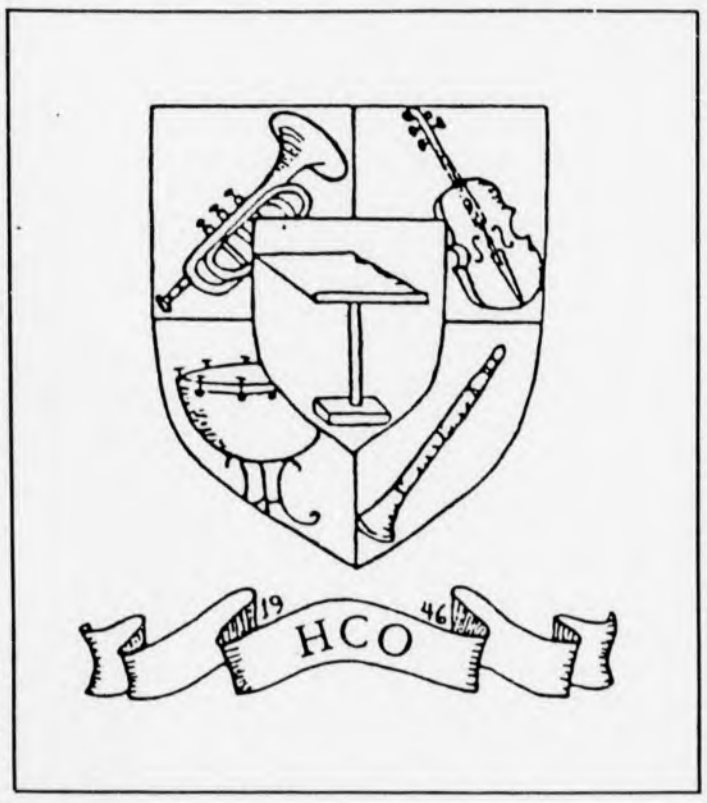
If you think you're one of those people who doesn't like opera – the Hingham Civic Orchestra would like to prove you wrong.

The ensemble, which dates back to 1946, is staging 'Saturday Matinee at the Opera', a concert operatic sampler, conducted by John Corley, for opera lovers and would-be opera lovers alike.

The production, set for 2:00 p.m., Saturday April 7, at the Notre Dame Academy auditorium on Route 228 in Hingham, is a departure for the Hingham Civic Orchestra, says producer and creator Judy Hardy.

"This is not a 'staged' opera – it's a concert, something different," says Hardy.

"They'll be a little bit of this and a little bit of that – and for the most part the concert will feature well-known pieces from different operas," she says.



QUARTET OF RENOWN SINGERS

The concert features a quartet of renown singers.

• Norwell resident Pam Wolfe, who is a soprano, received her musical training at the Boston Conservatory of Music and the Mozarteum in Salzburg, Austria. She is a member of the music faculty at Brandeis University and will sing at Carnegie Hall on June 4 in Gian-Carlo Menotti's Mass, "O Pulchritude." Her other credits include recitals in Salzburg, the United Kingdom, and several states. Her many oratorio performances have included appearances with the Boston Symphony Orchestra with Seiji Oxawa; the Worcester Symphony Orchestra with Ronald Feldman, and the Manhattan Philharmonic in Avery Fisher Hall.

• Alexandra Suchocki, mezzo-soprano, attended the Boston Conservatory of Music and has since made Boston her home. She has appeared with Sarah Caldwell's Opera Company of Boston in productions of Medea, La Traviata, and Dead Souls; the American/Soviet collaboration 'Making Music Together' in the 1988 season. She was also seen in productions of The Merry Widow and La Forza Del Destino under the baton of Lake George Opera Impressario, John Balme. One of the female cantorial soloists in the area, she has also been soloist in many Oratorio performances and classical concerts throughout New England and the South East. A versatile performer, she has done many roles in musical theater, such as, 'Anna' in the King and I, 'Magnolia' in Showboat, and 'Kate' in Kiss Me Kate. Alexandra is currently one of the featured soloists with the John Hayes Hammond Museum 1990 concert season of 12 performances.

• Mark Andersen, tenor, holds a B.A. from East Carolina University, a M.A. from the American Conservatory and a Ph.D. from the Paris Conservatory. His numerous major roles include La Forza Del Destino at Lincoln Center, Le Roi D'Ys with the Paris Opera, Carmen with the Chicago Lyric Opera; Tannhauser with the New York Opera Society; Rigoletto with the Santa Fe Opera, and Il Trovatore with the Boston Lyric Opera. His many concerts include those at Carnegie Hall (6); with the Boston Pops, and the Boston Symphony Orchestra; New York Town Hall; Ulster Hall in Belfast; Northern Ireland; Boston's Jordan Hall; Lincoln Center; Williamsburg, Virginia; St. Mark's Episcopal Church Concert in Washington, D.C., and the Hammond Castle Museum Concert Series in Gloucester. He has also appeared in solo recitals at Lincoln Center and the Kennedy Center in Washington, D.C. Mr. Andersen was the recipient of the 1976 International Composer Award in Amsterdam, Holland; and in 1978, the United States Flag was flown over the U.S. Capitol to honor his fund-raising concerts on behalf of the arts in Washington, D.C. He is represented by International Artists Management and records for International Artists Records.

• Alfred Cameron, baritone, is a graduate of Emerson College with B.S./B.A. degrees in music theater education, mass communications, and film-video production. His many operatic roles include Carmen, Marriage of Figaro, Don Giovanni, and the Beggar's Opera at Harvard University; La Traviata with the Lowell Opera Company; La Boheme with the Bel Canto Opera, and he has appeared in Boston Summer Opera productions. In addition, Mr. Cameron has sung with the Opera Company of Boston Concert Opera and with the Opera League of Sweden, based in Stockholm.

The concert will be narrated by Derek Holmes, a former Hingham resident, who is a graduate of London's Royal Academy of Dramatic Art and was part of professional theater for 13 years.

Composers include Verdi, Mozart, Puccini, Wagner, Bizet, Gounod, Saint-Saens, Johann Strauss, Wagner, and Rossini.

RANGE OF MOOD

The mood of the concert will swing from romance to comedy to drama, and will finish with Die Fledermaus, by Johann Strauss, a delightful piece which "bubbles and sparkles," Hardy explained.

"The pieces will be familiar. We're trying to make grand opera, less grand," says Hardy, who added the Hingham Civic Orchestra hopes to reach a larger audience with this production – and bring the beauty of operatic music into more lives.

"There's a taste of a fairly wide range (of music)," she says.

"We want people to really enjoy this and say 'This is fun.'"

Tickets are $10 and are available at the Hingham Library on Main Street, at the door, or may be reserved by calling 749-2206.

Spring fashions recycle the classics

Jumpsuits and shorts sets go just everywhere

If you're looking for a navy and white striped nautical jersey jumpsuit for spring, a shorts set or dressy evening fashion, you're on the right track this season.

Feminine styles in a wide range of fabrics and colors will be seen everywhere.

Casual cotton-jersey fashions, sophisticated formal wear and lots of accessories, including hats, are all expected to be very strong this spring, according to Agnes Mitchell of Songes in Hanover.

Names like Noriginals by Nora Shariff, featuring casual knitwear for spring, Sara Campbell jumpsuits, shorts sets and play clothes in soft cotton knits, and designs by Meet Me in Miami, with colorful selections of cotton knits in shirts, slacks and matching tops are a few of the most popular spring fashions found in Songes, a women's contemporary fashion store at Merchants Row Mall, Mitchell said.

The look for spring is definitely streamlined and feminine.

As for colors, navy and white is very popular and the nautical look is very big this season, Mitchell said.

Purchasing something with polka dots is the perfect way to update your spring wardrobe, she

Lynn French of Dallas, Texas, is one of the designer collections available at Songes. The spring collection appeals to the multi-faceted woman who wants clothes to fit with casual events, career needs and more formal, evening occasions.

"Many of the fabrics in her collection come from Europe and the Orient and she is known for her unique color combinations," Mitchell said.

"The styling is very fluid and feminine. The styles are comfortable and will complement various sizes, shapes and ages of women."

Mitchell believes women still have many options as far as skirt lengths go for spring.

"We're seeing skirt lengths generally around 25 inches, which comes to the knee, or 34 inches, about mid-calf.

"Songes can assist you in putting together a wardrobe of spring creations simply by mixing and matching pieces of various designers. It's a little bit of Newbury Street right here on the South Shore," Mitchell said.

Accessories are the key to this fashion statement of Jordan Marsh which includes earrings and necklace by Monies, bangles by Sangrie and scarf by Accessories Street.

Fitness figures in today's style

Looking good takes more than expensive and tasteful fashions. An attractive body can make a mediocre outfit and a problem body can break the lines of fine clothing.

Diet and fitness centers are springing up to fill a growing market.

The fitness industry offers many choices for the figure-conscious.

Beverly Hills Concepts of Weymouth offers individual attention to clients who want to get in shape without enduring extreme pain.

The company believes in "No pains – great gains" as an approach to physical fitness.

The program begins using a computerized body analyzer that develops a customized fitness program and goal after computing an individual's percentage of body fat.

Diet supplements are part of the program, going along with a well-balanced diet.

"By using our Beverly Hills Concepts Toning tables, you can gently firm and tone the entire body without muscle strain or fatigue. Body fat is reduced and circulation breaks down cellulite," according to Robin Lovato of Beverly Hills Concepts.

"This is done through high repetition movement. To increase your heart efficiency we have computerized lifecycles with built in color TV and FM stereo to give you a quality aerobic workout without the pounding your body takes from jogging or typical aerobics."

Massage and dry heat saunas are used to help with water weight loss.

Tanning sessions are part of the various services available at Beverly Hills Concepts, as well as a hair salon.

"A new service becoming increasingly popular to men and women is the European body wrap," Lovato said.

"This is an easier way to rid yourself of unwanted inches and diminish cellulite and stretch marks," she said.

"We do not remove fat. Through special techniques with the wraps, we remove toxins and impurities and compact the fatty tissues and tighten skin. It is what you call body sculpting.

"You can enjoy an exercize program that tones and relaxes without sore muscles. Women of all ages are discovering exercize doesn't have to hurt.

"With Beverly Hills Concepts you will experience health, beauty and relaxation without pain and enjoy a more active life," Lovato said.

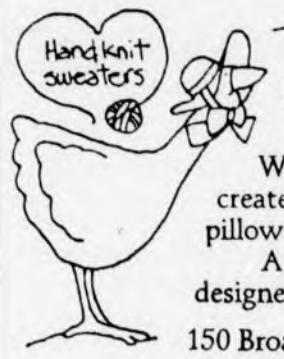
Talbots is a local tradition

Traditional outfits still set the pace at Talbots, just as they have for more than 40 years.

Talbots, a leading specialty retailer and direct marketer of women's classic apparel, was founded in 1947 as a one-room clothing store in Hingham.

Proprietors Rudolf and Nancy Talbot, who inherited the small clothing store that year from Mr. Talbot's father, named it "The Talbots," later shortening it to Talbots. First-year sales totaled $18,000. The following year, Talbots launched its mail order business by distributing 3,000 black and white flyer to names obtained from an ad in The New Yorker magazine.

Demand for Talbots apparel increased and one room proved too small for the rapidly growing business. In 1950, it moved into a two-story 17th century colonial frame house in Hingham. Retail space occupied the first floor while the second floor served as offices. Today, it is still in operation.



As the company prospered, Talbots opened its first branch store in Duxbury in 1955. Continued success prompted the opening of three additional branch stores, in Lenox in Hamden, Ct., and in Avon, Ct. Store expansion, along with strong catalog sales, required larger business offices and mail order facilities. In 1970, with a total of 71 associates, the company moved its operation to175 Beal Street, Hingham, the site of its present headquarters.

By 1973, Talbots five stores and four full-sized color catalogs generated $8 rnillion in annual sales. Its expansion continued with eight new stores opening through the end of the '70s decade.

Talbots branched out of New England for the first time in 1980, opening stores in New York, Pennsylvania, and Delaware.

That same year, with approximately 800 associates, the company expanded its headquarters from

Talbots expansion continues in usual style

80,000 square feet to its present 200,000 square feet and installed toll-free telephone lines for its increasing number of catalog customers. The catalog business soon outgrew the facility's ability to fulfill orders and additional warehouse space was needed for retail stores' stock.

In January 1988, Talbots opened a 360,000-square-foot state-of-the-art catalog fulfillment and retail distribution center in Lakeville. The facility, which employs 500 workers, currently processes 25,000 items per day. And, allowing for future growth, the facility was designed to be capable of processing 50,000 items per day.

During a 15-year period, from 1973-1988, Talbots grew from five stores in New England to 137 stores in 28 states. And, Talbots catalog circulation grew to 70 million with 22 full-color catalogs in production distributed to customers in all states and in 16 countries. Future expansion calls for the opening of 20-25 new stores each year over a five-year span and the continued growth of its catalog operation.

Throughout its history, Talbots credo has been, "Do what is right for the customer," and each valued customer will continue to receive personal, individualized attention by Talbots professionally trained sales associates., according to the now Japanese-owned clothing business.

While the company expands in both its retail and catalog divisions, Talbots will maintain its tasteful, updated classic styles and enduring interpretations of the latest looks backed by a timeless, unconditional return policy.

Natural look wins praise from fashionable

It's taken us nearly a century, but women have finally won the right to look as they wish . . . and they wish to look natural.

Now women will enjoy the freedom of the back-to-basics look.

A recent survey of editors of women's magazines aimed to measure, more thoroughly, the extent of the trend toward natural beauty and to speculate on its future. Some of the responses were surprising.

Out of 63 editors, the vast majority, 61, indicated that the "getting-back-to-basics" movement, with its emphasis on things that are natural and pure, is a significant trend for the 1990s.

The majority of the editors went on to estimate that almost 90 percent of American women are already streamlining their everyday routines to eliminate the nonessentials.

Sixty out the sixty-three editors said they believe that many, if not most, American women are becoming increasingly concerned about product ingredients. They also estimated that over 80 percent of consumers read product labels. The great majority of these women actively choose shampoos and conditioners that contain no heavy ingredients that can weigh down hair. Many consumers also try to avoid artificial colors and dyes and heavily fragranced products.

According to the editors, two of the most popular hairstyles are expected to be medium length with flowing body and short and sleek. No particular hair color was selected as unusually natural looking, but, in an apparent reversal against the trend 70 percent of the editors expect women to apply some form of coloring treatment to enhance their hair. With the new streamlining of their schedules, most women will opt to dry their hair with a combination of air and blow drying, leaving the remaining traces of moisture to air dry to reduce heated appliance damage.

The editors were at odds to determine whether the use of gels will increase or decrease, but mousse, sculpting spray and heated styling appliances are expected to be used less.

Busy schedules, product awareness and health consciousness are all expected to result in an overall lighter touch of makeup.

The beauty editors, however, cite two situations in which they expect makeup to be much less apparent: on weekends and for sports and play. Even during the week, most women will probably have a less made-up look, using — in the order of importance -- mascara, lipstick and blush to add a touch of definition and natural-looking color.

The '90s will bring the need for on-the-go versatility in the wardrobe. For this reason, the editors identify pants as the biggest fashion item of the year. Styled to be sleek and elegant, yet comfortable and wearable, they are expected to be the fashion of choice for virtually every circumstance.

How long will this current overall trend toward natural beauty last?

Editors gamely guess as long as four years. But given the importance of a streamlined lifestyle and the pleasure of comfortable clothes, the trend may be habit forming.

Drug-alcohol panel files report

By Alison Cohen
Mariner staff

After meeting for six months, the Cohasset drug and alcohol committee released their final report to the selectmen.

The report clearly states that Cohasset has a problem with both drugs and alcohol-- and the biggest problem may be lack of awareness.

Alcohol was identified as the drug most commonly abuse in the community. Although drug use was said to be minimal, especially among the youth in town, use of marijuana, LSD, cocaine and steroids was reported.

The findings about cocaine was reinforced by a recent cocaine drug bust in town.

The committee called on the community to educate itself and to set a standard whereby illegal use or abuse of any substance is unacceptable.

According to the committee, the only sure way of attaining those goals is through positive adult role models.

No segment of the community is immune from the ravages of drug and alcohol abuse. Even elderly residents may find themselves the victims of addiction.

The committee cited the trouble elderly people have "tolerating prescription drugs and/or alcohol, because of their changing bodies and metabolic rate. Isolation, loneliness, and the death of loved ones . . ." contributes to the problem.

The committee called for non-traditional methods of reaching out to the elderly to educate and assist them.

Expanded drug and alcohol education in the school system and establishment of a peer leadership program were cited as critical in helping young people to make healthy choices.

Educating parents was equally essential.

According to the report, " . . . parents who are aware can be the best deterrent."

The committee told selectmen that making the drug and alcohol committee a permanent town committee was essential in order to provide leadership and ongoing efforts in the area of community education and outreach.

The selectmen unanimously endorsed the concept of a permanent standing committee. Several members from the existing committee expressed willingness to form the nucleus of the new committee.

One member who will not be part of the new group is Jack Golden.

Golden served as chairman for the group. He submitted his resignation several weeks ago with the intention that it would take effect at the time that the committee completed its tasks.

The selectmen accepted his resignation "with regret" March 26. Golden reassured them that although he would not be part of the permanent committee, he fully intended to continue working on behalf of victims of drug and alcohol abuse.

In addition to Golden, members of the committee included Priscilla Tebbetts, who served as clerk for the committee, Patricia Baird, Richard Bugley, Keith Knowles, Sarah Pease, Rita Strong and Robert Whittaker.

Free Hanover nature walk

The public is invited to join the members and staff of Plymouth County Wildlands Trust at 1 pm on Sunday, April 1, for a guided spring walk over the grounds of the Melzar Hatch Reservation in Hanover.

As parking may be limited, reservations are requested. Please call (617) 934-9018, or (508) 224-3587.

Melzar Hatch Reservation consists of 33.4 acres, and was acquired by PCWT in 1988. The tour will pass the woodlands and wetlands that border Bailey's Brook and Longwater Brook. The walk leader is Bill Bennett, an experienced interpreter of natural history, and a PCWT director.

Please be attentive to the weather and come prepared. Sturdy, waterproof footwear, and clothes suitable for colder weather (including wool hat, gloves, and socks) should be considered depending upon weather conditions.

DIRECTIONS: Meet in the parking lot of the Cedar School in Hanover. Take Exit 13 off route 3. Proceed north on route 53 about 1/2 mile to route 123 (traffic light). Turn left on 123 and drive about 1 mile west to traffic light. Turn left on Main Street and go south 1.4 miles to Cedar Street. Turn right, proceed 1/2 mile and take right to Cedar School.

Plymouth County Wildlands Trust is a non-profit land conservation organization, founded in 1973, that protects over 1,100 acres of land in 10 towns in Plymouth and Barnstable counties.

Cohasset students do so well . . .

Schools may suspend basic skills testing

By John Magadieu
Mariner Staff

Superintendent Stephen Hart and the Cohasset school committee are considering suspending basic skills testing for three years in light of the latest results.

Cohasset students in grades 3, 6 and 9 fared so well on the October 1989 basic skills test that the committee has decided to embrace a new proposal by the Massachusetts Association of School Counselors.

The association recommends that school districts in which students score at or above the 90th percentile on the basic skills test be exempted from administering the test for three years.

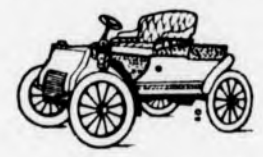
"I think it is a good idea," Hart said. "We know of the kids who are deficient in basic skills."

Currently, the basic skills test is given every year to third, sixth and ninth graders throughout Massachusetts, and is used to help educators identify children whose reading, math and writing skills aren't up to snuff.

Hart said he expects most Cohasset students to perform well on the test because of their "background opportunities."

Ninety-eight percent of the third graders at the Joseph Osgood Elementary School passed the reading portion of the test, as compared with the statewide average of 94 percent.

In math, 99 percent of the third graders passed, as compared with 94 percent across the state. And in writing, 95 percent of the Osgood students passed; 93 percent of third graders across the state passed.



At the sixth grade level, 100 percent of the students who took the test at Cohasset's Deer Hill School passed the basic skills test in reading, math and writing.

Those results compare dramatically against statewide percentages. Only 88 percent of Massachusetts sixth graders passed the reading portion of the basic skills test. Ninety-two percent passed the mathematics test and 95 percent passed the writing test throughout Massachusetts.

Ninth graders at Cohasset High School also fared well in comparison to the state average. Of all the students who took the test at C.H.S., 98 percent passed the basic skills reading test, while 100 percent passed the math and writing tests.

Across Massachusetts, only 87 percent of the students who took the basic skills test passed the writing segment.

Hart said that suspending basic skills testing is a move that makes sense in towns such as Cohasset.

Soccer camp signup open

As soon as brochures/application forms are available, the Cohasset Recreation Department will begin accepting registration for the 1990 summer soccer camps.

This year, Cohasset is privileged to have a variety of summer camp programs available through two soccer camps: South Shore Soccer Camp, under the direction of Jon Anderson and Larry Shultz, and V.I.P. Soccer Camp, under the direction of Dave Pike and Ross Irwin.

V.I.P. will offer an ABC Camp specifically for ages 4 and 5, that will meet 1 1/2 hours daily, Monday through Friday, Aug. 20 to 24, from 8 to 9:30 a.m. The cost for this program for both girls and boys is $40 and family discounts are available.

Also, V.I.P. will conduct an ages 6- and 7-year-old half-day program that will meet Monday through Friday, Aug. 20 to 24, from 9:30 a.m. to 12:30 p.m., and the cost for this boys and girls camp is $70, with family discounts available.

South Shore Soccer Camp will conduct an ages 8 through 18, full-day camp for boys only, during the week of Aug. 6, and a girls only, full-day camp during the week of Aug. 13. Both boys and girls, full-day camps, will meet Monday through Friday, from 9 a.m. through 4 p.m., and the cost is $139, with family discounts available.

Camps can be tailored to individual needs: therefore, any participant over the age of 8, who wishes a half-day camp experience, can be accommodated, and conversely, should a 7-year-old qualify for, and desire a full-day camp, arrangements can be made at the time of registration.

Brochures for both South Shore and V.I.P. will be distributed in the near future, or by the end of March, will be available at the window outside the Cohasset Recreation Department office, in the entry way of the new town hall addition.

To register, simply complete the information on the application in the brochure of the camp you are registering with, and mail the completed and signed application along with a check of deposit, to: Town of Cohasset, Recreation Commission, 41 Highland Avenue, Cohasset, MA 02025.

Deposits are accordingly and checks must be made payable to: Town of Cohasset:

ABC (1 1/2 hr. per day camp by V.I.P.) $15 per person deposit

Half day, V.I.P. Camp (ages 6 and 7 - M & F) $25 per person deposit

South Shore Soccer-full-day-girls (ages 8-18) $40 per person deposit

South Shore Soccer-full-day-boys (ages 8-18) $40 per person deposit

Camp registration will be limited in number, hence, early registration is advised, as staff-camper ratios must be maintained as follows: South Shore Soccer Camp - 8:1, V.I.P. Soccer Camp - 10:1.

For further information, please call the Cohasset Recreation Department office at 383-6791.

Dog training classes set

The Cohasset Recreation Department will accept telephone registrations for beginner and intermediate dog training classes to be taught by Laurie Cleveland.

Classes will be held Wednesday evenings, at the GAR Hall, Scituate, beginning April 25.

Beginner classes will be from 6:30 to 7:30 p.m., and the intermediate/advanced class will be from 7:30 to 8:30 p.m., both on Wednesday evenings. The fee for the eight-week program will be $30. Checks, made payable to the Town of Cohasset, may be brought to the first class, April 25. Participating dogs should be a minimum of three months of age.

To register, please call the Cohasset Recreation Department at 383-6791. Classes are limited in size, non-residents will be accepted on a space available basis.

From the kitchen . . .

By Joan Pinkham
Mariner staff

This week's column is a hodgepodge, for though a young man's fancy turns to love in the spring, mine rivets on the mundane. All of a sudden, there's an urge to throw out things, tidy closets, get things squared away before it's too nice to stay indoors. Getting rid of clutter does pay off, for I'm finding recipes I haven't even used. Not that more aren't always welcome — we're waiting for your favorite still. Here is Polly Sweet's recipe for those who are looking forward to the day when we unveil ourselves for that first appearance on the beach or poolside. Whenever Polly and fond husband decide it's time to diet again, this is the type of dish that is both tasty and slimming. It's called

DICKIE'S FAVORITE COLE SLAW

3 cups shredded cabbage
1 teaspoon salt
3 tablespoons sugar & wine vinegar
1/4 cup light cream or yogurt

Combine all ingredients. Serve at once, or marinate in the refrigerator until needed. Yield: 1 1/2 pints. Polly writes: Preparing this yourself is cheaper, tastier and easier than buying the prepared product in the market. If you read the label, you may find benzoate of soda, tartaric and citric acids have been added.

Life was certainly easier when we didn't have so many options. Did you know there are more than 25,000 items on our supermarket shelves — two hundred of them cereals. There are all kinds of food labels designed to catch our eye and in the interest of good eating, demanding we read the label before making a decision. Life was simpler back in the 50's when cars were black, boats black or white, telephones black and houses painted white with black trim. In the spring, one's outfit was navy blue and a basic black winter dress was de rigeur. Babies were dressed in pink or blue and on a certain day in the spring, Straw Hat Day determined for the men in our lives that it was time to put aside the felt hat for the straw boater. Decisions, decisions. Just for the fun of it, read the nutritional contents on some potato chip bags. Then to insure chips that are free of preservatives, grease and salt, come home to make these

REAL POTATO CHIPS

Peel potatoes and cut in half crosswise to give you two flat surfaces. Using a potato peeler, cut paper-thin slices from the flat surface until the entire potato is sliced. Spread slices out on an oiled cookie sheet. Brush the top surface of the potatoes with oil and bake in a 450 degree oven 8 to 10 minutes until brown. Place chips in brown paper bag with 1/4 teaspoon of salt per potato and shake to season. Vary the flavor with chili powder, garlic, onion, or seasonings of your choice. Store in an airtight container to preserve freshness.

Every animal is specially designed to survive. Learn how your favorite animals are adapted to their lifestyle and to their habitat. How are you suited for survival?

FOSSIL COLLECTING

Amateur paleontologist Bruce Luscombe will help you start your own fossil collection with fossil leaves and shells, Saturday, April 7, 1:30 - 3 p.m. For children 8 years and up. Science Center members/$19. Non-members/$25. In addition to taking home fossils, you will also make and take home plaster casts of rare and unusual fossils. Examine genuine fossils of dinosaur bones, 100-foot sharks, giant snails, and tree-sized ferns. All materials and fossils will be provided. For each child registered, one parent may participate with the child free of charge.

WEDNESDAY NATURE WALK

Take a walk down memory lane, Wednesday, April 11, 9:30 a.m. - noon, with Science Center naturalist Bev Litchfield. SSNSC members/free. Non-members/$4. Walk the railroad bed from Egypt to Scituate past the old Lawson Estate. Be on the lookout for migrating birds, wildflowers and other current natural happenings. This informal walk is perfect for all ages.

CELEBRATION OF EARTH DAY

Environmental groups on the South Shore (South Shore Natural Science Center, South Shore Coalition, Massachusetts Audubon Society, New England Wildlife Center, and League of Women Voters of Hingham, Weymouth and Scituate) will cosponsor a forum on waste reduction and a day of resources for the earth, Saturday, April 14, 1 - 5 p.m., at the Science Center, Norwell. Members of cosponsoring organizations: adults $7; children $3. Non-members: adults $10; children $5. Environmental presentations and discussions, poetry by Evi Seidman, music by the Earthtunes, displays, activities for children and more. Preregister in person or by mail at the South Shore Natural Science Center.

South Shore Natural Science Center is on Jacobs Lane, Norwell, just off Route 123 and less than one mile from the Route 3 interchange. Hours: 9 a.m. - 4 p.m., Monday through Saturday; closed Sundays until further notice. All programs require prepaid registration. Please register by 2 pm, two days prior to program date unless deadline is otherwise noted.

Due to fire, all indoor exhibits, the nature library, and nature gift shop are temporarily closed. Nature trails are open. Call (617) 659-2559 or drop by the Science Center for a complete schedule of upcoming spring activities.

Supt. Hart urges Prop 2 1/2 override approval . . .

To pay for that increase, the town would have to override Proposition 2-1/2. The town is looking for a general override of about $120,000 and a portion of that money would go to the school department.

Currently, there is a larger crisis looming over the school department—and indeed the entire town. Governor Michael Dukakis has vetoed aid to cities and towns throughout the state, including $700,000 in aid to schools.

Hart said if that money is not released, it would be "a disaster," and not just for Cohasset.

"I can't imagine that happening," he said.

Spearheaded by Brookline, Dukakis' hometown, 141 communities took the governor to court to get the state aid released. The court has heard the case and a decision could be handed down any day now. Until it is, Cohasset will have to hold its breath.

Selectmen still wrestling with budget . . .

even at three percent the raise was too low.

"They might as well apply for welfare. They would do just as well," he complained.

He was not mollified by selectman Diana Kornet pointing out that the employees also get step increases.

Each percentage point represents an additional $12,000 in salary costs.

The selectmen previously granted elected officials a three percent salary increase.

The final vote was four in favor of a three percent increase with Laugelle abstaining from the vote.

The advisory committee recommended cuts in the budgets for the wire department and the fire department.

Despite forceful support for two positions in the wire department from Chairman Burt Pratt and Laugelle, the committee voted 3 to 2 to support the cut recommended by the advisory committee.

On the other hand, the selectmen voted unanimously against the advisory committee's recommendation to deny purchase of a personal computer for the fire department.

The department intends to use the computer to generate bills for ambulance service.

In other business, selectmen:

• Heard a report from Executive Secretary Greg Doyon on a jurisdictional dispute between the Army Corps of Engineers and the state Department of Environmental Protection about dredging in Cohasset Harbor.

The dispute is interfering with the town's bidding process on the project.

According to Pratt, the Army Corps is the only agency with jurisdiction over dredging in the channel. Pratt recollected that several years ago the corps and local fisherman were locked in a dispute over the need to dredge the channel.

Doyon told the selectmen he hoped to resolve the problem at a meeting to be held March 30 so the process can go forward. Doyon, the harbormaster, the Army Corp and the state division of waterways will attend the meeting.

Doyon estimates that work on the harbor project will begin in the fall if all goes well at his meeting.

• Announced that the town report is available at the library, town clerk's office and selectmen's office. Residents are asked to take only one per household.

Copies of the town warrant were sent to each household. Additional copies are available at town hall.

• Reappointed George Marlette to the registrars of voters.

Panel 'digs in' for Earth Day . . .

7:30 p.m. in Trueblood Hall at First Parish, and the Audubon Society and Massachusetts Association of Conservation Commissions on the topic of "Wetlands: why it's not just a swamp" on April 18. The time and location will be announced soon.

According to Becker, the first meeting of the committee was the night of huge snowstorm. In spite of crummy weather, eight intrepid volunteers showed up.

More auspicious weather in March saw a turnout of 24. The committee is continuing to meet. Interested people can contact Becker at 383-1971.

The major focus for the group is planning for Earth Day, also known as April 22.

Earth Day will begin with local churches incorporating an environmental theme into their services.

At 2 p.m. an ecumenical service will be held by the meetinghouse pond. Following that, participants will act out the earth day pledge and plant a tree.

Becker said she hoped 200 volunteers would turn out for a townwide litter clean-up.

Volunteers would regroup at the recycling center with their bags of recyclable and non- trash for disposal and closing ceremonies. As part of the ceremony, volunteers would be given an official Earth Day t-shirt.

Becker hopes that all residents of Cohasset will take the pledge and commit themselves to act, purchase, vote and support the passage of laws in a way that will keep Mother Nature alive and well.

Chiropractic for Health

BACK TO WORK

If office workers were fully aware of how poorly-designed chairs compromise the health of their backs, they would ask for new chairs instead of pay raises. People who must slump over desk work have more stress exerted on their discs and muscles of the lower back than with almost any other position. In fact, it is more difficult for the back muscles to maintain this unsupported, unmoving position than it is for them to experience the expansion and contraction of exercise. A properly-designed chair will provide firm lumbar (lower back) support. If the lower back muscles must contract more than fifteen percent of their maximum capacity in order to support the spine in a seated position, the chair is not doing its job. The best chairs adjust and swivel to maintain a proper relation between the back and the work at hand.

Often vocational situations, i.e., fisherman, tradesman, or other types of manual labor, create back and other discomforts. There is relief available so that one need not endure this pain. We offer the chiropractic applications that address the source of your discomfort. In addition, helpful hints will be suggested on how to alter conditions so that such problems can be minimized in the future. For a more comfortable tomorrow, call DR. DEBRA M. TRANBERG, SCITUATE HARBOR CHIROPRACTIC, 80 Front St., Scituate, 545-7388, and DR. SUSAN EMMER, CHIROPRACTIC & FAMILY WELLNESS CARE, 87 Sohier St., Cohasset, 383-1330. By appointment. Workers Comp. cases and most insurance plans accepted.

P.S. Ask the chiropractor about adding lumbar support to a work chair with a support cushion.

John Silber lectures Cohasset on education

John Silber, president of Boston University and gubernatorial candidate, speaks about education to a packed house at Cohasset High School. (Staff photo/Harry Sahl)

By Alison Cohen
Mariner staff

John Silber came to Cohasset March 28 at the invitation of the Parent School Organization to discuss education in the era of the new fiscal reality.

Silber is president of Boston University and a contender for the Democratic nomination for governor. To avoid charges of unfair campaign advantage, Silber said he would restrict his comments to education issues.

He also refrained from saying what it was he would not discuss or why, saying coyly that the invitation was extended and accepted "before I developed any temptation or inclination to do what I'm doing most of the time now. I'm not supposed to speak about what I'm doing at the present time."

Silber drew the theme of his address from a letter by John Adams to his wife, Abigail. In the letter, Adams tells his wife education makes a greater difference between man and man than nature does between man and brute.

"Education is an investment in human capital, not just an expenditure," Silber said. "We must value education as an investment."

He reminded those who were tempted to believe they had no stake in education because they have no children in the school systems that the cost of neglecting education is to risk yielding our economic strength to Japan, Korea, Taiwan and other nations that have built their economy on brain power.

He also reminded the audience that higher education is a major export industry for the United States.

Boston University alone, he said, has 2,500 foreign students. Those students do not receive scholarship dollars and pump $40 to 50 million dollars into Boston's economy.

Roy looks to add pool and docks at The Oaks

By John Magadieu
Mariner staff

Peter Roy, owner of the property and 55-room mansion at 49 Margin St. known as "The Oaks," wants to knock down a few out-buildings, put in a swimming pool and put a dock and floats in the harbor.

His attorney, Charles Humphries, and his engineers appeared Tuesday night before the conservation commission, and a roomful of interested residents, to present Roy's plans.

In addition to the pool, Roy is looking to build a 6-by 55-foot pile-supported timber pier with a 4-by-33-foot access ramp and a 100-by-8-foot floating dock with two 50-by-6-foot finger docks.

The project would take up about 3,550 cubic yards and would require dredging of about 200 linear feet along the coastline.

John DeRugeris of Coast Line Engineering, Inc. of Mattapoisett told the commission that to put in the dock would require dredging a portion of the harbor between the high-water line and the federally controlled area which comprises most of the harbor, from a barge-mounted crane.

Joseph Forns, an environmental engineer from Applied Marine Ecology Lab of Falmouth, told the commission that some of the material that would be dredged is contaminated and will have to be hauled to a special dumpsite off Boston.

The contaminants, he said, are polychlorinated biphenyls (PCBs) and some heavy metals which "exceed a certain threshold, but are not necessarily toxic."

Forns said the area in which the dock is proposed, near the yacht club, is a natural collector of pollution because of the currents in the harbor and the fine nature of the sand there.

He said it is likely the pollution is coming from out in the harbor and is not generated at the site itself.

DeRugeris said no fill would be required for the project, but the slope of the shoreline that would be dredged would be protected with a stone barrier to prevent erosion.

He said blasting would be necessary only if the construction crew encounters rock. "I don't think there is rock, but we'll find out if there is rock when we dig."

The floats would be secured, he said, by chains and concrete blocks, and would be left in the water during the winter months to break waves and prevent erosion.

Harbormaster Irving Gadow and several lobstermen present queried how Roy's boats would maneuver in and out of the new dock area and how big the boats would be.

"I wouldn't want to look up and see a 55-footer coming out of there," Gadow said.

According to commission Chairman Jeff Waal, docked boats can be no larger than 45 feet long, and Roy's proposed dock could hold four boats that size.

Humphries and the engineers didn't say how big the boats will be, but said they would maneuver along the coastline until they get past the lobster cars.

Several of the lobstermen laughed, saying the water there is too shallow for boats to get through. But DeRugeris said the town has applied to have the harbor dredged and he believes that project will be funded.

If that is the case, he figured, Roy might benefit from the town's dredging application.

Humphries said dredging along the corridor is

Task force seeks to create commission for the handicapped

By Alison Cohen
Mariner staff

If the seven members of the task force on physical disabilities get their wish, Cohasset will join the ranks of communities with a commission on the handicapped.

The selectmen placed an article on the town warrant to establish a five member commission to "coordinate and carry out programs designed to meet the problems of the handicapped in coordination with programs of the office of handicapped affairs."

The task force also is conducting a needs assessment to determine how many residents have a disability and what kinds of services are needed.

"The town needs to know how many residents have disabilities and what their needs and priorities are," said Michele Buckley, chairman of the task force.
